WITH THE POETS.

Spring.

Too well I know you, Spring, and restrain
My foolish muse from all such flatterings vain
As "mild" and "gentle"—lest I be repaid,
Even as Marsyas of old and flayed
This time by icy hail and cutting sleet.
Instead—I pray your going may be fleet,
That soon I may forget and drowse away
My weariness beneath Dear Summer's sway.

Summer.

Insufferable season of the Sun,
When will your noisy insect court take flight?
Your orchestra that rests not—day or night;
Your armies with unconquerable stings;
When will they flee—what for do they have wings?
How long before brave Autumn with a shout,
Will succor me and put them all to rout?

Autumn.

You dismal mourner, wailing by the bier
Of Summer dead, with lamentations drear,
Driving me frantic ever and anon,
With reminiscences of Summer gone.
Now mimicking her tenderest airs and tones,
Now harrowing me with horrid shrieks and groans
Were good old Jolly Winter only here,
I'd soon forget you and your evil cheer.

Winter.

Hoary imposter! with mock jovial air,
You took the green earth prisoner unaware
And pinioned the trees that moan and call
To Spring to free them from your icy thrall.
You manacled the stream who tugs in vain
To loose himself from your relentless chain.
And I—my heart is sad, my lyre is dumb,
Mild, Gentle spring—Oh! will you ever come?

—Oliver Herford, in Scribner's.

HOW ROB RAN AWAY.

It is probably a low estimate when one says nine boys out of ten make up their minds at some time during their careers to run away from home.

There are various causes that contribute to the forming of such resolutions, but whatever the cause, the boy is always firm in the belief that he is not being used right, and that the only way to better his condition is to gather up such personal property as he can conveniently carry and get out into the world, where he can make a name for himself by killing Indians, as pirates, or by becoming a great detective.

Sometimes the boy resolves to become a pirate, or highwayman, and it is not always the most vicious who form such a determination. To the mind of the average boy there seems a great deal of romance in such a career.

For many weeks Rob Norton had been planning to leave the paternal roof-tree, and it must be confessed the reading of a most improbable and impossible pirate yarn had brought about this reckless determination.

Rob had made up his mind to become a pirate!

Many a night he dreamed of treading the quarter deck and roaring out his orders to his gallant crew. Many a rich prize had he captured—in his mind. He had fancied himself performing all manner of desperate and daring deeds, and had even decided he would be known as "Red Rob, the Rover of the Deep." He thrilled all over whenever he contemplated the magnificence of the title.

Working on a farm was "dead slow"—if I may be allowed to quote Rob's own definition of it. Hoeing potatoes and chasing cows his mind revolted against.

By shrewd dickering he had been able to get hold of a cheap revolver, and this he concealed under the eaves in the open chamber, where likewise nestled the pirate yarn that had so fascinated and bewitched him.

If Rob's father had known he possessed the revolver there would have been trouble, and the weapon would have been confiscated.

It was some time after he obtained possession of the revolver before Rob really settled on the time of his departure. For two or three days he had shirked about his work, and the result was he got a good "dressing down," and was told he would get another if he did not complete a certain amount of work the following day.

"I'll never do it as long as I live!" declared Rob.

But he took good care not to utter the words aloud.

That night, when all the house was still, he gathered up a few things and tied them in a small bundle, and the revolver and the wild pirate yarn were brought from their place of concealment.

A window of his chamber opened out on the sloping roof of a shed, and, holding his shoes in his hand, the boy crept silently forth.

The night was dark, as the moon had not yet risen. But Rob knew every inch of the vicinity. He crept to the lower edge of the roof and slid down a board he had placed in a slanting position for that purpose.

"I'll never come back here again," he muttered.

Somehow, the thought did not make him feel as hilariously happy as it might. He remembered he was running away from his mother, and a hard lump formed in his throat, but he quickly choked it down.

It was beneath the dignity of a pirate to feel any regret.

He slipped over the fence into the cornfield, where he hesitated for a moment.

A light breeze was stirring, and all about him the long leaves seemed whispering mysteriously.

The sound made him shiver, and he almost wished that he was back in his comfortable bed.

After a little time he put on his shoes and started down between the long rows of corn. The shadows were deep about him, but he saw a sheen of silvery light appearing on the eastern horizon, and he knew the moon would be up within half an hour.

He had almost reached the limit of the cornfield when, of a sudden, his heart gave a great thump, for a dark form seemed to rise before him only a few steps away.

It was a human figure, there was no doubt about that, and Rob found himself motionless with—was it fright? Could it be the bold Rover of the Deep was scared?

He did not make a sound as he sank to the ground, keeping his eyes on that tall figure looming up before him. He remembered hearing his father reading in the weekly newspaper about a desperate wretch who had nearly murdered a man in a neighboring town, and it was said the perpetrator of the deed was still at large.

Had Rob suddenly come upon this desperado?

He began to tremble, for he really felt cold, despite the fact that the night was warm and pleasant. He hugged the ground, and longed to see the unknown move away.

But the stranger stood perfectly still, seeming to be listening with great intentness. Rob wondered if the man had seen him, and decided he had not.

The minutes dragged slowly away. The boy on the ground could hear his heart thumping vigorously in his bosom. Still the dark figure remained motionless.

Rob thought of creeping away, but he believed the man was waiting for him to make such a move.

Then he remembered his revolver.

It wasn't loaded!

The weapon was utterly useless as a means of defense, for he did not even have any cartridges to load it with!

By this time Rob felt really alarmed. His teeth would chatter so he feared they would betray him.

He would have given the revolver and the pirate story, too, if he had been safely back in the house.

By looking intently at the man he could see his bristling beard sticking out around his face, and the way the fellow wore his hat was enough to indicate he was a ruffian of the deepest dye.

Suddenly Bob remembered the moon would soon be up, and the thought filled him with terror, for he now understood what the wretch was waiting for.

The moonlight would reveal the hiding boy.

Nerved by his great fear, Rob crept cautiously away, expecting to be attacked at any moment. Inch by inch and foot by foot he crawled away. It seemed that he moved with the slowness of a snail, but he knew the need of caution.

He crept every bit of the way back to the fence, and, instead of climbing over, he found a way to get through. He had changed his mind about running away that night. In fact, he had postponed becoming a remorseless and red-handed pirate.

He was relieved beyond measure when he reached the shed, and he shinned up the slanting board with agility. In at the window he softly climbed, closing it behind him, and he did not feel really and truly safe until he was in bed with the clothes pulled up over his head.

The following day Bob went out into the cornfield to see if he could find the tracks of the man he had seen. He was walking down between the rows when he suddenly came face to face with—a scarecrow!

He stopped and looked the thing over, feeling very foolish and insignificant, for he had fixed it up himself when the corn was first planted. It even wore an old hat of his upon its head, and the bristling whiskers he had seen the previous night proved to be whisps of straw.

With one blow of his fist Bob knocked it over.

But he was cured.

He sold the revolver, burned the pirate yarn, and remained at home.

Advising the Bachelors.

"Why do you not tell the bachelors how to choose wives?" asked one of them, after reading the professor's advice to the girls on the question of choosing husbands. This query is easily answered. In the first place, to label the girls who would make the best wives would be to give away state secrets. One may laugh at the follies and foibles of the sex, when, by pointing out the same, good may be done; but it would be unpardonable to give the plain black facts about the sisterhood of such a grave character as that requested. A man contemplating marriage should be able to settle the question for himself. One who cannot distinguish the difference between the false and the true should remain a bachelor. Boys should not marry.

"Oh the perfidy of mankind," sighed the little Miss Dresden. "Here Mr. Timbidy has sent me a valentine with a verse beginning, 'Oh, the earth has no treasures too costly for thee,' and when I took it to the store to see what it cost they told me it was twenty cents last season, but marked down to eleven."

[illegible] dull seasons. Others follow the course of a successful merchant, who says: "When trade falls below its normal activity I either increase my advertising or else [illegible] enliven it with special offers. In dull times as in busy, there is patronage to be gained by advertising, and I want it most when business is slack. A small gain then is as grateful as a larger one when trade is brisk." Everybody reads the Times.

Sunday Sail Spoiled.

On Sunday last Messrs. [illegible] East Peterborough's efficient license inspector, accompanied by Mr. Fred Morgan, went out for a canoe ride at McCracken's Landing. They were dressed in their best Sunday clothes, new from the tailor's with fresh laundried shirts and [illegible] boots.

They were no sooner out on the lake, than the threatened storm broke upon them. The rain came down in sheets and in less time than it takes to tell it, the canoe was half filled with water, and the two drenched to the skin. The unhappy canoemen returned to the hotel, and hung their clothes up to dry while they retired to enjoy the luxury of a siesta. Later on two men with abbreviated clothes might have been seen around the hotel. The clothes are now a couple of sizes too small, having shrunk in the wetting, and will be sold cheap.

LOCAL NEWS-LETTERS.

KEENE.

The majority of farmers in this vicinity have completed harvesting and report the crops first class.

The hum of threshing machines can be heard in every direction, and farmers are rejoicing over the yield as well as the quality of the grain.

The cow nuisance is on the increase in this village. I consider it a disgrace to the village, the filthy condition of our streets. We trust that our township fathers will give us a law which will compel owners of cows to keep them off the streets.

The Sons of Rest have a membership of twelve in our village. They have a summer resort on the corner adjoining the Keene cemetery. The president has given notice that a collection will be taken up to aid in securing more comfortable seats.

A very unusual sight presented itself to a number of young people who were wending their way to their respective homes on Saturday night last. A small [illegible] attracted their attention and on gazing in the direction of the explosion they beheld a young couple fondly embracing each other on a verandah. We would advise this spooney couple to embrace in a more private place in the future.

We are glad to learn that Mr. Archie Wier, who has been confined to his bed for the past two weeks, through sickness, is now so far recovered as to be able to walk around.

HIAWATHA.

Messrs. E. [illegible] and Jas. Pevcock, Louis and Walter Death, friends of Mr. and Mrs. Windsor, from Toronto, were the guests of the Mission House, Sunday and Monday last.

Mr. Stonehouse took the service Sabbath morning and evening.

The Congested Cities.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—If there is one thing more than another troubling the progressive it is the congestion in our large cities. Not only is this felt in the old world, but it is also felt in the new, and as years pass it will become a more important problem here. Why should this be so in a country where land is cheap, excellent in quality, and almost unlimited in quantity? The answer can only be found by attributing it to the gregarious tendencies of the human race. The individual knows that there are certain advantages to be gained by living together in communities or cities which cannot be found by living living isolated. It is the innate tendency to form communities for personal safety, gain and pleasure. This tendency is good to a certain point, beyond that it is dangerous. So long as within a town city or community there is enough work to keep every soul in that town, city or community working at a fair remuneration there is nothing wrong. But if the number of workers increase to such an extent that there is not enough to keep each one happily and regularly employed there is something wrong.

The only remedy is to remove the [illegible] to where their energies will be of more value to the state and themselves. This is much more difficult to say than to do. The glitter of city life is much more attractive to the majority of young men and women than the seemingly duller and soberer life of the country. I have used the word seemingly because who ever gets beneath the surface of city life finds it a poor enough existence. Of course there are exceptions but take it all in, all I think I am right in so judging it. The young man or woman from the country when visiting the city sees the streets thronged with people dressed in the latest fashion, sees every street with some form of amusement in it, to while away a leisure hour. Not only so, but they are told of such and such an one having risen to affluence and importance who might have lived in obscurity had he remained in the country. But they see nothing of the indifference of satiety and the hundreds, many thousands who have sunk in the struggle. They only hear the music, they do not hear the moan.

There is only one remedy for this; it is to teach the love of a simpler life. Simplicity of life is the foundation of happiness and as soon as a people learn that truth there will be peace and plenty. But young people will not listen and they must be taught by experience and very soon the city brings them to their senses.

The only remedy at present is to make the return easier. Let every opportunity be given for the overwrought city laborer to return to the land and the [illegible] weak muscled city clerk, to find health and strength in the country. It is for the legislature to open wide the door to them and make them feel their reclamation for those outside of the city.

"[illegible] Boys."

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I take the liberty of sending the following to the Times. The incident occurred not 100 miles from Peterborough and is well worth repeating:—

Teacher—"When you look around and see all the fine houses and stores and lots, do you ever think who owns them now? Your fathers own them, do they not?"

Boys (in chorus)—"Yes, ma'am."

Teacher—"Where will your fathers be 50 years from now?"

Boys (in one shout)—"Dead!"

Teacher—"That's right. And who will run all the property then?"

Boys (in ungrammatical concert—"Us boys!"

Teacher—"Right. Now, tell me, did you ever in going along the street notice the drunkards lounging around the saloon doors waiting for some one to treat them?"

Boys, (heartily)—"Yes, ma'am, lots of them."

Teacher—"Well, where will they be 50 years from now?"

Boys—"Dead."

Teacher—"And who will be the drunkards then?"

Boys (in [illegible] chorus)—"Us boys."

Then there was a dead calm.

"Ads" Help Any Business.

There are very few, if any, enterprises that cannot be benefited by judicious newspaper advertising. The president of a Western telephone company says: "I thought my business had nothing to gain by advertising, but I was challenged by a newspaper man to try it for a year, he to write the 'ads.' At the end of that time we found the increase of subscribers was unprecedented, and a large proportion of the patrons said the persistent calling of attention to the advantages of the telephone caused them to have [illegible] had the 'ads' experience." Everybody reads the Times.

A Sad Mistake.

A good story is told of a local limb of the law, who advertised to do conveyancing. A few days ago he was approached by a well-dressed woman, who said that she wanted some baggage hauled to the station. He told her he thought she must be mistaken that she probably wanted [illegible]. "No, I don't," she replied, and, pointing to his sign, she said, "You do conveyancing."

Our legal friend at first thought she was attempting to dazzle him by a brilliant pun, but her confusion when he laughed and took her remark in that light, convinced him she had been in earnest.

A WHOLESALE ADVERTISER.

Knowing that the city newspapers were read in towns which were not reached daily by his traveling men, a Chicago wholesale merchant decided to advertise everything new in his line and everything which he could offer at special prices by reason of [illegible] an over stock. These announcements, "ads," attracted dealers who would not otherwise have come to his establishment, and almost invariably they became heavy purchasers. As a result of this resort to publicity the advertiser's business was largely increased. Everybody reads the Times.

DESCRIPTION OF PLANT.

The Capital Power Company, Limited, has been organized to purchase from Messrs. R. & W. Conroy all their property situated at Deschenes, on the Ottawa River, in the Province of Quebec, on Lots 15 and 16, in the First Range of the Township of Hull, south of the right of way of the Pontiac Pacific Railway

Messrs. Conroy also undertake to complete the new power house already nearly built, the power generated in which is rented to the E. B. Eddy Co., Ltd., and to turn the whole over to the Company as a going concern for the sum of Four Hundred Thousand Dollars, of which Two Hundred Thousand is to be paid in cash, balance in fully paid up ordinary shares of the Company on Oct. 1st, 1900. The whole to be to the satisfaction of the Company's expert.

Until the before mentioned date, the vendors have agreed to allow interest at 6 p. c. upon any moneys paid by the Company to them, on account of said purchase, thereby ensuring the earning power of all moneys subscribed and paid from the date of payment.

THE PLANT CONSISTS OF:

Power plant leased to the Hull Electric Company, which consists of two 52-inch Turbines, equal to 332 horse power.
Large power house, the power in which is leased to the E. B. Eddy Co., Ltd.
10 61-inch Turbines, equal to 2,280 horse power.
2 Generators, each 800 K. W., equal to 2,133 horse power.
2 Exciter Generators, 30 K. W.
Grist Mill with power leased to the Lake Deschenes Milling Co.
1 66-inch Turbine and 1 33-inch Turbine, equal to 175 horse power.
Spare power flume not leased, but which can at a small cost be made to develop about 500 horse power.

WATER POWER BONDS AND PREFERENCE STOCK AS AN INVESTMENT.

It is impossible to find conditions which secure for invested capital greater safety than is exhibited by water power propositions when such are situated upon such a reliable stream as the Ottawa River and when there is a constant demand in the immediate neighborhood for the power to be generated. That Ottawa requires the power is evidenced by the fact that all the power generated by the works of the Company has already been leased for terms of years with a certainty that at the end of the terms the prices paid will be increased.

It may be fairly accepted that the transmission of power electrically has passed all experimental stages, as is witnessed by the successful operations of such power plants as the Niagara Falls Power Co., the Hudson River Power and Transmission Co., Chambly Power Company and others.

The Five per cent. Bonds of the Niagara Power Co.—$9,000,000 in amount—are selling at 109 whilst the Bonds of the Hudson River Power Co. and of the Chambly Power Co are selling at substantial premiums.

Bonds, and even Preference Stock, such as are now offered may fairly be considered as equal if not superior to any investment as to safety whilst yielding a considerably better return than Bank Stocks and other investments which carry with them onerous responsibilities.

It is intended to get the Shares and Bonds of this Company listed upon the Montreal Stock Exchange.

PROVISIONAL DIRECTORS.

E. B. Eddy, Esq., President E. B. Eddy Co., Ltd., Hull, Match and Paper Manufacturer; Louis Simpson, Vice-President Northrop Loom Co., Ltd., Cotton Manufacturer; J. M. Shanly, Esq., Great Northern Railway Co., Civil Engineer.

The Preference Shareholders will elect two directors.

Applications for Shares and payments may be made at the company's bankers, the Ontario Bank, at Ottawa.

ROBERTS FACES BOERS IN THEIR STRONGHOLD

British Will Probably Pause in Their Advance to Reconnoitre and Prepare for Attack.

GEN. RUNDLE CAPTURES SEVEN HUNDRED CATTLE

He Has an Engagement With the Boers South of the Vaal and Inflicts Some Loss—Sir John Gordon Sprigg Says the War will Last a Long Time Yet.

London, Aug. 30.—Lord Roberts cables the War Office, under date Belfast, August 29.

"General Rundle reports that he made a reconnaissance in the Brandwater basin on August 28, and suffered some casualties. One Boer was killed and 17 were captured. He also secured 700 head of cattle."

THE END NOT NEAR.

Cape Town, Aug. 29.—Sir John Gordon Sprigg, Primier of Cape Colony, said in Parliament yesterday that he felt unable to predict a cessation of hostilities between England and the Transvaal for some time to come. He feared that the guerilla warfare would drag along for a considerable period, since the conditions in South Africa are wholly unlike those of Europe.

TO KEEP THE CANADIANS.

Ottawa, Aug. 30.—Lord Roberts calls the attention of the War Office to the fact that the year's term of service of the first Canadian contingent will expire in October. He suggests, as it would be impossible for the regiment to return to Canada within that time, that arrangements should be made for their futher service for a period of two or three months. In forwarding this despatch, Mr. Chamberlain points out that the men who enlisted in Britain are to serve until the war is ended. Complete arrangements will be made without doubt, to comply with Lord Roberts' suggestion, from which it appears that he contemplates an early end to the war, but suggests the extension to cover the time required in returning home.

THE GOVERNMENT EMBARRASSED

London, Aug. 30.—A curious scene was witnessed at the Colonial Office buildings yesterday afternoon. Last week some hundreds of destitute Russians and other foreign refugees from Johannesburg arrived at the London docks. The British Government had no legal power to prevent their landing, but they were anxious to get rid of them, and sent down agents to the steamer offering to every one of these foreigners a free passage to their native country and one sovereign to assist them on the voyage. Most of the strangers declined the offer, and insisted on staying in London.

Yesterday a number of them presented themselves at the Colonial Office, apparently desiring to urge a claim for compensation for being deprived of their means of livelihood in the Transvaal. They were a talkative, gesticulating lot, very dirty and shabby, but quite peaceable and by no means in the depths of poverty. The Colonial Office officials turned them over to the War Office, who passed them on to their respective Consuls, who will certainly find a good deal of difficulty in inducing them to return to the very places they seem most anxious to avoid, that is to say, their countries of origin.

TOLD THEM TO MAKE PEACE.

London, Aug. 30.—"Dr. Leyds' interview with Emperor Nicholas," says a despatch to The London Daily Mail from St. Petersburg, "lasted barely five minutes. The Czar said he was sorry that he could do nothing for the Transvaal except to urge it to make peace, as he hated all war."

BRESCI'S TERRIBLE DOOM.

Anarchist Must Pass a Year in Absolute Silence Before He is Set at Work in the Prison.

New York, Aug. 30.—A cablegram from Milan says the life sentence passed upon Bresci, the assassin of King Humbert, means one year of solitary confinement in a secret cell six feet long by three wide, dark, with a plank for a bed and bread and water once every 24 hours as a diet. Absolute silence is enforced rigorously. If he breaks the rule he is placed in a straight jacket, in iron, or in the "straight bed."

The year must be spent also without work, books, writing materials or tobacco. Few prisoners complete the year of solitude; they either go mad or die. Should Bresci live and retain his reason he will placed at work in prison.

HIS FRIENDS ARE HAPPY.

New York, Aug. 30.—The anarchist friends of Gaetano Bresci, assassin of King Humbert of Italy, was happy last night when they heard that his sentence was imprisonment for life. They had feared that he would be promptly executed by order of young King Victor. Already they are talking over schemes to free Bresci.

ON THE VERGE OF WAR.

Bulgarian Diplomatic Agent Has Been Recalled From Roumania and Hostilities May Begin Shortly.

London, Aug. 30.—As a result of the friction between Roumania and Bulgaria over the latter's delay in complying with the demand of the former for the suppression of the Macedonian revolutionary committee, the Bulgarian diplomatic agent at Bucharest, Dr. D. Theodoroff, has been recalled. According to the Vienna correspondent of the Daily Express the Wiener Abendblatt asserts that Prince Ferdinand, of Bulgaria, has threatened to abdicate unless the quarrel with Roumania is amicably settled.

DEATH OF MR. THOS. BRADBURN

One of Peterborough's Best Known Citizens Passes Away.

Although not entirely unexpected, the readers of the Times will regret to learn of the death of Mr. Thomas Bradburn, which sad event occurred yesterday morning, after a lingering illness. The deceased gentleman, as our readers know, had been in poor health for some time. Last autumn he, in company with Mrs. Bradburn and Mr. and Mrs. Huston, (his son-in-law and daughter), spent the winter in the South, visiting New Orleans, and then proceeding to California, returning by C.P.R. from British Columbia. The trip home bore heavily on Mr. Bradburn, and he seemed weak and feeble after his return. For a time he seemed to recover, but it was not permanent. He gradually became weaker, until death came to his relief as above.

Mr. Bradburn was one of Peterborough's pioneer merchants. He was known throughout the country as a shrewd man of business, and was strictly honest in all his dealings. He grew up with the town, and did much in his quiet, unassuming way, to make Peterborough what it is to-day. He was in the 81st year of his age. He was the third son son of the late Thos. Bradburn, who came to Canada from Cootehill, Cavan, Ireland, staying first for a short time at Montreal, and then taking up land in the township of Cavan, where deceased was born. He grew up there and lived the rugged life of the pioneers, knowing what it was as a boy to carry grain on his back to Port Hope to be ground and bearing his somewhat lightened burden back to the farm. When a young man he removed to Bowmanville, where he was clerk in the store of the Hon. John Simpson, afterwards president of the Ontario Bank.

Coming to Peterborough from Bowmanville in 1842, Mr. Bradburn entered the store of Mr. Ottray Morrow. Mr. Morrow died about 1848, and the business was continued by Messrs. Bradburn and Bell, and afterwards by Mr. Bradburn alone. As he became more interested in real estate Mr. Bradburn withdrew from active work in this business, which was carried on under the name of Bradburn & Mason, and afterwards sold out to Fair & VanEvery about fifteen years ago. Mr. Bradburn, while active in real estate since that time, has not been engaged in mercantile business.

The deceased was twice married, first about 1856 to Jane Morrow, widow of Mr. Ottray Morrow. Their family consisted of two sons, Herbert, who died at an early age, and T. E. Bradburn, one of our best known and most esteemed citizens. His second wife was Miss Linda Helm, who survives him, and their children are W. H. Bradburn, Mrs. Fred Hewson, Rupert Bradburn and Miss Mabel Bradburn.

The funeral will be held to-morrow at three o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery.

THE TWO VICTORIAS.

Col. Sam Hughes' Chances in North Riding.

HE IS SAID TO BE SAFE

While Mr. George McHugh, M.P., in the South, is Not So Certain—So Estimates The Toronto Evening Telegram.

The Toronto Telegram, in discussing the political situation in the two Victorias, says: A Liberal hero in the Midland district is George McHugh, M.P., for South Victoria. He played the part of Daniel in the Lion's den because as an Irish Catholic Liberal he contested the riding in 1896, against a Methodist Tory. McHugh opposed the remedial bill, which Sir Charles Tupper hoped would entice the Roman Catholic vote. Dr. Vrooman, a Protestant, stuck by his leader, and tried to convince the electors his policy was one of justice. For years South Victoria had been represented at Ottawa by Conservatives of the stripe of the late Adam Hudspeth and Charles Fairbairn. It was not a hive by any means; yet a Grit never saw victory in the riding. South Victoria is a stronghold of Orangemen. Emily and Verulam abound with a strong Protestant element; while the only Catholic parishes of any account are Lindsay and Downeyville, neither of them large enough in numbers to return a co-religionist.

When George McHugh got the nomination he did not have to introduce himself to the electorate. He was known in every home as McHugh, the auctioneer," and he was popular because he was honorable and genial. He was a Grit first because he was born of Grit parents, and, secondly, because he firmly believed in the principles of the party. McHugh fought a great battle, assisted by a little band of Grit speakers and canvassers, and won. To-day his friends declare he is much stronger than in 1896, because he has been a representative who has been on the alert in keeping his riding before the departments at Ottawa. He has secured many votes for public works, and his appointments have been popular.

Dr. Vrooman will again oppose McHugh. The doctor until a few years ago resided at Little Britain, in the thrifty township of Mariposa; but he is now practising in this town. However, when he ran in 1896, the Tories thought that they had a candidate who would poll the full Protestant Tory vote, which, with the Roman Catholic vote, would have elected him. But they built their hopes on a false foundation. The Roman Catholics voted for their fellow-churchman; the Tory Methodists of Mariposa, a strong and intellectual body in the township, knifed the doctor and voted anti-remedial, which meant a ballot for McHugh. Just the same occurred in Emily and Verulam.

To-day, however, the atmosphere is comparatively clear of religious prejudice, and Dr. Vrooman ought to win, as he is no doubt a strong man, and will gather into the ballot box ninety votes that were recorded against him in that last campaign because of his position on the school question. The strongest factor against him at present is led by Charles Fairbairn, ex-M.P., of Verulam. The latter controls a big vote in a Tory stronghold, and unless the party squares itself with the former member, Vrooman must battle against big odds. Fairbairn voted in the Commons for the Remedial bill. It was most unwise, for it meant the end of his political career. He stuck by the party; but the party in his constituency threw him overboard when the convention came around, and that is his grievance, and it is said it has not been healed in the past four years.

[illegible] is not a factor in the riding; in fact, as a vote making scheme it seems to have served its day in the Midland district. McHugh, in order to win, must rely on his personal popularity, and his [illegible] the riding's [illegible], which is being daily [illegible]. [illegible] the pending candidacy of Hon. R. W. Scott as the Irish-Catholic representative in the cabinet, is doing him no harm. Grits, however, acknowledge Vrooman is a much stronger man to-day than in 1896, and the Tories are confident that he will redeem South Victoria.

Sam Hughes may be ridiculed in the press as an egotist of the top rank, but in North Victoria he is fully as popular if not more so, than in the past. The colonel is a genial soul amongst his constituents, and he is the war hero of the country. They admire his bravado, and his brave deeds, as related by himself, are repeated again and again around the firesides of the riding. [illegible] in Haliburton he will poll almost a solid vote, though he has a former Tory, J. H. Delamere, of the Minden Echo, silently campaigning against him, but Delamere's strength now only amounts to about fifty votes all told, though he polled 3[illegible] votes in 1896.

While the South African campaign may injure Sam Hughes throughout the country — it has saved him in South Victoria. Previous to the war his chances were slim. His vote on the Yukon bill injured him in his own party, but the disaffected ones are back in the fold of the man they call a hero. Even his vote on this particular bill will get him the Mackenzie vote, which is strong in the vicinity of Kirkfield, where William Mackenzie, the railway magnate, rules a small domain. Mackenzie will not fail to remember Hughes on election day.

Altogether fate is good to North Victoria's member. It has given ex-M. P. P., of Woodville, Grits themselves say he is "discredited," and they can say nothing else. The doctor represented West Victoria in the Legislature. It ought to be Liberal because it was created into a safe constituency by Sir Oliver Mowatt. Four hundred majority was a common record, still Dr. McKay lost the riding to Samuel J. Fox in 1898, and Tories cannot imagine his election in a constituency that has been politically nursed by Sam Hughes until now he may safely term it "his pocket borough." Dr. McKay's political death occurred in 1898, and from all your correspondent can gather, his resurrection will not take place in the coming elections. Against any other Liberal Sam Hughes would have had a hard battle, even though he carried himself along the concession lines as "Lieut.-Col. Sam Hughes, the hero of many engagements in South Africa." Sam Hughes' record in public life is easily attacked because it has many a weak spot. but Dr. McKay is not the man to rank before the electors as the colonel's superior.

Amongst the Tory electors of North Victoria only one paper is taken, and that is the Watchman Warder, the personal organ of the member. All the "heroic deeds of the Canadian officer leading her Majesty's forces in Cape Colony" appeared in the largest type, but the criticisms of Sam's military career know not the interior of many North Victoria homes, so Sam stands to lose very few votes on this score. But ought to gain a few.

And as to the Hutton correspondence, the average elector cares as much for General Hutton, or any other English officer, as he does for Wi Hi Ching of innermost China, probably a little less. Sam Hughes' fame and Dr. McKay's weakness will save him from political extinction in North Victoria.

More Election Prospects.

A letter to the Times received yesterday from Mr. H. H. Smith, Winnipeg, formerly mayor of Peterborough, and for years the Conservative Organizer, states that he will visit Ontario in a short time. This lends additional color to the prospects of an immediate general election. Mr. Smith is a veteran organizer, and no doubt will be again in harness in the interests of his party.

MILITARY PROMENADE MADE THROUGH PALACE

Minister Conger Says That the Place Was Afterwards Closed and Guarded.

THE EUROPEAN POWERS ARE IN A QUANDARY

They Do Not Know In What Direction to Turn, Because There is no One With Whom They can Discuss Peace—Only Solution is to Seize the Person of the Empress.

MILITARY PROMENADE.

Washington, Aug. 30.—The State Department makes public the following cablegram from Minister Conger, received this morning through the United States Consul at Chefoo—

"From Chefoo, received Aug. 30, [illegible] a.m.

"Secretary of State, Washington—

"Thirtieth following despatch, dated yesterday—'More Russian, French, German and Italian troops arriving. Imperial palace will be entered August 28. Military promenade of all nations made through it. Afterward closed and guarded. Prince Ching is expected in a few days.

The State Department officials say Mr. Fowler's prefactory statement that Mr. Conger's despatch is dated "yesterday" (August 29) probably refers to the Taku date line.

RUSSIA PROPOSES NEGOTIATION.

London, Aug 30.—Diplomatic circles in London appear to be satisfied that Russia has either directly sent circular notes to the powers proposing the opening of peace negotiations or has reached an agreement with the United States in regard to the basis on which the Government at Washington shall take initiative action on the ground that the United States has no entanglements, like Manchuria, calculated to arouse the suspicions of the powers. Nothing definite, however, seems to be known at the Legations in London except Russia's great anxiety to end the prevailing conditions as speedily as possible, though the opinion is expressed that Russia believes that as a preliminary to the negotiations the allied forces should evacuate Pekin and retire with their resident Ministers, Europeans and native Christians to Tien Tsin, whence they can better treat with the most responsible Chinaman available.

It is pointed out that though some Governments are inclined to recognize Li Hung Chang's powers there is a feeling in some quarters that it would be more satisfactory to all concerned and would carry some weight with the Chinese themselves could some representative Prince belong to the reigning dynasty be found with whom to arrange terms. If, however, Li Hung Chang can secure any kind of credentials from the Dowager Empress it seems to be the opinion that his authority will not be too closely scrutinized, except possibly by Germany, especially if Li Hung Chang can demonstrate that he has the support of the powerful Southern Viceroys.

AGAINST AGGRESSION.

New York, Aug. 30.—A cablegram to the Tribune from its London correspondent says a good deal of interest has been created by the announcement of an official organ in Berlin that no aggressive or expansionist policy in China would be regarded favorably by the German Government.

This is taken in some quarters as a sign that the Kaiser has abandoned his militant designs in the far east outlined in his recent speeches, but the explanation is to be found in the attitude of almost all influential German newspapers outside the official ring. A Parliamentary crisis and a refusal of supplies are openly threatened if the administration persists in ambitious projects opposed to the sobriety, common sense, and business interests of the German people.

Czar Now Wants Peace.

Russia and the United States Said to Have Agreed on a Basis and May Leave Pekin.—McKinley as the Intermediary.

London, Aug. 30.—Diplomatic circles in London appear to be satisfied that Russia has either directly sent circular notes to the powers proposing the opening of peace negotiations, or has reached an agreement with the United States in regard to the basis on which the Government at Washington shall take initiative action on the ground that the United States has no entanglements, like Manchuria, calculated to arouse the suspicions of the powers.

Nothing definite, however, seems to be known at the Legations in London except Russia's great anxiety to end the prevailing conditions as speedily as possible, though the opinion is expressed that Russia believes that as a preliminary to the negotiations the allied forces should evacuate Pekin and retire with their resident Ministers, Europeans and native Christains, to Tien Tsin, whence they can better treat with the most responsible Chinaman available.

It is pointed out, that though some Governments are inclined to recognize Li Hung Chang's powers there is a feeling in some quarters that it would be more satisfactory to all concerned and would carry more weight with the Chinese themselves could some representative Prince belonging to the reigning dynasty be found with whom to arrange terms. If, however, Li Hung Chang can secure any kind of credentials from the Dowager Empress it seems to be the opinion that his authority will not be too closely scrutinized, except, possibly, by Germany, especially if Li Hung Chang can demonstrate that he has the support of the powerful southern Viceroys.

WHY NEGOTIATIONS ARE NOT IN ORDER.

The expected answer of the powers has been given to Li Hung Chang's suggestion that peace negotiations begin. The time has not yet come to talk about peace, and the final authority to ratify any agreement is in flight. The Dowager Empress and the Emperor have left Pekin and no one knows where they are. Civilized governments are not in the habit of discussing terms with nomadic capitals or with peripatetic empresses. When the official head of the Chinese empire decides where she will remain for a while one of the conditions will exist that must precede any negotiations.

Then, too, it is important to discover just what has been happening in the capital for the past month or two. United States Minister Conger asserts that the legations were attacked by imperial troops. Whether these troops were acting under orders from headquarters or whether they were mutinying does not appear. If they were mutineers and the Empress had no control over her army, and has fled, leaving no official representative, then it is difficult to admit that there is any government to negotiate with. The abdication of authority to rule would seem to involve the abdication of the authority to negotiate treaties. How long the powers will maintain the fiction that the legations were assailed by rioters and mutineers we do not know, but it will be long enough for them to learn the facts. And until those facts are known Li Hung Chang will appeal in vain for conferences looking to a settlement of the trouble. That it is a fiction is now pretty generally admitted. The way the Chinese government broke down was by the disregard of all the obligations of international hospitality. Before we are through with this business we shall doubtless attempt to prove to China that she cannot escape from her obligation by pleading the baby act.

He objects to the transparent sleeve, and recently told his congregation that he had been surprised and shocked at the sight of women and girls, many of whom he knew personally, wearing light dress material in public as thin as a veil. The custom, he said, was no doubt comfortable during the excessive heat, but it was a fashion bordering on indecency and should not be worn by any woman.

THE REMEDY FAILED.

How a Helpful Wife Did Not Cure Her Husband of the Tobacco Habit.

"It will only be necessary for you to drop about half a teaspoonful of the mixture into this cup of coffee each morning," the circular said, "and the taste for tobacco will gradually depart from him. He may not cease the use of tobacco immediately, but within a week he will begin to abhor tobacco if the mixture is given to him faithfully every morning."

And so the young wife sent her little $3 on and got a flagon of the tobacco cure.

"Pretty bum coffee this morning," he remarked dryly the first time she dropped the half-teaspoonful of the mixture into the cup.

"It's the same as we've been using right along," she replied, craftily.

Now, lo and behold! he was a pretty smooth proposition himself, and he had, unbeknownst to her, seen the package holding the flagon of agin tobacco mixture when it was delivered.

So after dinner that evening he produced a large bulky package of fine-cut tobacco from his pocket and took therefrom a plenteous chew of tobacco. It was the first chew he had ever taken in her presence, and she marvelled thereat, but she determined to persist with the "treatment."

"Dead rank chickory again this morning, isn't it?" he inquired at breakfast the next morning.

"I'm sure it tastes the same to me," she replied.

That evening after dinner he produced a short, black clay pipe and a package of a new kind of tobacco that was as black as the ground work of a Jolly Roger.

"Thought I'd bring this old dudeen up from the office," he explained cheerfully. "It's as sweet as a nut."

Whereupon he filled the house with the aroma of punk that was strong enough to break rock.

"This grocery person who gets all of my wages is certainly doing us on the coffee game," he remarked when he tasted his cup next morning.

"Really," she said, gazing innocently at the ten-cent bunch of asters in the middle of the table, "I can't detect any difference."

"And yet there are low foreheads who don't believe that all women are actresses," said he to himself on the way to his office that morning.

That evening he brought home a box of auction stogies, and after he had smoked one of them after dinner all of the people in the neighboring flats stuffed cotton in the hall door keyholes and closed the hall transoms.

"I must persist though," thought his baffled little wife, gloomily.

"Coffee tastes like stewed gunnysack again this morning," he remarked at the next breakfast. She felt a bit sorry for him, but she was determined to use up that flagon of "agin-tobacco" if she had to chloroform him and pour it down his throat.

That evening, however, her resolution deserted her. After dinner, for the first time to her knowledge, he pulled out a package of cigarettes, lit one and began to smoke it.

She went upstairs, poured out the remaining portion of her $3 worth of agin-tobacco and carefully hid the bottle.

"Coffee's all right this morning," said he at breakfast the next day.

"Yes?" she inquired, absently.

When he had finished his dinner that evening he lighted one of his usual brand of good cigars.

"Men are mysterious to me," she thought, regarding him out of the tail of her eye.

"Women only think they're foxy," he thought, blowing smoke rings into the Swiss curtains.—Bangor Commercial.

A Competent Witness.

United States District Judge Williams, now holding court in Topeka tells a funny story. Years ago he was a district judge in Arkansas. At a certain term of court a murder trial came before him, and the most important witness for the prosecution was a colored boy only ten years old. The lawyers for the defence set out to show that the boy was too young to understand the nature of an oath, and therefore was not competent as a witness.

"Boy," said one of them severely, "do you know what would happen if you swore to a lie?"

"Yes, sah. Mammy would lick me."

"Would anything else happen?"

"Deed dey would, case de devil would git me."

At this point Judge Williams leaned over his desk and said with pretended sternness: "Don't you know, boy that I would get you, too?"

"Yes, sah. Dat's what I jus' said."—Kansas City Journal.

Two Points of View.

A farmer drifted into a hardware store at Mulhall and was asked by the manager. "Don't you want to buy a bicycle to ride around your farm on? They're cheap now. Can give you one for $35."

"I'd sooner put $35 into a cow," said the farmer.

"But think," said the manager, "how foolish you would look riding around town on a cow."

"Oh, I don't know" said the farmer; "no more foolish, perhaps, than I would milking a bicycle."

Out of the Ordinary.

The two old friends, as has been narrated before met again, after years of separation.

"By the way, Gagster," said Throggins, "do you remember that snub-nosed, cross-eyed little Tilbury girl, with a face on her that would ditch an express train? She used to live somewhere in your neighborhood, I think."

"Oh, yes, I remember her perfectly," replied Gagster.

"What ever became of her?"

"I am sorry to disappoint you, Throggins"—here is where the variation comes in—"but I have not the slightest idea. I didn't marry her."

Wonderfully Made.

Sister—When you called to see George was he wearing those slippers I made him for Christmas?

Brother—No. He was using one of them as a laundry bag.

DR PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION

"I had been a sufferer for many years from [illegible] with all its symptoms and complications," writes Mrs. O. N. Fisher, 1807 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. "I was constantly going to see a physician or purchasing medicine. In the spring of 1897 my husband induced me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After taking one bottle and following your advice I was so encouraged that I took five more bottles, and then stopped for several weeks as I felt so much better, but still I was not completely cured. I commenced taking it again and felt that I was improving faster than at first. I am not now cross and irritable, and I have a good color in my face; have also gained about ten pounds in weight and one thousand pounds of comfort, for I am a new woman once more and your advice and your 'Favorite Prescription' is the cause of it, coupled with the 'Pleasant Pellets' which are not to be dispensed with. I took eight bottles of the 'Prescription' the last time, making fourteen in all, and will not take any more unless you so advise, for I do not see as I need it."

A HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY.

Mrs. South Orange Develops Unsuspected Ability as Mistress of Finance.

"I have discovered a way of saving money," said Mrs. South Orange the other day, with pride. "It doesn't save much at once, but it is the little savings, made continually, that tell."

Mr. South Orange looked interested. Mrs. Orange as a financier, and especially as an economiser, was wholly new, and the prospect of having to pay for her economies in some unsuspected way was almost as exciting as a roulette game. So he said with careful pronunciation: "Well?"

"Well," said Mrs. South Orange, drawing a long breath. "You know I keep an account in town here." Mr. Orange nodded and sighed to himself. His wife went on: "The other day I heard from a little tailor in the city—I mean New York, of course—that he had had to pay ten cents to get a two-dollar check cashed that I had sent him."

"Yes," said Mr. South Orange, "country checks have to pay that now——"

"But we don't live in the country!" cried Mrs. South Orange, indignantly. "You told me only the other day that this was a city now."

"Yes, it is a city," said South Orange. "But 'country checks' is merely the name for checks coming from out of town. For some months past the city people presenting such checks have had to pay ten cents for getting them cashed. You see——"

"So they don't get all that we think they're going to get?" demanded Mrs. South Orange, "and I am banking on that. Banking is right, isn't it? I thought so. Well, I have decided hereafter, so long as they don't get all that we think they're going to get to just take ten cents off the checks that I send them. You see, that tailor wanted $2 and only got $1.90. I had to pay ten cents that didn't do him any good. So henceforth I shall only pay them what they're going to get. Thus, you see, I'll save ten cents, and they'll get all they would have got if I had paid 'em all they ought to have got."

She stopped breathless, and Mr. South Orange looked up without a word. Finally he asked, gently: "Have you begun on this yet?"

"Only thought of it last night, while I was waiting for you to come back from your bowling club."

"You must [illegible] putting it into action until I have laid the plan before——No! You'd better see the President of the bank yourself, and take his advice. Good-by; I must run!"

South Orange thought he had rid himself of the job of explaining matters, but he hadn't. Mrs. Orange returned to the plan at dinner.

"The President said he did not approve of my plan," she said, sadly. "He said it was all right in theory, but would militate against banking customs, and that I had hardly the legal or moral right to lead an attack against those customs alone, as it would take up much of my time and might prove labor in vain. He said that his advice, as he was President of a bank, might seem prejudiced, and said that your advice was more likely to be [illegible] than his. So he referred me back to you."

South Orange's jaw dropped.

"Look here," he began; "I'll get you Mill's book on political economy tomorrow—the dismal science some one calls it. Meantime, it's full moon—let's go for a drive."

WHY HE QUIT JOURNALISM.

Only a Tenor, But He Saw It Late and Resigned Immediately.

When I was editing the Bogtown Bugle," remarked the Colonel, "I had just finished a leader one day on 'Prosperity with Us Once More,' and sent it to the compositor, when in came a brisk stranger.

"'Editor in?' said he.

"'That's what he is,' I replied. 'What can he do for you?'

"'Well,' said the stranger, I am introducing a new cash register. The Lightning Cash Register we call it. And I thought I might sell your——'

"'Oh, you thought so, did you?' I interrupted, laughing ironically. 'Cash registers, eh? Why, certainly! There's nothing this establishment is short of just now but cash registers! You've come to the right shop to sell cash registers! Especially lightning ones!'

"I thought I was making my meaning plain enough, but that stranger merely smiled and said:

"'Yes, I see. But I thought I might sell your——'

"'Say!' I exclaimed, interrupting him again and talking pretty loud, 'what's the matter with you anyhow? If you've got a cash register that'll measure buckwheat, cord wood and potatoes, and weigh butter, skin coons and count eggs, fetch it in and we'll strike up a dicker! That's the sort o' cash this shop handles!'

"The stranger looked at me as if he was getting tired, and he put a little more vim in his talk.

"'But seriously, now,' said he. 'What I came in to say is that I am introducing a new lightning cash register, and that I thought I might sell your——'

"'Now, you git!' I shouted, pointing to the door. 'A man that doesn't know more than to try to sell cash registers to a country printing office ought to be——'

"'Say, you ding blasted idiot, you!' the stranger yelled back. 'I tell you I'm introducing a new lightning cash register, and I've been trying to tell you that I thought I might sell your fellow citizens the machine more rapidly if I put a ten dollar ad. in your paper telling them all about it, but I see that a man is only wasting his time talking to a pig headed chump like you! Good day.'

"The cash register man went out, banging the door. I sat down and pondered a while and yanked my hair. Then I called to the foreman:

"'Tom,' said I, 'is that leader of mine on "Prosperity with Us Once More" in type?'

"'Yes,' replied the foreman.

"'Kill it!' said I.

"I replaced it with one on 'An Unprecedentedly Gloomy Outlook,' and quit journalism that week."—Ed. Mott.

No girl can afford, either for her own surest happiness or for the comfort of mind of him whom she marries, to wed a young man during the formative period of his life, which is between twenty and twenty-five. And she who withholds from a young man her consent to marriage until he has reached the first year of the beginning of wisdom is a mighty sensible little body, and acts in a manner which she will never have cause to regret as long as God gives her and her husband life.—Edward Bok, in the Ladies' Home Journal.

SMILES.

"Have you noticed, papa, how often mamma says, 'And so on, and so on'?" "Yes, my boy; but it never applies to buttons."—The Australasian.

"My uncle grows strawberries so big that six will fill a quart box." "I'd be ashamed to have an uncle who would use that kind of quart boxes."—Chicago Record.

Sunday School Teacher—Now, Willie Green, you may tell me what you understand by "the future state." Willie Green—Please, ma'am, it's a territory.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Child—And how do they know it's a man in the moon, mamma, dear? Mother—Because it's always out at night, darling!—Tit-Bits.

"Your son," said the school teacher, "is very backward in his studies." "That's funny," mused the father. "At home, in conversation with me, he seems to know it all."—Philadelphia North American.

"I wish I knew," said Mr. Tucker, "how I caught this cold."

"Didn't you get a bad cold when you changed your underclothes last spring, paw?" asked Tommy.

"Yes, I believe I did."

"This cold's in your head, ain't it, paw?"

"Yes."

"I guess you got it by changing your mind."

Feminine Inconsistency.

"It's such a nuisance having to remove one's hat," remarked a pretty girl in a marvellous piece of millinery at the theatre recently.

"But everybody does it nowadays, and, after all, it's only common courtesy," the youth replied.

"Yes, of course; still it's most inconvenient. But I've the greatest scheme in the world," she added enthusiastically. "Instead of hatpins, that are always falling out of one's hat during the performance and rolling off under the seats, I have a new patent arrangement—two cute little shell combs that are attached to the hat and fasten in the hair. They are simply fine."

"And they do away with those barbarous long pins?" the man interrupted, with a shudder.

The girl laughed. "What a horror you men have of them! I'll show you how this thing works. Not now—I never take off my hat till just before the curtain goes up." The conversation then ran in other channels, and as the music ceased and the lights were lowered an impatient voice was heard to exclaim:

"Oh, dear, I can't get my hat off."

"Can I help you?" her escort asked.

"Oh, dear, one of those nasty little combs has got caught in my hair. If it were only light——"

"Possibly I can disentangle it."

"Ouch! You're pulling my hair."

A painfully distinct voice from the rear: "Will you ask that lady to remove her hat?"

"Oh, I can't. It won't come off."

Another voice with equal distinctness: "I'd speak to the usher."

"What shall I do? What shall I do? I can't budge it!" The girl was growing tearful. "[illegible] back of me?"

"[illegible]"

"This is too awful! What a beastly arrangement this is!"

Several minutes elapsed, during which twenty square feet of stage are rendered invisible to part of the audience, who evince impatience. Finally, a triumphant voice exclaimed:

"There, it's off at last! But what has my hair done with it? Oh, I know I'm a fright. What a hateful arrangement! The man who invented it ought to be drawn and quartered."

The youth smiled, but refrained from comment.

Eating and Sleeping.
Food supplies the substance for repairing the wastes of the body, and gives strength. Sleep affords the opportunity for these repairs to be made. Both are necessary to health. If you can't eat and sleep, take Hood's Sarsaparilla. It creates a good appetite and tones the digestive organs, and it gives the sweet, restful sleep of childhood. Be sure to get Hood's.

Biliousness is cured by Hood's Pills. 25 cents.

A girls' Social, under the auspices of the young ladies of St. John's Church, has been arranged for the evening of Tuesday, September 11.

The Ledger Monthly for September.

The first fall number of the Ledger Monthly has on its cover a trim figure of a pretty girl at the seaside, with a bouquet of yellow flowers on her bosom, and a lovely background of sea and sky finishing a picture full of beauty. The frontispiece of this number is a picture of a young lady in a colonial room, dressed in a costume of colonial days, watching one of the old time clocks with a wistful expression. The title of the picture is "Will He Never Come?" An interesting article in this number of the Ledger Monthly is entitled "A Workpeople's Paradise," which is an account by Rene Bache of an interesting experiment which has been successfully made by a manufacturing establishment in Dayton, Ohio, for the benefit of two thousand workpeople. "Bee-Culture for Women," by F. G. Herman, is a capital illustrated article telling how women can succeed in this growing industry. "The Prettiest Charity in the Metropolis," by Walden Fawcett, is fully illustrated article on the floating and seaside hospitals of the St. John's Guild. The pictures which accompany this article show the great work which is being done for poor children of cities. "Types of Famous Orchids," by Geo. R. Knapp, and the "Story of the flowers," by Rene Bache, are two charmingly illustrated, seasonable articles on flower beauties. "The Street of the Nations, Paris Exposition," by Mary H. Smith, is an illustrated article dealing with this feature of the great World's Fair at Paris. "Characteristic Views of Chinese Life," is a page of photographic views of the Chinese at home, accompained by an article by Annetta Halliday-Antona, entitled "Odd Things in 'Boxer' Land." A Gentleman of Rare Good Luck," by Latta Griswold, illustrated by Warren B. Davis, is a brilliant short story. There is fiction in this number by Edith Helen Twells, J. L. Harbour, May Halsey Miller and others. Mrs. Gesine Lemcke treats of preserving fruit and vegetables. The September number of the Ledger Monthly contains all the usual departments and much more of general interest, and it is in fact a ten cent magazine, sold for five cents. Subscription price to the Ledger Monthly is fifty cents a year. Robert Bonner's Sons, Publishers, Ledger Building, New York City, N. Y.

—A special meeting of Court St. Peter, C.O.F., No. 223, was held last night to make arrangements for attending the funeral of the late Bro. Edward Welsh.

—The steel girders are being placed in Mr. Leary's new livery barn, on Water street. When completed, Mr. Leary will have one of the finest livery barns in Canada.

—Mr. Fitzgerald, buyer for Hodgson Bros., Montreal, shipped 430 boxes of cheese from Lindsay on Wednesday, and paid out over $3,500. The 1,037 boxes sold at last Monday's board were worth over $12,000.

The latter remarked—"So Monday next is Labor day?" to which the budding youth rejoined, "Naw, Tuesday is Labor day." How do you make that out?" asked the citizen. "'Cos school begins," was the sorrowful reply.

—Lindsay Post—Foreman John Brooks, of the public works department, arrived home yesterday from Squaw River, ten miles below Bobcaygeon, where he has been constructing a dam. Death of Mr. Ed. Welsh.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. Ed. Welsh, who passed away yesterday, after a long attack of typhoid fever. It was thought some days ago that he would pull through, but complications set in, and the end came as above. The deceased was a well known merchant, and was very popular, especially with the young men of the town, who will deeply regret his demise. He leaves a wife and two young children, who have the sympathy of the community in their irreparable loss. The funeral will be conducted by the Catholic Order of Foresters of which Mr. Welsh was an honored member.

A Pleasant Party.

A very pleasant dance took place on the pivillion at Chemong Park on Wednesday evening. Three bus loads of young people drove out, there being about 20 couples. The large pivillion was well lighted and decorated, and a delightful evening was spent. The Misses Hurley supplied the music. The party was chaperoned by Mrs. J. H. McClellan.

THE TIMES LETTER BOX

Letters from the People on Interesting Topics.

[NOTE.—The Times does not hold itself in any way responsible for the opinions expressed by its correspondents.—Ed. Times.]

Don't Believe in Equality

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I was at one of our prominent churches last Sunday, and heard the minister, say that "all men are created equal," a statement which should not go unanswered.

Equality in anything does not exist, never has existed, and never will exist. It seems to be contrary to a law of nature. Look through all forms of life, whether animal or vegetable, and you will find no two things created equal. No two trees are alike, no two animals are alike, and therefore not equal.

The mental quality of men is variable. The prize fighter who, by reason of unusual strength and skill, is able to conquer all opponents is proud of his prowess and admired for his physical inequality, not for his equality.

Our admiration does not go out so much toward those whom we believe to be on a plane of equality with us, as toward those of superior mental attainments or unusual physical strength.

The sooner men's mind can be disabused of the fiction that "all men are created equal," the better it will be for the world at large.

Precisely why nature favors at all times inequality in everything is a question it is not necessary to discuss in this connection, but that it is so every man and woman of observation knows.

The Peoples' Duty.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The time is rapidly approaching when new men will be required to fill positions at the Council board.

A vast majority of the people who pay the taxes are in favor of a radical change in the management of our streets and bridges.

It is their duty, therefore, to look around in time, so that there will be candidates pledged to reform.

Thanking you Mr. Editor, for your valuable space,

I am yours, &c.,
DISGUSTED RATEPAYER.
Peterborough, Aug. 28

Four Millions Profit.

A few shrewd Canadians once made four millions of dollars clear profit out of building a small railway, of which most Canadians have never heard. The railway in question was the "Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan Railway" which in 1887 received grants from the Dominion Government. The land granted to this Company was sold for over $3,500,000 and from the sale of bonds and the the cash subsides the Company got about $1,000,000 more making a total of $4,500,000. The total cost of the road is estimated to have been not more than $2,500,000 leaving a net profit to the promoters of the road of four millions. The C. P. R. supplied the terminals and the rolling stock and leased the road without a rental, thus taking the railway off the hands of the original owners.

This is one of the many railway stories which Mr. R. L. Richardson, M.P., is now telling the Canadian Magazine in a series of four articles. Mr. Richardson believes in Government ownership of railways and is writing these articles in order to lay his views before the people of Canada.

A Gem.

Photogravures, mounted on a heart shaped velvet pad, with easel, of all the Generals serving in the South African war—the nicest novelty out for 20 cents each. Also a large colored picture 18 x 24 for ten cents. Times Bookstore.

Half Fare on Labor Day.

Fares on the steamers of the Trent Valley Navigation Co., "Esturion" and "Manita," will be reduced to half rates for Labor Day. These steamers leave Lindsay for Bobcaygeon and Fenelon Falls and Coboconk.

The Times at Summer Resorts.

The Morning Times is sent to summer resorts and residences, addressed to individuals at thirty cents a month. Persons visiting the lakes and other places may have the Times addressed to them for as short a period as one week.

Annual Rifle Matches.

The 57th Regiment, including both bands, have been ordered to assemble at the Drill Shed on Monday, from whence they will drive in busses to the rifle ranges for target practice. All men are to carry rifles, and every man is expected to be present.

Change of Business.

Having purchased the business heretofore carried on by A. H. Melville & Co., hatters and furriers, George street, I beg to solicit the patronage of the public.

I will keep on hand a first-class stock of hats, caps, and furs, and will endeavor by careful attention to business, and keeping none but the best goods, and selling at the closest prices, to merit a liberal patronage.

J. H. MELVILLE.

In connection with the above, we ask our friends to continue their patronage to our successor, feeling sure that he will give them entire satisfaction.

All accounts due the firm of A. H. Melville & Co., will have to be paid forthwith, in order to wind up the business.

A. H. Melville & Co.

Bell Pianos

At Toronto Fair.

The attention of all music lovers and piano buyers is directed to the exhibit of Bell Pianos and Organs in the Musical Pavilion at Toronto Exhibition. The pianos shown are not specially prepared for exhibition, but are samples taken from the company's regular stock, and for touch, tone, and finish, cannot be duplicated anywhere. We invite a critical inspection and comparison of our instruments, each one being guaranteed for ten years ensuring to the purchaser a lasting satisfaction.

We have also obtained the sole right for Canada for the manufacture of the wonderful "Apollo," a new and wonderful automatic piano-playing instrument, which will be shown for the first time at the Company's exhibit The "Apollo" is built on the experience of earlier inventions. It is in no sense a mechanical instrument. It can be attached to any piano, and the player can at all times control the volume and expression, and renders the most difficult pieces of music in a truly masterly way. Whoever owns a piano should have an "Apollo."

At the city warerooms, 70 King Street West, can be seen an exact duplicate of the stock shown at the exhibition, and a great array of second-hand pianos and organs of nearly every make, which we are clearing out at low prices, the terms being made to suit the purchaser. If you are thinking of purchasing an instrument, don't fail to inspect this stock at Bell Piano Warerooms, 70 King Street West, TORONTO.

DESCRIPTION OF PLANT.

The Capital Power Company, Limited, has been organized to purchase from Messrs. R. & W. Conroy all their property situated at Deschenes, on the Ottawa River, in the Province of Quebec, on Lots 15 and 16, in the First Range of the Township of Hull, south of the right of way of the Pontiac Pacific Railway

Messrs. Conroy also undertake to complete the new power house already nearly built, the power generated in which is rented to the E. B. Eddy Co., Ltd., and to turn the whole over to the Company as a going concern for the sum of Four Hundred Thousand Dollars, of which Two Hundred Thousand is to be paid in cash, balance in fully paid up ordinary shares of the Company on Oct. 1st, 1900. The whole to be to the satisfaction of the Company's expert.

Until the before mentioned date, the vendors have agreed to allow interest at 6 p. c. upon any moneys paid by the Company to them, on account of said purchase, thereby ensuring the earning power of all moneys subscribed and paid from the date of payment.

THE PLANT CONSISTS OF:

Power plant leased to the Hull Electric Company, which consists of two 52-inch Turbines, equal to 332 horse power.
Large power house, the power in which is leased to the E. B. Eddy Co., Ltd.
10 61-inch Turbines, equal to 2,280 horse power.
2 Generators, each 800 K. W., equal to 2,133 horse power.
2 Exciter Generators 30 K. W.
Grist Mill with power leased to the Lake Deschenes Milling Co.
1 66-inch Turbine and 1 33-inch Turbine, equal to 175 horse power.
Spare power flume not leased, but which can at a small cost be made to develop about 500 horse power.

WATER POWER BONDS AND PREFERENCE STOCK AS AN INVESTMENT.

It is impossible to find conditions which secure for invested capital greater safety than is exhibited by water power propositions when such are situated upon such a reliable stream as the Ottawa River and when there is a constant demand in the immediate neighborhood for the power to be generated. That Ottawa requires the power is evidenced by the fact that all the power generated by the works of the Company has already been leased for terms of years with a certainty that at the end of the terms the prices paid will be increased.

It may be fairly accepted that the transmission of power electrically has passed all experimental stages, as is witnessed by the successful operations of such power plants as the Niagara Falls Power Co., the Hudson River Power and Transmission Co., Chambly Power Company and others.

The Five per cent. Bonds of the Niagara Power Co.—$4,000,000 in amount—are selling at 109 whilst the Bonds of the Hudson River Power Co. and of the Chambly Power Co. are selling at substantial premiums.

Bonds, and even Preference Stock, such as are now offered may fairly be considered as equal if not superior to any investment as to safety, whilst yielding a considerably better return than Bank Stocks and other investments which carry with them onerous responsibilities.

It is intended to get the Shares and Bonds of this Company listed upon the Montreal Stock Exchange.

PROVISIONAL DIRECTORS.

E. B. Eddy, Esq., President E. B. Eddy Co., Ltd., Hull, Match and Paper Manufactures; Louis Simpson, Vice-President Northrop Loom Co., Ltd., Cotton Manufacturer; J. M. Shanly, Esq., Great Northern Railway Co., Civil Engineer.

The Preference Shareholders will elect two directors.

Applications for Shares and payments may be made at the company's bankers, the Ontario Bank, at Ottawa.

SIRATHCONA HORSE RELEASED PRISONERS

The Boers Did Not Wish for Canadians to Occupy Nooitgedacht but Abandoned Prisoners.

BOERS TAKE 52 PRISONERS AT KLERKSDORP.

Buller was Attacking the Boers at Helvetia on Wednesday—Result not KnoWn—Watervalboven and Watervalonder Both Occupied by the British.

London, Aug. 31.—Lord Roberts under date of Belfast, August 29, reports to the War Office as follows—

"Buller telegraphs from Helevita that only a few of the enemy are there, and that this morning French's and Pole-Carew's forces will move on their flank. The advance of Dundonald's mounted troops on their front caused them to abandon a very strong position. This country thus cleared, our troops moved eastward. The South African Light Horse, after little opposition entered Waterval Boven and drove the remnant of the enemy through the town.

"French's column reached Doornhoek, overlooking Watervalonder, with slight opposition. Dundonald with Strathcona's Horse, is further, near Nooit Gedacht. We have occupied Waterval Boven and Watervalonder.

Buller reports that Nooit Gedacht is apparently deserted, except by British prisoners, who are passing in a continuous stream up the line towards Watervalonder. No Boers are visible. The natives report that Kruger and all the commandoes left yesterday for Pilgrim's Rest.

"French reports the railway intact as far as Watervalonder except for a small bridge near the station, which has been destroyed."

BRITISH PRISONERS RELEASED.

Lorenzo Marquez, Aug 30.—The British prisoners at Nooitegedacht have been released by the Boers, and are marching to join Lord Roberts' forces at Waterval Boven, near Machadodorp.

President Kruger and his chief officials are at Nelspruit.

TOOK FIFTY-TWO PRISONERS.

London, Aug. 30.—The casualty lists just published show that the Boers captured 52 prisoners at Klerksdorp on July 25, principally of the Kimberley Mounted corps. No previous mention of fighting in this neighborhood had been made, though it is known that Klerksdorp was evacuated about a fortnight ago.

Possibly the men were snapped up by a force detached by DaWet from Reitzburg, on the other side of the Vaal, where he was camped on the day of the mishap.

The lists also show that there was a fight at Reitfontein, probably near Pretoria, last Thursday, in which 14 of the Seaforth Highlanders were captured.

PROMOTION FOR MAHON.

London, Aug. 30.—The Gazette announces the promotion of Major and Brevet-Colonel Bryan T. Mahon, D.S.O., from 8th Hussars, to be lieutenant-colonel 21st Lancers, vice the Earl of Airlie, killed in action. Dated August 23, 1900. Col. Mahon was the leader of the column which relieved Mafeking.

THEY MURDERED A PRISONER.

Krugersdorp, Aug. 30.—A patrol of five, while scouting, were fired upon from a supposed neutral farm, the inhabitants of which had taken the oath. One was wounded and captured by the Boers, who then murdered him, beating his brains out and riddling his body with bullets.

A punitive force of 300 men, with one gun, under Col. Carr, surprised the farm, took two prisoners, and burned the house bringing all the women and children here. Arms and ammunition were found concealed on the farm. It is hoped that an example will be made of the men taken.

THE COMPLAINTS OF GERMANS.

Berlin, Aug. 30.—The delegation of German subjects who recently arrived here from the Transvaal to lodge a complaint with the German Foreign Office regarding the treatment of Germans there by the British, has already been received by the Foreign Office. After investigating the grounds of the complaint the Foreign Office will bring the matter to the attention of Great Britain.

CYCLONE AT MAFEKING.

Mafeking, Aug. 30.—A cyclone that visited Mafeking last evening did more damage than the seven months' bombardment. It blew down or unroofed numerous buildings and levelled the military camp hospital, causing much suffering among the sick and wounded. One person was killed and two were injured and there were many narrow escapes.

A GALLANT OFFICER.

Lieutenant Young, of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, Promoted.

Dr. Young, of Water street, received a letter yesterday from his brother, Lieut. V. Young, who is in South Africa, and who was wounded at Olipantsfontain on the 8th of July, and invalided to Capetown, where he afterwards received a staff appointment.

Lieut. Young was the last officer of B Squadron, Lieut.-Col. Greenwood having been appointed to the staff, and Lieutenants Bush and Borden, (the latter the son of the Minister of Militia), having both been killed.

On June 27th Lieut. Young with 14 Mounted Canadians captured the Boer guns and took 25 prisoners, being mentioned in the despatches by Lord Roberts for his heroic conduct on that occasion.

A STRANGE TRIAL.

An Old Miner in the Yukon Condemned to be Hanged

Victoria, Aug. 30.—The steamer Amur, which arrived from the north yesterday morning, brought word that Alexander King, the aged murderer of Herbert Davenport, was condemned to be hanged on October 2nd.

The old man, who is a miner, is 54 years of age, and has been in the Yukon since 1867. He has not heard from his relatives in 35 years, though he believes he has brothers and sisters in Ohio.

The defendant, says the Dawson News, in reporting the trial, which took place on August 2nd, dramatically recited before the court the story of the tragedy. When the witnesses were on the stand the old man—a typical and picturesque miner—would lean forward, eagerly drinking in their testimony, his grey eyes gleaming nervously and suspiciously, and smiling and shaking his head now and then in dissent.

Placed on the stand himself, King gave a somewhat living picture demonstration of how Davenport acted when shot, and took occasion to call the other witnesses perjurers because of what he claimed was defects in the details of their testimony.

In his evidence King maintained that he had been displeased with the manner in which the scow had been handled by Davenport, the latter having endangered King's life.

Justice Craig turned deadly pale on delivering the death sentence, and fell backwards into his chair after uttering it.

The condemned old man, leaning forward, calmly said—"It would be just the same, judge, if you order them to take me out in the yard to-morrow at 10 o'clock, and shoot me between the eyes, for prison life does not suit me."

IT WOULDN'T WORK.

Tried to Shunt Col. Sam Hughes at Rifle League.

Ottawa, Aug. 31.—At the meeting of the Canadian Military Rifle League, an effort was made to turn Col. Sam Hughes down, but it wouldn't work.

When the election of officers came up the name of Lieut.-Col. Sam Hughes, 1st vice-president for last year, was ignored. Capt. Davidson proposed that Lieut.-Col. Tucker be 1st vice-president, and this carried. Then the chairman called attention to "Fighting Sam," and spoke of his assistance to and interest in rifle shoots.

Lieut.-Col. Bruce spoke warmly in favour of Col. Hughes, declaring that riflemen were indebted to him, and whatever might be said against him, he should not be condemned unheard.

Capt. Davidson said he had no wish to condemn Col. Hughes, and, indeed had not thought of him, but as his name had been brought up, he (the speaker) felt as a member of the militia that he could not support him.

The meeting, however, took a different view, and four vice-presidents were elected, including Sam Hughes.

GLASGOW DECLARED INFECTED

Local Board of Health Issues its Announcement of the Plague.

Washington, Aug. 31.—The following cablegram was to-day received by the Marine Hospital Service.

Glasgow, Aug. 31.—Local Board of Health declares Glasgow infected with plague. Eleven cases and one suspicious case in the hospital to-day.

(Signed) THOMAS.

Assistant Surgeon A. R. Thomas of the United States Marine Hospital Service, who is now in Glasgow, will investigate the bubonic plague outbreak and take the necessary precautions in regard to outward bound vessels.

There has been no increase in the number of cases of the plague in this city, and no undue alarm as to the spread of the disease is felt. The authorities are acting with promptitude and are confident of confining the outbreak within the present scope.

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs. Light to moderate winds, fine and warm to-day.

Rain has fallen again over Manitoba and the greater portion of the Territories attended by heavy local thunderstorms, elsewhere in Canada the weather has been generally fine. Fairer weather is indicated for the Northwest and continued fine in the remaining portion of Canada.

Mr. Bradburn's Funeral.

The funeral of the late Mr. Bradburn will take place at three p.m. to-day, and will doubtless be largely attended. As a mark of respect the merchants will close their store doors and lower the blinds on their windows while the procession is passing.

AT VERY SHORT NOTICE.

The Government Will Call On Federal Elections.

When They Make up Their Minds Not More Than Four Weeks Will Intervene Until Election Day.

"When are the elections going to be held?" is a question heard on every side, and it is a query which has not yet received a definite or satisfactory answer.

A gentleman from Ottawa, who is in a position to know what he is talking about, said to the Times in reference to this subject, "You may rest assured that when the elections are held it will be on short notice. The government has decided that there shall be no longer period between the announcement of the date and the date itself. In fact, I feel certain you will find that no announcement will be made until the writs are issued. A lengthy election contest upsets the country terribly and is very bad for business. It has been the experience of both parties that short campaigns are the most satisfactory and for this reason I am pretty well assured in my own mind, and it seems to be the the consensus of opinion in political circles at Ottawa, that no announcement of the elections will be made until the writs are issued."

The fact seems to be the Government have not yet fixed on any definite date. They have concluded however, that when they do decide upon the election date not more than three or four weeks will elapse between the decision and election day.

THE TWO PETERBOROUGHS

How The Leading Liberal Organ Regard the Political Outlook

The Toronto Globe says.— Mr. John Lang, the sitting member in East Peterborough, was born in the county and has twice carried the seat, in 1887 and again in 1896. At the general election of 1891 he did not offer himself as a candidate. The riding has been held by the Conservatives in five Parliaments and by the Liberals in three. There is little doubt that the majority of 615 which Mr. Lang rolled up against his opponent, who had represented the riding in the previous Parliament, will be an insurmountable obstacle in the way of his opponent, as he has lost none of his old-time popularity. There is also a strong feeling in the riding that the Government which settled the school question and inaugurated the perferential tariff should be given another lease of power.

Mr. Lang is likely to be renominated by the Liberals, and if so his re-election is almost certainty. He has been a consistent advocate of Liberal principles in Parliament and no fault can be found with his record. Dr. Ford, Norwood; Dr. Couch, Warsaw, and E. A. Peck, Ashburnham, are spoken of as probable nominees at the Conservative convention.

Mr. James Kendry, who represents West Peterborough in the Conservative interest, is a woollen manufacturer at Peterborough, and is a hard man to beat. His extensive business interests give him great influence in the riding, and enabled him to score a majority of 819 in the last election in a three-cornered fight. Although since 1878 the riding has been Conservative by majorities varying from 16 to 819, the Liberals have not lost heart. There are several strong men on the Liberal side, who, poplar opinion says, can carry the riding, and it is quite possible one of them will face Mr. Kendry when nominations are called for.

SAVED DOG, NOT HIS WIEE.

Woman and Beast Were Both in Water When Man Jumped in.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 31.—Thousands of pleasure-seekers at Gull lake Sunday were startled just as a lake steamer was approaching the shore to see a woman plunge over the side of the boat into the water. In the excitement they did not notice that a small dog, which had been carried in her arms, had leaped over the boat approached the land, and the woman in her excitement had followed.

A man, who afterward turned out to be her husband, shouted. "Save the dog!" and dived in, bringing the canine up from the tow which threatened to suck it under the boat. The woman was floundering around in her clothes, and came near drowning, but was rescued by those on shore. There was great indignation at the man's apparent indifference to his wife, but she seemed to think it was all right. The man said that his strange act was dictated by sentiment. They had lost a little child who had fond of the dog, and both his wife and himself thought of the animal as if it were something human. He thought his wife was not in danger, as the water was not very deep, and so he resolved to save the dog from getting under the steamer's wheels. He gave his name as Jamison, and said his home was in Chicago.

KILLS HERSELE WITH POISON.

Mrs Kern, a WidoW Dressed Herself in a Bridal Garb Before She Died

New York, Aug. 31.—Mrs. Pauline Kern, a widow, thirty-two years old, committed suicide yesterday by taking acid in her home at 2,066 Third Avenue. She was to have been married Sunday to Henry Harris. She wore her bridal gown when she took the poison.

Mrs. Kern had been ill for some days, and was under a physician's care. It is thought her mind was affected by her illness. She devoted the greater part of the morning to trying on her bridal costume. About noon her sister heard her groaning, and on investigation found her lying unconscious on the floor in a front room. Two physicians were hastily summoned and treated the woman, but she died in an hour.

BLINDFOLDED SHE SOUGHT DEATH.

Despondent Woman She Stepped from a Roof at Her Daughter Home.

New York, Aug. 31. Mrs. Ida Gluck, sixty years old, of 58 Chrystie Street, tied a handkerchief over her eyes yesterday morning while she was visiting her daughter, Mrs. Isaac Giffen, at 303 Third Street, and then stepped off the roof of the house, a six-story tenement, falling on the walk. The woman was afflicted with melancholia.

Mrs. Gluck lived with her two sons and two daughters, where she had a good home and was well taken care of, but her mind became unsettled. The woman appeared to be well when she paid a visit to her daughter in Third Street Sunday. It was 5 o'clock yesterday morning when she stole out of her room and went to the roof. There she was seen by Emil Held, a printer, living at No. 300, almost opposite Mrs. Gluck walked to the edge of the roof and stepped off. Many of her bones were broken and she was dead in an instant after reaching the sidewalk.

F. S. DUNBAR SUICIDES.

A Former Peterborough Man Kill Himself in Chicago.

Word has been received here of the death in Chicago of F. S. Dunbar, a former resident of Peterborough, who was engaged in the insurance business some 15 years ago. On Wednesday last he walked into the sitting-room of the Salvation Army Hotel shortly after 2 o'clock, and fell to the floor in convulsions. Before a police ambulance arrived Dunbar was dead, having taken poison. Dunbar arrived in Chicago several months ago, and has stopped at different periods at the Salvation Army hotel on Clark street. He has been compelled to accept employment far below his station, and it is thought he became despondent and decided to end his life.

POWERS FAVOR THE WITHDRAWAL

Russia's Proposal is Well Received and Earl Li May Negotiate.

BUT TAKU WILL BE HELD

Prospects are That the Allies Will Soon Leave the Chinese Capital, in Order to Avoid Further Complications.

London, Aug. 31.—The Associated Press has official authority for announcing that the American-Russian proposal in favor of the withdrawal of the allied forces from Pekin, with the view of facilitating negotiations for the conclusion of peace, has not only met with considerable favor at European Chancelleries, but is almost certain to be adopted.

In the meanwhile the question of employing Li Hung Chang as an intermediary is meeting with more and more favor and will in all probability be settled affirmatively as soon as Li Hung Chang is able to obtain the necessary authority.

The recent statement that the admirals of the powers in Chinese waters contemplated detaining Li Hung Chang at Taku is devoid of foundation. Li Hung Chang will remain at Shanghai endeavoring to the utmost to open communications with the colleagues of the Chinese Government.

There is growing conviction in official circles here that the withdrawal of the allies from Pekin is the only practicable procedure under the existing circumstances, and it is believed the retention of the allied forces in Pekin is liable to rise further complication of a dangerous character and unnecessarily irritate the Chinese populace.

There is no doubt in official circles, however, that it will be necessary for the powers to maintain their hold of the Taku forts and certain other strategical points until satisfactory terms and arranged and ample guarantees given by China for her future good behaviour.

THE POWERS ARE STILL UNDECIDED

In Regard to the Russo-American Proposal--Germany's Action will Probably Decide it.

JAPANESE TROOPS ORDERED TO LEAVE AMOY.

A Chinese Viceroy Invites 2,000 Boxers to a Feast and Treacherously Slaughters Them—Inmates of the Imperial Palace in Pekin Surrender.

London, Sept. 1, 4.30 a.m. In the absence of further news from China the papers are again filled with discussions of the Russo-American proposal, say, so far as may be gathered from the representations of opinion in the various European capitols are likely to subject the unity of the allies to an exceedingly severe and dangerous test. In Germany especially, the proposals are diametrically opposed to Emperor William's policy, so that they have produced something like consternation. As the Daily News editorially remarks, Count Von Waldersee was assuredly not sent to assist in restoring the Empress Dowager. It is recognized on all sides that Germany's decision is the pivot of the matter. Emperor William embinded by despatching Count Von Waldersee to have the master hand in the Chinese settlement. Russia has taken the wind out of that officer's sails, and he is now posing as the friend and protector of China. The morning papers express the greatest superstition of the intentions of Russia. The Times editorially fairly represents the opinion of all. The Times says—Advantages of Russia's policy are not manifest and it is very doubtful whether it will recommend itself to powers like England and Germany, that have large commercial interests in the establishment of a stable and progressive government to replace the stationary clique which has impeded all progress and development in China in recent years. Negotiations with Li Hung Chang would be a condonation of Government crimes and the throwing away of all the advantages gained by the occupation of Pekin. Much mischief has already been done by the hesitation to enter the Forbidden City. To withdraw from Pekin would be inpreted as proving not only that the allies are cowards, but that they are hopelessly divided. It may be that some of the powers will withdraw, but that does not imply that others are bound to leave Pekin and to acquiesce in the restoration of a government guilty of a gross international crime.

Veinna specials show that the Russo-American proposals have caused extreme annoyance there, it is believed that Austria Hungary will follow in Germany's steps, but it is recognised in both Berlin and Veinna that the withdrawal of Russia and the United States from Pekin would leave the other powers little of nothing but follow, and China lead.

London, The Standard says diplomacy sometimes takes strange bedfellows. It is curious to find the mighty autocracy of the old world and the republic of the new generation coaxing the other powers along the paths of peace, nothing could be better than the spirit of these documents and it is interesting to find two such powers so anxious to determine the controversy in an unselfish spirit.

The Daily Mail says Russia has forced United States against the better judgement of the latter at the same time the United States Government has adduced such valid reasons that the Russian policy is a bad one that it will hardly be expected that other powers will concor.

The Daily News which complains that the Government does not communicate a particle of information respecting the negotiations calls Mr. Adees despatch very able, and asks what the British Government is doing in the matter.

The Daily Chronicle thinks the question of the open door will prove the rife within the lute which now sound such sweet harmony between the United States and Russia. Russia "Says the Daily Chronical has heard of the open door before from a greater naval power that the United States and has replied by simply slamming the door in that powers face, the paper then proceeds to comment upon the difficulty of understanding Russians real motions and the dangers of following Russian leaders.

Taku, Aug. 28 via Shanghai, Aug. 30.—An intercepted letter written by the Viceroy at Pao Ting Fu, who commanded at Tien Tsin during the fighting there, complains that the Boxers are over-running the country southwest of Tien Tsin, particularly the cities on the Grand canal, despising the officials who at first countenanced them, and looting and killing the enemies of their organization and fighting the Imperial troops. The gates of Pao Ting Fu are kept closed and the people inside are suffering, the Boxers practically besieging the place.

The Viceroy reports that the Taotai of the city of Tsung Chow, on the canal invited two thousand Boxers to a feast. While the Boxers were eating and their weapons were stacked the Imperial soldiers by his orders fell upon them and slaughtered all of them.

PALACE INMATES SURRENDER

Yokohama, Aug. 31.—General Yamaguchi, commanding the Japanese troops in China, reports that a meeting of foreign Ministers and commanders has decided to maintain guards at the gates of the Imperial city, entrusting the south gates to the Americans, while the Japanese held three others. Eunich guards have left the palace and have surrounded themselves. The inmates of the palace have been assured that they will be treated with every consideration. Five companies of troops from the Japanese garrison at Taipeh Island of Formosa, started Tuesday for Amoy.

THIRTY ACNNON UNEARTHED.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 31.— General Linevitch, commanding the Russian at the Chinese capital, reports from Pekin under date of August 20, that the Russian detachment on the previous day captured without loss the Imperial summer palace. The Russian artillerymen have also unearthed at Pekin thirty cannon and many rifles. A large quantity of silver was found at the Tsung Li Yamen.

RUSSO-AMERICAN AGREEMENT

Washington, Aug. 30.—A communication has been received by the Department of State here from the charge of the Russian Government on August 17, protesting against the refusal of the other powers to recognize Li Hung Chang as the plenipotentiary of the Chinese Government. The United States Government concurred in the protest, and on August 17 sent a note to its Ministers in the foreign capitals, declaring that "Li Hung Chang is prima facie authoritized by Imperial decree to negotiate, and is the only representative of responsible authority now in China, so far as they advised." They have instructed their representative in China in the spirit of the Russian note.

The note instructs the Ambassadors to learn from any other power if there are resons not known to the United States Government, which should lead to a different view being taken; and also orders them to communicate this to the Minister of Foreign Affairs.

TO WITHDRAW FROM PEKIN.

Washington, Aug. 31.—The State Department has despatched its instruction to the United States diplomatic representatives abroad, in conformity with the decision reached yesterday by the Cabinet, upon the Russian proposal to withdraw the troops from Pekin, in order to allow the Empress Dowager end Emperor Kwang Hsu to return to the capital to institute negotiations for a settlement with the powers. All of these steps are matters of common agreement, so it was possible for two of the nations concerned, Russia and the United States to make agreements between themselves, at this stage at least, as it is necessary to advise each of the Governments represented in China of the various propositions as they are broched.

It is possible that the Russian Government has some private means of knowing that the Empress Dowager stands ready to return to Pekin upon the withdrawl of the foreign troops from that capital. If so, the Russian Government also must be able to extort from the Empress Dowager, or whatever remains of the Chinese Government some sort of understanding which can be accepted by the United States as sufficient to show that the Chinese Government will enter upon negotiations upon the described basis as soon as it returns to Pekin. By the despatch of to-day's note, the United States Government has, for the time being placed the responsibility for the next step upon the Russian Government.

London, Aug. 31.—Considerable attention is paid by this morning's papers to the report that the United States and Russian Governments are ready to withdraw their troops from Pekin, and permit the Imperial Chinese party to return to the capital and commence peace negotiations.

WITHDRAWING FROM AMOY.

Washington, Aug. 30.—A telegram has been received at the Japanese Legation to the effect that having been informed by the Japanese Consul at Amoy that he has been assured by the Chinese authorities of their readiness to afford full protection to the foreign residents and their property of the port the Japanese Government have already ordered the withdrawal of the marines detailed to protect the Japanese property in the native town and are prepared to withdraw the rest of the marines as soon as they are satisfied that peace and protection are assured.

IS THE SHIRT WAIST MODEST?

There is a new shirt waist issue in St. Louis. It does not concern the newly evolved masculine garment which bears that name for lack of a better, but the securely intrenched article of feminine apparel from which the name was borrowed to describe men who go about without coats or vests. Complaint is not made about the shirt waist itself, but about the rather new fashion of making the upper portion of these garments of lace and insertion, so that the arms and shoulders are nearly as much in evidence as in evening dress. The complainant is a priest, who insists that the young women of his church must abandon their "jiggamaree waists" and "funny businesses" or else abstain from communion. "Jiggamaree waist" is good, but the priest also declares that it is vulgar. His protest is received with the astonishment and incredulity which usually follow any public protest against fashion.

While the language of the priest's condemnation may be a little strong, his position seems to have good taste on its side. Women do not wear evening clothes on the street cars nor shop with bare shoulders exposed to casual beholders. A tear the size of some of the intentional holes on this summer's waists would give the wearer spasms. It is hard to see why women should wear a costume which accomplishes the same results as evening dress when they would think evening dress improper. But there are a great many points about fashionable dressing which it is hard to understand. Modesty of dress is at best a convention. What any community has agreed to accept as proper is made proper by that very acceptance. It makes no difference whether that community be a crowd at a bathing beach which sees no harm in abbreviated bathing dresses or South Sea Islanders who see no harm in costumes abbreviated ten times as much. It is in the seeing and not the costume that the mischief lies if there is any mischief. Therefore, the lace shirt waist having been adopted without any bad intentions it is best not to see ill in them. It is one of those questions where taste and discretion are all important and where it is foolish to attempt to raise a moral issue.

POLITICAL PROMISES.

It is not a question as to whether the Liberal leaders, before and during the campaign of 1896, made promises which have not been fulfilled. It cannot be denied that such promises were made. The official records prove that. Everyone knows that the Liberal government the public expenditures would be reduced, that the granting of public lands to railways would be stopped, that the protective tariff would be swept away, that taxation would be greatly lowered, and that the national debt would not be increased. Everyone knows that under the Liberal government public expenditures have been increased, that millions of acres of public land have been granted to railway promoters, that the protective features of the tariff have been retained, that taxation has not been appreciably lowered, and that the national debt has been increased by several millions.

There is no question that the pre-election promises of Liberal leaders have not been fulfilled. The real question is whether these promises should have been fulfilled.

They were wild promises—most of them were foolish. For any statesman in a growing country like Canada, unable to forsee the conditions of the immediate future, to promise that expenditures will be reduced is unwise. The promise to abolish protection were insincere as well as unwise; so were the promises respecting land grants to railways. But what the people of Canada will have to decide is whether the Liberal government deserves credit or condemnation for breaking bad promises.

SOME CURIOUS VOWS

That are Made on the Eve of Battle by Men Who are to Take Part.

If I come out of the big fight to-morrow safe and sound I shall never touch another drop of spirits as long as I live.

Such was the vow uttered by a private on the eve of the battle of Ulundi during the famous Zulu war some eighteen years since. The man had been the toper of the regiment—notorious for his devotion to the joys of Bacchus—but on the night before the battle he received a letter from home saying that his father had died in a home for dipsomaniacs. Impressed by the awfulness of this incident, he recorded the vow related above—though with what precision it was kept the present chronicler is unable to state.

Rather curious was the vow registered by a French soldier who took part in the Franco-German war of 1870-71. A very dear comrade of his having been killed in action, he swore an oath on the eve of a certain battle that with his own hands he would kill no fewer than a dozen Prussians, or, failing this, would perish by his own hand. Sure enough, he kept his word most faithfully—for when the time came, he shot twelve of the enemy in succession, narrowly escaping with his own life after the abnormal feat in question.

During the war between North and South a Confederate officer named Hudson vowed that if he came uninjured out of the campaign he would marry the first woman he met on returning to his native town, providing that she was single and willing to accept him. The gallant but eccentric officer was spared by shot and shell to so great an extent that he emerged scatheless from the war, but the vow was never consummated, for by a strange freak of fate, the first woman whom he encountered upon his return was his own sister, so that naturally nothing came of the extraordinary oath.

In ancient days vows upon the eve of battle were far more common than is the case in modern times. Before the battle of Crecy we are informed that no fewer than six archers, serving under the English banner, registered solemn oaths that, in the event of the battle going against them, they would thrust their own arrows down their throats rather than be taken prisoners by the French soldiery.

On the night before the world-famous battle of Alma a Cossack soldier vowed that if he were fortunate enough to be spared during the fight he would consume ten gallons of ale at one sitting, directly an opportunity was afforded him of so doing. The oath, however, proved a tragic one, for the Cossack, as his companions, arguing from the utterance of it that he was possessed of considerable money, fell upon him and stripped him of the pouch containing all his worldly possessions, and in the struggle to regain his property he fell, stabbed to the heart by a treacherous comrade.

Most readers of history will remember the famous Seven Years' war, in which Frederick the Great of Prussia played so important a part. During the progress of that memorable and prolonged campaign a Bavarian corporal rejoicing in the name of Keller swore an oath that he would not cut his finger nails until the war was over. The worthy corporal's oath would doubtless have been faithfully observed had not gossip concerning it came to the ears of his commanding officer, who sent for the man, reprimanded him severely and ordered him to have his nails cut in the ordinary course—in accordance with the laws of decency.

Seeing that the campaign in question endured for six years after the registering of this remarkable vow, the action of the commandant was a useful one, for it would be hardly pleasant to ponder upon the condition of finger nails innocent of the scissors for the space of seventy-two months.

Perhaps, however, one of the most curious vows ever uttered on a battlefield was the oath recorded by an Italian soldier serving under the banner of the heroic Garibaldi. He swore that in the event of his issuing from the campaign a sound man he would at once abandon the army and take priestly orders. He kept his word, for on the close of the campaign he assumed the clerical robe and died some six years later in an odor of sanctity.

"Yes, if he has also one more letter to add to that."

"Another letter?"

Cleaning House

Once or twice a year the good housewife has a thorough house cleaning. The house has been swept and dusted every day in the year, but the housewife knows that in spite of vigilance dust accumulates in cracks and corners, and is only to be removed by special effort.

It's the same way with the body. You look after it every day. You take all the ordinary precautions of cleanliness and health. Yet the body needs its special cleaning to rid it of the accumulations of waste and poisonous matter which invite disease. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, taken regularly once or twice a year, would save many a sickness. It purifies the blood, strengthens the stomach, and cleanses the body of poisonous accumulations.

"Last spring I had a severe attack of pneumonia, which left me with a bad cough, and also left my lungs in a very bad condition," writes John M. Russell, Esq., of Brent, Cherokee Nat., Ind. Ter. "I had no appetite and was so weak I could scarcely walk. My breast was all sore with running sores. I got two bottles Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which I believe saved my life. I cannot express my gratitude to you. I am able now to do very good work."

THEIR SILVER WEDDING.

Only Three Things Wrong About His Story.

They were celebrating their silver wedding and the friends were admiring them as people always do other people when they are getting a lot of presents. You have noticed, of course, how people always look at you when you show them something somebody has given you. They are surprised and they envy you. They always wonder, however, in themselves what on earth any one could see in you to give you anything so handsome. That is unless it is your husband. Then they smile and wonder what he has been doing that his conscience needs rest. But if you'll notice you'll find that persons who get many presents have many friends. You may have many friends but get precious few presents. Presents make friends; friends don't make presents. Married people increase the circle of their friends with every anniversary of their wedding, because the presents get handsomer and more expensive. You can work this paradox out for yourselves, I haven't time.

They were celebrating their silver wedding, and of course the couple were very happy and very affectionate.

"Yes," said the husband, "this is the only woman I ever loved. I shall never forget the first time I proposed to her"

"How did you do it?" burst out a young man who had been squeezing a pretty girl's hand in a corner. They all laughed and he blushed; but the girl carried it off bravely.

"Well, I remember as well as if it were yesterday. It was away back in Maine. We had been out to a picnic, and she and I got wandering alone together. Don't you remember, my dear?"

The wife nodded and smiled.

"We sat on the trunk of an old tree. You haven't forgotten have you love?"

The wife nodded and smiled again.

"She began writing in the dust with the point of her parasol. You recall it sweet, don't you?"

The same old smile and nod.

"She wrote her name 'Minnie,' and I said, 'let me put the other name to it.' And I took the parasol and wrote my name—Smith—after it."

"How lovely," broke out a little maid who was beaming in a suspicious way on a tall chap with a blonde mustache.

"And she took back the parasol and wrote below it, 'No I won't.' And we went home. You remember it darling, I see you do."

Then he kissed her and the company murmured, "How nice."

The guests had all departed and the happy couple were left alone.

"Wasn't it nice, Minnie, to see all our friends around us and so happy."

"Yes it was. But John, that reminiscence."

"Ah, it seems as if it was only yesterday."

"Yes, dear; there are only three things you're wrong about in that story."

"Wrong? Oh, no!"

"John, I'm sorry you told that story, because I never went to a picnic with you before our marriage; I was never in Maine in my life and I never went through that parasol business with you."

"My darling, you are wrong."

"I'm not wrong. You know I have an excellent memory. We have been married twenty-five years but I never knew about that minx, Minnie. You never told me of her before."

I guess that she'll forgive, but it is doubtful if she forgets.

He Needed the Money.

A local real estate dealer tells this story:

Some time ago he had an allotment on the market and one day a foreign-looking individual walked into his office and said he wanted to inquire about the lots. He looked over the plat and finally picked out one that suited him.

"Vot's der price?" he asked when the location was decided upon.

"Eight hundred dollars."

"I give you six houndred cash."

"Very well," said the dealer, "you can have it."

Then the customer lowered his voice.

"I vant der price of dot lot seex houndred to me, but eight houndred to effrybody else. You understand?"

"Yes," said the dealer. "That will be all right."

"Vell, you see, it's like dees—I'm goin' to get married. I've got der girl picked out, und she has money. You see you vill sell der lot to her for $800. Den you vill motion to me, und ve vill go into der next room und you will pay me dot $200. See?"

"You want the $200 for a commission?" said the dealer. "That will be all right, too."

The customer looked relieved.

"It's choost this way," he said. "I must have dot two hundred or I can't get married."

"You shall have it," said the dealer.

A few days later the future bride, her mother and the coming bridegroom entered the office. The papers were quickly prepared and signed, and the mother from the intricacies of her skirts produced a wad of bills, which proved to be the necessary $800.

Then the bridegroom lingered behind as the bride and her mother passed into the hall. The dealer hastily counted off the $200 and thrust it into the bridegroom's hand.

"I have to have it," whispered the latter.

"All right," said the dealer.

"I couldn't get married without it."

"I understand," said the dealer.

The man with the two hundred paused, with his hand on the doorknob.

"I have to have it," he hoarsely murmured, "it is for my first wife's funeral expenses!"

"Oh, it's nice to be a press agent," said one of that happy tribe the other day. "Here I have been putting in all my time this morning trying to convince two dramatic critics and four managing editors that our show is the best thing that ever opened in town, and I have been called the biggest liar on earth by all but one of them. Such practical unanimity makes a man think there may be something in the proposition."

"What did the sixth man tell you?"

"He wouldn't see me at all. He had seen to the show."—Chicago Post.

OZONE

Is Winning Many Notable Victories Over the Most Obstinate Forms of CATARRH

Testimony From a Prominent Commercial Man Proving the Superiority of the New Treatment Over the Older Methods—Painful Suffering Removed by Powley's Liquified Ozone.

There are thousands of persons suffering from dyspepsia, insomnia and disordered nerves, caused by catarrhal posion passing into the stomach which produces indigestion, heart affections and other serious complaints. Catarrh is an insidious enemy to the stomach, kidneys, lungs liver and in fact, to the entire system. Half of the heart failures may be traced directly to stomach trouble superinduced by catarrh of the stomach. A catarrhal condition of the liver is often due to catarrh of the stomach, the mucus finding its way into the bile ducts through the portal circulation, the symptoms of which vary, but there is usually a jaundiced condition, the skin is dry and dark blotches appear on the face and hands, conjunctive of the eyes becomes yellow and the sight is often blurred.

With Powley's Liquified Ozone you positively cure catarrh. We can refer to numbers of people in this city and throughout the Dominion who have been cured.

Ozone is a powerful germicide and antiseptic. It destroys the ferms and neutralizes the acrid nasal secretions, thus removing a fruitful source of danger to life and health.

Scores of letters from those who have been cured through the new treatment.

HERE IS A SAMPLE.

Mr. D. D. Rose, Commercial Traveler, 191 Simcoe street, city, says. "I have used the new treatment for Catarrh, and found excellent results. I have been troubled for three or four years before commencing Powley's Liquified Ozone, and had used the old methods in vogue for treating this disease, but without any benefit. I can conscientiously say that the new treatment is really the dawn of a new era in curing this awful disease. It has entirely cured me of catarrh. Its peculiar action on the mucous membrane and nasal passages is so powerful yet so harmless to the system that Catarrh germs cannot remain where it is used. I can safely recommend it to other sufferers as being far in advance of the older methods of treatment."

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Labor Day Outing

Rev. Father J. Fitzpatrick's pic-nic, at Young's Point, will afford a favorable outing for many of our friends on Labor Day. There is reduced rates on the railways. The steamer Majestic will do the rest at Lakefield. All should go.

A Large Fish.

On Wednesday last, while C. H. Routley and his little son were paddling over to McCracken's Landing, Stony Lake for water, the child, who was holding a trawling line, hooked a 23 1-2 pound maskinonge. The fish was only landed after an exciting struggle, which lasted half an hour.

Burglary in Lakefield

On Wednesday evening the residence of Mr. F. J. Lillicrapp was entered. They got in through a kitchen window, and had a hearty meal, helping themselves to what ever they could find. They had rifled some trunks, when they were disturbed by Mrs Lillicrop, who raised an alarm and frightened the thieves away. Fortunately, there was nothing missing.

School Opening

The public and high schools will resume business at the old stands on Tuesday morning. No doubt both teachers and pupils will enter with zest into the work ahead of them after the long vacation, and anxious mothers will breathe a sigh of relief as they will know exactly where Johnny and Tommy are for at least a portion of the day.

Can You Tell Why

You have constant headaches, are nervous and sleepless at night and feel tired in the morning? Your blood isn't carrying the right materials to your nerves and other organs. Begin taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood enricher, and you will soon realize a change. You will feel better and stronger, will relish your food and enjoy refreshing sleep.

Nausea, indigestion are cured by Hood's Pills.

Civilization and "Ads"

The tendency of people to make use of the advertising columns of newspapers is a result of the progress of civilization. Even the women who wants a servant no longer bangs over the back fence to ask the housemaid next door to find her one, but advertises her need. The time is coming when a business establishment of any kind that shall not consider the convenience of the public enough to use the advertising columns of newspapers will be regarded as belonging to the old horse-car period.

A Bad On Slash

There is a great deal of uneasiness among the fruit growers throughout the country, especially those who have apple orchards, over the destruction being done by a new sort of worm. This pest is about an inch long and travles like the measuring worm of a few years ago. It attacks the apple orchard and if spraying is not done, will clean the tree of leaves in short order. It prefers winter apples, and if an orchard is composed of alternate-rows of mother's spy and greenings it will take the spies and leave the greenings—perhaps it is only holding the latter in reserve. Already some orchards have been stripped of their leaves.

A Runaway

The horse belonging to Mr. Sam Ray, Peterborough's popular tobacconist, took fright at the steam roller yesterday morning, and ran away. It was captured, however, before any damage was done.

Mr. McAllister's Bad Luck.

Mr. C. B. McAllister, proprietor of the "Mountaineer Kennels," has had the worst kind of luck with his dogs this year. Out of thirty splendidly bred puppies he has been only able to raise one. He entered five dogs for the Toronto Bench Show and two of them show such unmistakable indications of distemper that they could not possibly be sent to the exhibition. On Thursday the climax of misfortune was reached, when a C.P.R. locomotive cut the hind leg off "Laurel Laddie," the grand imported stud dog of the kennels. It seems that the dogs were let loose for the inspection of a visiting Scotchman and Laddie ran to the track, where the engine caught him. The dog was without doubt the most valuable in Canada and though he may live, will never again be fit for show purposes.

A New Industry

Peterborough is to have another manufacturing industry, in the shape of a wholesale confectionery manufactory. The premises on the corner of George and King streets, next to Messrs J. J. Turner & Sons, are being put in shape for the business. New machinery is arriving and will be in running order in a short time. Messrs. Hooper & Hartnett, who will carry on this new enterprise in Peterborough, have been engaged in the business in London, Ont., and are both practical confectioners, of many years' experience in the large cities of Canada and the United States. They intend turning out all kinds of plain and fancy goods for the retail trade, and are confident that a good business can be done in Peterborough and vicinity.

Music at Stony Lake.

A very pleasing event took place at Belle Chasse, the handsome summer cottage of Mr. H. LeBrun, Stony Lake, on Wednesday evening last, when Mrs. W. J. Morrow, assisted by her little son Joe, and Miss Dagenais, of Montreal, gave a musicale. A very fine programme of high-class music was rendered, and was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number who were present. The charming hostess Mrs. LeBrun, assisted by her husband, did everything in their power to add to the enjoyment of their guests. The many colored Chinese lights brilliantly and most effectively lighted the verandas, and the rockiness of the island made the scene a veritable fairyland. The guests took their departure shortly after midnight, carrying with them sweet memories of the pleasant evening spent at Belle Chasse.

A Successful Event.

Thursday evening at the residence of Mr Christopher Howson, near Mathews' Corners, a very successful garden party was held, in the interest of the Ladies' Aid, of the Keene Methodist church. Refreshments were provided and a musical programme rendered. The net proceeds amounted to about $38.00. Grafton & Co., of Peterborough, kindly furnished the flags and lanterns for decoration, and the display was much admired.

Horses Wanted.

Mr. W. J. Pearson, the well-known horse buyer of Montreal will pay the highest cash prices for a car load of good sound horses of every description. Parties interested will please make a note of his following places and dates of Mr. Pearson's next visit.

White House, Peterborough, Wednesday, September 5th; Crocker's Hotel, Millbrook; Thursday, Morning, Sept. 6th; Royal Hotel, Port Hope, Friday, Sept. 7th.

A New Industry

A new and profitable industry said to have sprung up around the banks of ponds and small lakes in the west. The common cat tail, which grows in profusion in the water's edge has become a valuable article of commerce, and sells for a cent a pound. The catptails have largely superseded wool, cotton and hair form attresses and upholstery, and are said to be admirable substitutes, while they cost far less than the materials mentioned. The demand far exceeds the supply and is increasing. There is a great deal of it in Peterborough county.

Bell Pianos

At Toronto Fair.

The attention of all music lovers and piano buyers is directed to the exhibit of Bell Pianos and Organs in the Musical Pavilion at Toronto Exhibition. We invite a critical inspection and comparison of our instruments, each one being guaranteed for ten years ensuring to the purchaser a lasting satisfaction.

We have also obtained the sole right for Canada for the manufacture of the wonderful "Apollo," a new and wonderful automatic piano-playing instrument, which will be shown for the first time at the Company's exhibit The "Apollo" is built on the experience of earlier inventions. It is in no sense a mechanical instrument. It can be attached to any piano, and the player can at all times control the volume and expression, and renders the most difficult pieces of music in a truly masterly way. Whoever owns a piano should have an "Apollo."

At the city warerooms, 70 King Street West, can be seen an exact duplicate of the stock shown at the exhibition, and a great array of second-hand pianos and organs of nearly every make, which we are clearing out at low prices, the terms being made to suit the purchaser. DESCRIPTION OF PLANT.

The Capital Power Company, Limited, has been organised to purchase from Messrs. R. & W. Conroy all their property situated at Deschenes, on the Ottawa River, in the Province of Quebec, on Lots 15 and 16, in the First Range of the Township of Hull, south of the right of way of the Pontiac Pacific Railway

Messrs. Conroy also undertake to complete the new power house already nearly built, the power generated in which is rented to the E. B. Eddy Co., Ltd, and to turn the whole over to the Company as a going concern for the sum of Four Hundred Thousand Dollars, of which Two Hundred Thousand is to be paid in cash, balance in fully paid up ordinary shares of the Company on Oct. 1st, 1900. The whole to be to the satisfaction of the Company's expert.

Until the before mentioned date, the vendors have agreed to allow interest at 6 p. c. upon any moneys paid by the Company to them, on account of said purchase, thereby ensuring the earning power of all moneys subscribed and paid from the date of payment.

THE PLANT CONSISTS OF:

Power plant leased to the Hull Electric Company, which consists of two 52-inch Turbines, equal to 332 horse power.
Large power house, the power in which is leased to the E. B. Eddy Co., Ltd.
10 61-inch Turbines, equal to 2,280 horse power.
2 Generators, each 800 K. W., equal to 2,133 horse power.
2 Exciter Generators, 30 K. W.
Grist Mill with power leased to the Lake Deschenes Milling Co.
1 66-inch Turbine and 1 33-inch Turbine, equal to 175 horse power.
Spare power flume not leased, but which can at a small cost be made to develop about 500 horse power.

WATER POWER BONDS AND PREFERENCE STOCK AS AN INVESTMENT.

It is impossible to find conditions which secure for invested capital greater safety than is exhibited by water power propositions when such are situated upon such a reliable stream as the Ottawa River and when there is a constant demand in the immediate neighborhood for the power to be generated. That Ottawa requires the power is evidenced by the fact that all the power generated by the works of the Company has already been leased for terms of years with a certainty that at the end of the terms the prices paid will be increased.

It may be fairly accepted that the transmission of power electrically has passed all experimental stages, as is witnessed by the successful operations of such power plants as the Niagara Falls Power Co., the Hudson River Power and Transmission Co., Chambly Power Company and others.

The Five per cent. Bonds of the Niagara Power Co.—$9,000,000 in amount—are selling at 109 whilst the Bonds of the Hudson River Power Co. and of the Chambly Power Co. are selling at substantial premiums.

Bonds, and even Preference Stock, such as are now offered may fairly be considered as equal if not superior to any investment as to safety, whilst yielding a considerably better return than Bank Stocks and other investments which carry with them onerous responsibilities.

It is intended to get the Shares and Bonds of this Company listed upon the Montreal Stock Exchange.

PROVISIONAL DIRECTORS.

E. B. Eddy, Esq., President E. B. Eddy Co., Ltd., Hull, Match and Paper Manufactures; Louis Simpson, Vice-President Northrop Loom Co., Ltd., Cotton Manufacturer; J. M. Shanly, Esq., Great Northern Railway Co., Civil Engineer.

Colonials Opened Fire Upon Two Hundred Retreating Boers and Cause Them to Fly in Dismay—Lord Roberts Issues a Severe Proclamation Against the Boers.

Pretoria, Sept 2. Mr. Kruger and Mr. Steyn have gone to Barberton, it is believed that they are preparing for flight. The general opinion is that the war is now very near the end, but should the Boers construct strongholds on the bush on the Veldt, or elsewhere and begin a system of raids, the British would require further large supplies of horses. General Buller moved fourteen miles northwestward along the Lyndenburg road and crossed Crocodile river to Bradfontein. He found the Boers concentrating in the Crocodile mountains. A force of Boers under commandent Theron broke through the British lines and captured and burnt a supply train at Kilpriver station taking 35 prisoners. Brabants Horse proceeded, then recaptured all the prisoners and drove the Boers into the hills. Col. Plumer dispersed a small commando under commandente Pretorius, east of Pinaars River capturing 20 Boers a number of wagons and a quantity of cattle and rifles.

London, Sept. 1.—Since Wednesday last no news has come from Lord Roberts as to the result of the attack by Generals Buller, Pole-Carew and French upon the Boer position at Helvetia. The fact that four days have elapsed without any announcement from the Commander-in-Chief seems to indicate that a prolonged and serious struggle is going on. There appears to be a difference of opinion between natives and released British prisoners as to the whereabouts of President Kruger, the Kafirs saying that he has gone to Pilgrims Rest, to the north, and the latter stating that he has retreated along the railway towards the Portugues border. Probabilities are, however, in favor of the former theory, as Kruger can now hope for little from the railways except immediate escape, which would cause a rapid collapse of Boer opposition, and play into the hands of the British. On the whole, it is likely that Oom Paul will show patriotism enough to remain with his men to the last, and that he will be found with them in the Lydenburg district.

London, Sept. 1.—A Queenstown despatch dated yesterday describes the dramatic capture of General Olivier during the Boer attack on Winburg. Eight Queenstown volunteers sortied from the town and took up a position in a donga through which the road passed and behind the Boer position. As the Boers retired through the donga in single file, they were struck up one by one and put under charge of a couple of men, out of sight until the colonials had captured twenty-eight, including Gen. Olivier and his three sons. As two hundred Boers were following behind in fairly close order the colonials then began hard volley firing, with the result that they killed six Boers, and frightened off the others who had no idea of the actual number in the donga.

Dunbar, Sept. 1.—A party of the 5th Dragoon Guards, numbering about 20, under Captain Reynolds, have surprised a Boer laager at Kotze's Drift on the Buffalo River. The Boers, who numbered about a hundred, were seated round the camp fire, drinking coffee, when the Dragoons poured in a destructive fusilade at short range, causing much confusion and dismay. After a while the Boer rallied, and returned the fire, when the Dragoons retired with a loss of one man missing. Captain Reynolds was slightly wounded. The Boers were on their way to attack a post on the line. The surprise was a very dashing affair, and well planned and carried out.

LENIENCY AT AN END.

London, Sept. 1.—Lord Roberts is issuing a new proclamation rescinding his previous proclamation and prescribing the most rigorous measures against all persons who had broken the oath of neutrality and who, being residents in districts under British occupation, have not taken the oath. The proclamation sets forth that the leniency which has been extended to the burghers has not been appreciated, but it is being used as a cloak for continued resistance. The former proclamation is revoked, except in regard to those who have already taken the oath, and in future all persons who have taken the oath and broken it will be punished with death, imprisonment or fine; all burghers in districts occupied by British forces, except those who have sworn the oath, will be regarded as prisoners of war and transported; and all buildings, structures and farms where the enemy's scouts are harbored will be liable to be razed to the ground. All fines under the former proclamation will be rigorously exacted, and burghers are warned to acquaint her Majesty's forces of the presence of the enemy upon their farms; otherwise they will be regarded as aiding and abbetting the enemy.

Lord Roberts proclamation has been received by the army with every sign of satisfaction. For a long time past it has been evident that the policy of leniency was being totally misunderstood by the Boers, and it has always been abused by them.

TARIFF TO BE THE GREAT ISSUE.

The Question of Preferential Trade Is Looming Up.

FRENCH VOTE IS IN DOUBT

Many Fear the Scheme Involves a Union of Empire Never Possible to Sever—Sir Charles Tupper is Hard at Work.

Ottawa, Sept. 3—Everything points to preferential trade with Great Britain becoming one of the main issues of the coming Dominion election. Sir Charles Tuppe gives it a first place in his interviews and speeches, and the other opposition leaders follo wsuit.

The members of the cabinet and the government spokesmen generally cannot refuse to ignore the challenge. Finance Minister Fielding had already sounded the keynote to the administration reply to Sir Charles Tupper's attacks. He charges the Conservative chieftain with a deliberate attempt to alarm the business classes and public generally by creating an impression that the government policy contemplates a further increase of the preference to 40 per cent. Mr. Fielding declares that the administration is pledged to a reasonable degree of tariff stability, and the industrial and trading interests of the country are not going to be unsettled by further changes. Frequent changes are recognized as undesirable. A fair revenue tariff is the main object aimed at, and that has been achieved. This policy was distinctly laid down in Parliament by the budget speech, and repeatedly has been asserted since by every member of the administration who has spoken on the subject.

Sir Charles Tupper makes the issue one between a one-sided preferential tariff and a mutual preference. He opposes a preference for Great Britain that brings nothing back to Canada in return. He is for a preference not to Great Britain only but to the British Empire, and based absolutely on reciprocal concessions. This, he claims, is not hostile to the mother country or repugnant to British statesman, but on all-fours with the ideas of Chamberlain and the British Ministers, who see eye to eye with him on colonial and imperial affairs.

How Sir Wilfrid's party managers intend to meet this phase of the issue in the English speaking provinces remains to be seen but in French-speaking Canada the electors have been told that Tupper's real object is disclosed. His design, it is claimed, is to commit the country to the only policy that would block effectively the eventual independence of Canada, the goal to which all French-Canadian politicians bend their thoughts and energies. It is explained in this way. A common reciprocal tariff would bind every colony consenting to it in a permanent bond of union that must inevitably lead to military and political as well as commercial identity. Canada would no longer be free to make her own tariffs as her own industrial interests might dictate, but would be compelled to consult other interests, even when they conflicted with her own.

Sir Wilfrid's Laurier's policy, however, it is contended placed Canada in the position of an independent state, conferring at her own pleasure, for her own purposes, and of her own free will, a favor on another country with which she has important commercial relations that she desires to increase and for which purpose she is prepared to make some temporary sacrifices.

This doctrine has immensely tickled the fancy of the anti-imperial French-Canadians; how it can be sugar-coated to suit the strong imperialist sentiment of English-speaking Canada is the next question.

In the meantime the issue raised by Sir Charles has attracted wide attention. No less a body than the Board of Trade of the Maritime Provinces of Canada, in annual convention assembled, has discussed the points presented and taken action. The decision was emphatically for "mutual" preferential trade. A resolutio nwas adopted declaring that such preference, in the opinion of the convention, "would greatly tend to cement the unity of the empire, vastly assist in veloping the material resources of the several colonies and dependencies thereof, hold a restraining influence upon immigration, diverting it from foreign countries to countries within the empire, and conducing to an equitable system of commercial intercourse between the empire and the nations of the world."

A boundary map of so late a date as 1831 only sixty years ago has been shown here, which places the whole of British Columbia and the Canadian Yukon gold fields on the United States side of the line. The Times' correspondent mentioned the matter to-day to a member of the government, who has had a great deal to do of late years with boundaries questions. He said; "I wish the United States government would agree to abide by the old maps in a complete revision of Canadian and United States territories respectively. The result would be the restoration to Canada of a greater part of the Western States and Maine, giving Canada a big slice of the North Atlantic coast, including Portland other good winter ports, besides a slice of Vermont."

Investigation into the capacity of the Canadian canal system for the passage of warships from the sea to the great lakes yields interesting results. Armored vessels of the class of British coast defense ships, such as the Hecate, Hydra, Scorpion, and Wivern, can be locked through the canals. These vessels are under 250 feet in length and do not exceed forty-feet in beam, the canal locks being of a uniform length of 270 feet with room for vessels not exceeding 250 feet and forty five feet beam. The depth of water in the locks allows a draft of only fourteen feet, while the warships of the above class draw 16 to 17 feet with all on board, but they could be lightened with room to spare.

The canals are similarly available for ships of the class of the Abyssinia and Magdala of the Indian marine and the Cerberus of the Victorian, Australia, marine. A number of warships of the third-class cruiser grade, carrying two-inch armor, with six 4.7 inch guns each and built for a speed of 16.5 knots could be got through.

There is a large fleet of gunboats, dispatch vessels, and torpedo gunboats of dimensions suitable for going through the canals. The vessels of the classes enumerated are, however, the heaviest that could be sent up to the great lakes from the sea.

The best of the classes of warships capable of passing the locks would have a poor show in the upper lakes, where, flying the flag of the United States, large fleets of monster steel steamships of 6,000 to 8,000 tons are found, and steel steamships of over 4000 tons are quite common, all of them capable of being quickly converted into warships in the numerous steel shipbuilding yards that stud the American side of the lakes. In time of war, the canal route could be closed by American guns to any ships attempting to ascend the St. Lawrence higher than Cornwall, Ont., the point at which the international boundary reaches the river. From that point westwards the south bank of the river is American, the north banks Canadian.

CANADIANS IN ACTION

Very Interesting Letter From Lieut. Morrison.

FIRST TASTE OF SHELL FIRE

How it Feels to Hear the Screech of Shells and the Noise of Pom-Poms—"D" Battery Under Fire.

The following very interesting letter has been sent us by a friend in Ottawa, for publication in the Times. It is from Lieut. E. W. Morrison, of D Battery, which at the date mentioned was with Gen. Ian Hamilton's force north of Pretoria.

Dewagendrift, July 31.—D Battery, R. C.A., has been in its first action and has come off well. Two transport drivers, half a dozen mules killed, and a lengthy lists of narrow escapes sum up the result of the day. We had already had several small engagements on this trip but they were outpost affairs will little loss, but today we had two artillery duels and though our loss did not amount to much it was our baptism in artillery fire and very interesting, such events in a young soldier's life always are. It has been the custom on this campaign to detail a number of guns to accompany the rear guard each day and a section of our battery takes it in turns. This morning the center section under Lieut. Van Tuyl was on duty with thee rear guard, which remains behind to protect the big supply column and baggage. The other two sections of D were with the advance guard. We moved out at 7 o'clock and had only been on the road about 30 minutes when we heard the Boers open with artillery on the camp we had left. They came up over a kopje about 2,000 yards from the supply train and camp, aiming at our baggage wagons and Lieut. Van Tuyl's guns apparently. The first shell went over and the second struck besides the wagons killing two transport drivers and six mules. Then there was a general scatteration of the transport vehicles. Lieut. Van Tuyl moved his guns on to the other side of a kopje and came into action with good effect. The Elswick battery of long-range guns and a couple of pom-poms followed and an artillery duel ensued while the transport was scurrying to the front. Getting eight miles of transport wagons, Kaffirs, mules and oxen on the move under shell fire is no joke but our guns soon silenced those of the enemy and all was quiet again. All this we of the advance guard listened to in a wood a couple of miles off, kicking ourselves that the fun had not started sooner so we would have been in it. However, we had not long to wait. When the firing ceased in rear the advance guard moved forward and came in to a wide stretch of open rolling country commanded by a kopje to the north. We were marching slowly along with the cavalry out in front and the lines of infantry closer in, when there was a "boom!" from the kopje over two miles to the left and then we heard an eerie whistle like the wind in the chimney of a haunted house (and it gave you about the same chill down your spine) then it plunked into the ground a couple of hundred yards from the battery and threw up a cloud of dust like a dynamite blast on a sewer Major Hurdman wheeled the battery into line and we got "Action left!" Before our horses were clear with the limbers there was another boom and doleful whistle, this time over our heads and a shell plunged into the ground about 150 yards right in rear of the battery. Says I to myself, says I, they've got us bracketed—one short and one long—the next will land right on us. Now any man who did not listen for the next shell with extreme anxiety must have had more nerve than most people. All this time we were working away with the usual "fire discipline" routine prior to opening fire ourselves but every second seemed a minute and while I mechanically gave my orders and looked after things as we have had it drilled into us, my senses were keenly alive to the fact that there was an other shell coming that would probably divide the bracket and do other things. At last she came—"boom!—I heard the crooning whistle in the air coming right for us and I thought for three seconds that I was the only man on earth and that shell was bound to land in the pit of my stomach. Whoo-oo, it swooped down over the heads of my section and threw a shower of dirt and gravel over the men on the timbers as they moved to their proper positions in the rear. Then we opened fire and I got very busy looking after the working of my own guns. After that I think I can honestly say that the shells didn't bother me much. One after the other they came over our heads and burst near the wagon line in rear of the guns. Then up came a couple of pom-poms on our left. (There is no doubt the pom-pom is the comedian of the battlefield. Everybody laughs when it commences, it is difficult to explain the humor except, as a gunner expressed it, it makes a noise like the impatient pounding of the hired man at the back door on a cold winter's night.) Pom-pom-pom-pom! it went and then, after a brief pause pom-pom-pom-pom! again. Next the big howitzers opened to the right and left of us and from feeling like a little lonely battery all out by itself in the wide, wide world, we began to feel that there were others and that the chaps who were chucking the shells at us so carelessly were probably getting as good as they sent. It is a very comfortable feeling.

Meanwhile D battery was throwing some shells itself. We got the range at 4,000 yards without trouble and then proceeded to sprinkle twelve pounder sharpnel over that kopje in a way that must have kept Brother Boer dodging. The men worked splendidly. A regiment of infantry came hurrying past the rear of the guns going to the right and the Tommies yelled genially "Give it to'em, Canydians!" and our boys jollied them as they passed along. A shell came over us just then and I turned to see if it had damaged the infantry but it had dropped just in rear and about ten yards from a straggler behind the column. It was amusing to see the coolness of the Tommy. He went out of his way sufficiently to look into the crater made by the shell, then hitched up his rifle sling and tramped on as nonchalantly as if some one had tossed him a bouquet. The Boers changed their fire on to the pom-poms and the long line of transport coming up and then switched back to us, bursting a time sharpnel in the air with beautiful precision just over and in front of my section. The bullets pattered on the ground around us but the "remaining velocity" was not sufficient to enable them to do any harm—they bounced on the ground like peas. At this juncture General Hamilton came up and ordered the advance guard to go on and leave the flank fight to the main body. Some trekked on while the firing continued all afternoon. We camped at 2 o'clock Later on the rest of the division came in. They had captured five Boer ambulances and sustained a loss of a few wounded. Our casualties, except the drivers and mules, were nil, but we had had our baptism of fire all right and were correspondingly happy. The men will be steadied by having been "shooted over" and are now ready for business. Their conduct today was admirable and the fact that we had no casualties is no criterion of the warmness of the situation during the first part of our artillery play.

DIVISION THREATENED AMONG THE ALLIES.

Great Britain, Germany and Japan are not Likely to Withdraw Their Troops From Pekin.

LI HUNG CHANG'S REAL CHARACTER IS SHOWN.

London Daily Mail Exposes the True Nature of the Scheme—His Most Recent Offer to the Powers—Promises to Negotiate to Restore Peace.

St Petersburg Sept 2. The official messager publishes the following despatch dated Pekin, August 29 from the Russian Minister M. De. Giers,—There is an unconfirmed rumer that Prince Ching has been appointed regent, but is afraid to return here unless the foreign envoys will guarantee his liberty. The dignataries remaining in Pekin have consequently resolved to petition the deplomatists in the interest of an amelioration of the situation to invite Prince Ching to return to Pekin and to give explanations.

London, Sept. 1.—The diplomatic world has not yet recovered from the shock which was inflicted upon it by the right about face on the part of Russia and the encouragement given to this charge of policy by the United States. As the powers have not yet signified their intentions regarding the proposal, it is difficult to forcast the outsome. Judging from the tone of the British press, however, which undoubtedly expresses the opinion of the nations, the British Government will scarcely nullify itself by evacuating Pekin on the flimsy protest that negotiations would be facilitied. From what is known of the virility and martial spirit of Germany and Japan it seems likely that they will take the same course, in which case Britain, Germany and Japan would form one faction, and Russia, the United States and France another. An examination of the U. S. reply to Russia's note reveals that the McKinley Administration has left itself a loophole of escape from committing itself itself too strongly to Russia's underhand design. "To prevent a recurrence of disorders and to bring about permanent peace in China," is stated to be the main object of the negotiations now suggested. As the powers have long ago decided that such object could only be attained by force, it seems a little late in the day for Russia to back out of the coalition and reopen the serious and absurd discussions of months ago.

WHAT LI HUNG WANTS.

London, Sept. 1.—The Daily Mail says Li Hung Chang only wants somebody to negotiate with. The wily old man has such faith in his persuasiveness, he knows so well the power of speech, that he is convinced that if only he can find an opponent worthy of his glib tongue he will manage to talk things over until a point is reached at which the representatives of Western civilization will be ready to offer a handsome apology, which the Celestial, after consultation with his Government, will be prepared to accept. When the choice lies between talking and action, Li Hung Chang, like the Little Englander, would always choose talk. "That," as Mr. Dooley has expressed it, "is his game." No bones can be broken and nothing can be lost so long as the talking can be kept up; and Li Hung Chang is not the man to let conversation languish.

OCEAN RECORD LOWERED.

The Big Steamer Deutschland Lowers Both the Eastern and Western Passages of the Atlantic.

New York, Sept. 1.—The famous express steamer Deutschland ofo the Hamburg-American Line has again eclipsed al previous records for fast trans-Atlantic traveling. She has broken the eastern and western records. Her time on the voyage just ended in 5 days, 12 hours, 29 minutes, between the Mole, at the entrance of Cherbourg harbor, and the Sandy Hook lightship.

At noon on the 31st she passed the record for the fastest day's run, making 584 knots. Her average speed was 23-02 knots per hour.

TWO MINERS KILLED IN EXPLOSION.

They Were Putting Caps on a Charge of Dynamite in the Cordova Mine at Marmora Ont.

Marmora, Ont., Sept. 1.—A dreadful accident occurred last evening at the Cordova exploration mine. Two men, Ira Derry, of Malone, and Mr. McLaughlin, of Marlton, were finishing loading drill holes in the mine, and were putting caps on the last charge of dynamite, when an explosion took place. Both men were killed instantly. Derry belonged to the Canadian Order of Oddfellows, Eldorado Lodge.

BOTH MAY LOSE THEIR SEATS.

Publication of Transvaal Letters Likely to Result in Defeat of Clark and Labuchere.

London, Sept. 3.—Since the publication of the Transvaal letters of Dr. Clark M. P., and Henry Labourchere M. P., found in Pretoria, strong political feeling has prevailed among their constituencies.

Clark has been called on to resign, but he flatly refused. His constituents are mostly crofters and fishermen, who care less about the war than their grievances. Clark has hitherto been popular in Caithness, and may win after a stiff contest.

Labouchere has less chance of being returned, but his present intention is to again seek the suffrages of Northhampton, where, since the war commenced, he has been refused a hearing. It is probable that in case of defeat he may be offered an Irish seat by the Nationalists. This offer would not be made to any other Englishman.

The general impression on both sides of the controversy is that Colonial Secretary Chamberlain overstepped the mark publishing the letter of Ellis. It was written by a private individual, and merely asked information. Ellis is a Quaker and much respected in the House of Commons.

BETRAYED HIS COUNTRY.

Henry Vance Gets 99 Years Imprisonment for Deserting the American Army and Joining the Enemy.

Chicago, Sept. 1.— A special to The Tribune from San Francisco says.

Musician Henry Vance, late U.S.V., was brought from the Philippines on the transport Thomas, under sentence of 99 years imprisonment at Alcatraz.

This man, it was proven, not only deserted the ranks of the American army, but took up arms against his comrades, and while serving as a major with Filipinos attacked wagon trains and escort parties.

Vance was captured, court martialed and sentenced to be shot, but owing to the clemency of President McKinley his punishment was commuted to 99 years imprisonment.

WAR BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE.

The alarmists are hard at work, both in France and England, and the air is heavy with rumors of war. Singularly enough, both countries disavow any intention of going to war unless forced to do so as a matter of defence. In England the feeling is that France is preparing for an invasion. In France they admit that warlike preparations are in progress, but they claim that these preparations have no further purpose than to place the country in readiness for an invasion by England. The Pall Mall Gazette prints a lengthy and alarming article from an anonymous French correspondent, which will not help matters any. That the French government is preparing for war there is no longer any doubt, says this alarmist. From every barrack around Paris that boasts a range comes the sound of rifle practice. It must be some urgent cause that leads the usually parsimonious Ministry of War to this waste of store ammunition. And so on in the same strain. On the other hand the regular Paris correspondent of the same journal says that while there is no doubt that France is making warlike preparations, there is no evidence that those preparations have in view an attack upon England. Doubtless sensational journalism is responsible for much of the alarm that exists in both countries.

DURATION OF THE BOER WAR.

No one can blame the people of Great Britain for being annoyed—angry, exasperated and savage are the words used by the London correspondents to describe the state of popular feeling—at the failure of Lord Roberts and his forces to bring the war in South Africa to an end. The British force is so much more numerous than that of the Boers that the delay in compelling the surrender of the latter is inexplicable. The continuation of the war interferes with mercantile business, unsettles the money market and bothers the politicians. The announcement that the end had come, which was expected to speedily follow the occupation of Pretoria, would be welcome throughout the Empire. The idea had prevailed, especially since Germany's wars of 1866 and 1870 with Austria and with France, that modern wars would be short and decisive, and that in the history of the future there would be short and decisive and that in the history of the future there would be nothing to correspond with the Seven Years' War of 1756-63 or the Thirty Years' War of 1618-48. If a war between two strong powers, like Britain and Russia or Germany and France, can be fought out in a year or two one would expect in a war between a strong power and a weak one to last only a few months. The distinction appears to be connected with a war of conquest and occupation. We can all remember that the United States in 1861 enlisted men for three months to crush the rebellion in the Southern States, and that the war lasted four years. In our own day, the forces of Spain, though generally victorious in the field, could not subdue Cuba in a war that lasted for years, and the army of the United States seems to be having a similar experience in the Philippine Islands. The old idea of the rooster fighting better in his own barnyard, may have something to do with the stubbornness of the Cubans, the Filipinos and the Boers. But Lord Roberts, we may be sure is not going to make a failure in South Africa, after a career of almost continuous success. His backers in Britain will have to exercise the grace of patience and they might afford to give the General credit for doing the very best that can be done. Certainly there should be no notion of swapping horses while crossing the stream.

"LOST AND FOUND"

Carelessness in New York Department Stores.

The carelessness of the shopping public is marvellous. You begin to feel after awhile that people who are so thoughtless don't deserve to have anything. We never receive handkerchiefs at the "Lost and Found" desk unless a very handsome one is brought to us, and we accept it under protest. Neither do our customers often inquire for them, possibly because they think they dropped them in the street.

Umbrellas are among the articles most frequently lost. Sometimes on a rainy day the desk looks like a bargain counter of umbrellas.

Strange as it may seem, pocketbooks are third in the list of articles most often lost. There is never a day in which from one to eight pocketbooks do not either find their way to the desk or are reported as lost in the store.

A woman came the other day to say that she had given the baby her purse to play with and he had opened it and dropped out two $10 bills, for which she wished us to make search. It is seldom that a purse is picked up that does not contain one or two rings and some other small pieces of jewelry.

Many capes, jackets and furs are dropped. A customer once reported that she was afraid of pickpockets and so had taken off her handsome diamond watch and was carrying it in her hand. Unfortunately she had laid it down somewhere and couldn't find it.

Gloves and veils are frequently picked up and parcels innumerable. Garters seem to have a fashion of getting away from the wearers, and sometimes a stray bustle finds its way to the desk. Customers when they miss something usually go to the counter where they think they left it. If they don't find it there they are prone to insinuate that the girl behind the counter got it.

Now, it is an astonishing fact that customers seldom find anything. The superintendent is surprised when an article is brought to the desk by a shopper. It is the clerks and the little cash girls who turn over anything that they may find. It is my experience that our girls, who have small salaries, are constantly exposed to temptation and every day see pretty things they would like and cannot have are almost invariably honest.

Conscience plays strange pranks sometimes. Only last week we received through the mail a box of jewelry. There were trinkets of every kind in it, rings, breastpins, chains, bracelets, lockets, in all enough to stock a country store. Every piece had been removed from its card, and there was no name or message. It was recognized as belonging to our jewelry department, but how so much got away without being missed remains a mystery. Such a quantity could hardly have been taken by a regular shoplifter. One theory is that some one in the department took it and afterward acknowledged the theft at confession and the priest ordered the jewelry returned to us. We have had several cases of that kind.

On another occasion we received a box of expensive handkerchiefs. Within was a card. It read: "I am afraid the innocent will suffer, so I send these back to you, although I know you don't need them and I do."

Whenever any one asks at the desk for any article they have lost in the store we ask for a description. It would be amusing if it were not annoying to see how indignant the average woman gets at this question. She considers it an imputation that she is not honest, and she often resents it in the most energetic manner.

Altogether the life of the man in charge of the "Lost and Found" desk is by no means pleasant.

Pretty Experiments.

There are many tricks and experiments that can be performed by boys and girls without the aid of expensive or intricate apparatus. Here are two good ones which fulfill this condition and one well worth trying: How many of you know that lads, lasses and lucifers have likes and dislikes in common? The average boy would prefer a sweetmeat to a bath at any time, and, strange to say, a common lucifer match has the same fastidious taste. If you want to test this curious quality get a basin of water and arrange a number of matches on the surface in the form of a star.

When the match heads are all closely together in the centre of the basin touch the water with a piece of soap. Like a little boy they will run away from it as fast as they can. The matches will make for the side of the basin without the least possible delay.

Now take out the soap and touch the water with a piece of sugar and you will see a strange sight. All the matches will return to the centre of the basin, and appear to feed on the sugar with the greatest avidity.

Springtime

Is the sweetest season in human life, as it is in Nature generally. It is the time of promise. As the young girl draws near to that mysterious line "Where womanhood and girlhood meet," her whole destiny is in a measure being determined. How often the sweet young girl, under the influence of the change, withers and droops like some blighted bud. Nature generally needs some little help at this critical period, and this help in its best form is contained in Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, and gives the vigor of perfect health to the womanly organs. It contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine, nor other narcotic.

Miss Emma Lee, of Williford, Sharp Co., Ark., writes: "I was suffering severely and tried several doctors' remedies, but received only very little relief; therefore, I feel it my duty to write and let other sufferers know what your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' have done for me. I took eight bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' eight of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' six vials of the 'Pellets,' also one bottle of your 'Compound Extract of Smart-Weed.' As soon as I had taken the first bottle I could see that the medicine was helping me. I had disease of internal organs with bronchitis and catarrh. I also used the local treatment you suggested."

The sluggish liver can be cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

THE SECRET OF EXPRESSION

Various Things That Help to Make a Woman's Face Attractive.

Many of the most fascinating women of history have been without a single beauty of feature. Therefore their attraction must have depended on expression, either inborn or acquired. Its subtleties depend as much on temperament as on education. A perfectly irregular face is sometimes magnetic by reason of its animation and earnestness.

Irregularity of that kind is preferable to a beautiful and immobile countenance that smiles perpetually like an everlasting blue sky. There is only a hair line between repose and stagnation and one is as pleasing as the other is dull.

It is the quality, rather than the quantity of the mind that affects expression. Excessive brain work is detrimental—it strains and contorts the features, tightens the lips, wrinkles the forehead and dulls the eyes, but on the other hand where beauty is absent a certain amount of brain work will add it to the face for the eyes gain depth and earnestness, the nose becomes determined, and the shapeless lips and jaws grow powerful. Expression to be really beautiful must correspond with and enhance the individuality already expressed.

Violet temper renders the eyes dry and staring, making them devoid of that clear serenity which is so charming. Concentrated thought and pessimism, jealousy or discontent, deprive the mouth of its mobility and compress the lips to a thin line in time. Cynicism has a lasting effect on the corners of the mouth.

No matter how ugly a face is, it may come to possess rugged grandeur and homely sweetness, but neither of these is to be obtained by those who frivol, vacillate or have no appreciation for the higher things of life and the larger emotions. A pretty expression, a poor mind and a shallow heart cannot add to the expression of a face.—Chicago News.

A True American.

He was one of the most peculiar characters of the many who lived in the woods of the Northwest, was John Bordine, and most of all he was a squaw man. His wife was an old Pottawatomie squaw, and it was very hard to believe that a man like Bordine, with a college education and the refinement of a good family, could live with such a person, but he did live with her until he died, and they seemed to be much more contented than many apparently more congenial married couples. John Bordine was a foreigner, but he had adopted America first as his home and then as his own country.

There were plenty of persons who said that he laid claim to being an American because he believed that as an American he could sell more skins and could more easily collect bounties paid for wolves, etc.

It was in the spring of 1880 that sentiment against John Bordine, the squaw man, changed. There was away north of the Menominee reservation a soldier buried. Above this grave John Bordine planted an American flag, a very curious emblem, but it was the nearest approach to the Stars and Stripes that Bordine's limited wardrobe and that of his squaw wife could furnish. Bordine had taken a part of his squaw's old, faded blue gingham skirt. This he made into his flag, as the field of stars, and the stripes were alternate stripes of white linen and red flannel.

A hunter found the flag floating over the grave, and it was Bordine's squaw who told him how it was placed there and how Bordine had fired his gun three times over the grave, and then the hunter knew that the squaw man had remembered what he had forgotten, Memorial Day. Bordine refused to take any credit for his act of patriotism, and to the day he died longed for a chance to fight for his new country. He is dead now, and on a plain headstone is written, "Here lies John Bordine, a patriotic American."

Bees Leave Town by Train.

A great swarm of bees made their appearance one morning on Canal street and for a time practically took possession of the "starter's stand" at the corner of Bourbon and Canal streets. Starter Hodge is unable to say from what direction they came, but volunteers the statement that they made themselves perfectly at home while his guests. For a time he was apprehensive lest he might be compelled to "shut up shop," but it soon developed that the mission of the little insects, whatever else it might be, lay not in the direction of harm; so that Mr. Hodge's attention to business was uninterrupted, and the bees, while attracting a great deal of attention, were not molested. Indeed, they commanded the perfect respect of every one.

Later the honey-gatherers boarded the West End train in a body and went to the lake, where they probably colonized. For a time their presence on the cars made the passengers somewhat nervous; but when it was explained by the conductor that the bees were harmless unless attacked, conditions improved and confidence was restored.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Wire Nails and Old Nails.

Careful experiments made at Cornell University are said to show that: "First, cut nails are superior to wire nails in all positions; second, the main advantage of the wire nail is due to its possessing a sharp point; third, if cut nails were pointed they would be thirty per cent. more efficient in direct tension; fourth, wire nails without points have but one-half their ordinary holding power; fifth, the surface of the nail should be slightly rough, but not barbed—barbing decreases the efficiency of cut nails about thirty-two per cent." The pointed end enables the nail to enter wood without breaking its fibre excessively, thus preserving its grip. A serious defect of wire nails is their readiness to rust. They are made generally of a sort of soft steel, and steel rusts more readily than some other forms of iron. In some parts of the country, it is said, shingles put on with wire nails drop off after six or eight years.—Baltimore Sun.

Those who have had only glimpses into Bohemia can scarcely imagine the real heartsickness of a fuller knowledge of it, for the first glimpses are apt to seem most facinating; but any man who knows Bohemia thoroughly is apt to have a very grave face as he hears a woman say so. No one can live her best in Bohemia; it is far easier to live your worst there.—Ladies Home Journal.

Man Drunk, Block Signals Sober.

The introduction of block signals on railroads running fast express trains has lessened the danger and also created a feeling of safety in the minds of those who are compelled to travel to any extent.

The pilot on the engine of the postal express when it reached New London bore the signs of an accident in which some track walker had lost his life. The engineer knew nothing of it, nor could he tell when the supposed accident happened.

None of the operators could shed any light on the mystery, but, strange to say, the operator in the tower just east of the Westerley station failed to respond. Repeatedly he was called up, but to no purpose.

An investigation showed that he was lying on the floor, dead drunk. From the appearance of things it looked to those present at the station as if the man had set out deliberately to celebrate. All the signals were set at safety, and there was no reason why the towerman should have been disturbed.

Not Polite to Interrupt.

"I want to get off"—the man with the round, expressionless face remarked slowly, and the thin, hustling conductor rung up the car and glared at the impassive passenger who did not move, but continued with the same even tones—"a good joke I heard the other day."

"Say, do you want a transfer to Bellevue?" was the ungrateful way the bellringer received this contribution to contemporaneous humor.

A Large Fish.

On Wednesday last, while C. B. Routley and his little son were paddling over to McCracken's Landing, Stony Lake for water, the child, who was holding a trawling line, hooked a 38 1-2 pound maskinonge. The fish was only landed after an exciting struggle, which lasted half an hour.

Off the Track

This means disaster and death when applied to a fast express train. It is equally serious when it refers to people whose blood is disordered and who consequently have pimples and sores, bad stomachs, deranged kidneys, weak nerves and that tired feeling. Hood's Sarsaparilla puts the wheels back on the track by making pure, rich blood and curing these troubles.

Constipation is cured by Hood's Pills. 25 cents.

The Late Mrs. W. J. Howson.

It is with regret that the Times is forced to announce the death of Elizabeth McCamus, wife of Mr. W. J. Howson, of lot 2, con 6, Dummer, which sad event occurred on Friday last. On Tuesday she went to Lakefield to visit her brother, the Rev. J. A. McCamus, returning Wednesday in her usual health. Thursday, while going about doing her work, she was stricken with apoplexy and on Friday passed away. The deceased was the second daughter of John and Elizabeth McCamus, Keene, and was born in England in 1843. She was a devoted mother and wife, and will be sadly missed. FRIENDS HELP.

St. Paul Park Incident.

"After drinking a cup and a half of coffee once a day I always felt languid and dull, having no ambition to get to my morning duties. Then in about an hour or so, weak, nervous derangement of the heart and stomach would come over me with such force I would frequently have to lie down.

"At other times I had severe headaches; stomach finally became affected and digestion so impaired that I had serious chronic dyspepsia and constipation. Mrs. H. A. Hober, for many years State president of the W. C. T. U., a personal friend, told me she had been greatly benefited by quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee; she was troubled for years with asthma. She said it was no cross to quit coffee when she found she could have a delicious an article as Postum Food Coffee.

"Another lady, Mrs. Mary Baker, of Red Wing, Minn., had been troubled with chronic dyspepsia for years and found immediate relief on ceasing coffee and beginning Postum Food Coffee twice a day. She was wholly cured. Mrs. Judge Stucker of Minneapolis told me that Postum Food Coffee was a Godsend to her, her heart trouble having been relieved after leaving off coffee and taking Postum Food Coffee.

"So many such cases came to my notice that I concluded coffee was the cause of my trouble and I quit and took up Postum. I am more than pleased to say that my days of trouble have disappeared. I am well and happy." Mrs. Mary Harrington, St. Paul Park, Minn.

The Band Concerts.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I notice that 57th Band has cancelled their open air concerts for the season.

I hope the band will re-consider this matter, and play through September. Many, who are supporters of the band, have been away to the lakes during the past two months or more, and have not had the pleasure of attending these open air concerts.

I am sure, with that generosity which is characteristic of Mr. Gliddon and the band, they will continue the concerts a month longer.

I am aware the band requires funds, and I would suggest that an opportunity be offered at the park concerts to those who desire to contribute. It costs money to buy music and pay for instruments and other expenses, and my suggestion is to procure a number of cash boxes, so that money may be dropped in on entering the park. I suggest that the matter be taken up by the public, outside the band, and I am sure that from $50 to $100 could be obtained in this way at each concert.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, &c.,
A LOVER OF MUSIC.
Peterborough, Sept. 1.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

BASEBALL TO-DAY.

Bowmanville will be here to-day to play the return game with Peterborough in the Midland League series. The game is exciting great interest, and this being a holiday, the biggest crowd of the season should be on hand to witness the event.

The Cobourg second team will arrive in town this morning to play the Park Nines. The Park Nines are as likely a lot of fellows as one would wish to find, and they promise to not do a thing with their opponents. The Park Nine will be as follows—Smith c, Meagher or McCorry p, Johnston 1b, Whitcroft 2b, Craig 3b, Davidson ss, Kempt, McFadden and Derocher out field.

AT THE RANGES.

At the closing of the D.R.A. Matches Pte. Fitzgerald won $4 in the Governor General's match by scoring 172 points against the winner's 186. In the Extra Series Sergt. Bartlett won $4 by scoring 23 against the winner's 25.

GOLF.

The ladies meet to-day, when the handicap and draw will be made for the fall tournament.

DISTRICT GOOD TEMPLARS.

Quarterly Session of Good Templars on Labor Day.

The next quarterly session of District Lodge, No. 10, I.O.G.T., will be held at Zion Lodge, Hall's Glen, Dummer, on Monday, September 3rd (Labor Day). The delegates and members of the various lodges in this district will meet at Bridgenorth at 7 a.m. of that day, and embark on the trim little steamer, "Lady of the Lake," for McCracken's Landing, which is but a mile distance from the place of meeting. There will be a short session in the morning and an afternoon session, returning in the evening. It is expected that quite a number will take in the trip and a pleasant outing is anticipated. A 'bus will be provided to take those going from town to and from Bridgenorth, which will leave at 6 a.m. sharp.

STRICT CARE AND ATTENTION

In the age of worry hustle and business competition, strict care and attention in the filling of your physician's perscription is absolutely necessary for the safety and welfare of your family. We guarantee accuracy in dispensing and purest of drugs.

Paine's Celery Compound.

Will quickly banish those tired feelings that make life a burden in the hot weather. It braces the nerves, builds up the tissue, bone and flesh, gives a healthy appetite and perfect digestion. Paine's Celery Compound is the best and safest of all medicines for summer use. James Lynch, Druggist, Peterborough, Ont.

Nearly a Fatality.

A drowning accident very nearly occurred at Sturgeon Point a day or two ago. A young girl, who was visiting at Fenelon Falls, while in bathing got beyond her depth, and after struggling desperately, went down for the second time. Mr. C. Matthews, of Toronto, who had been attracted by the cries of the ladies, jumped into the water and rescued the girl. She was brought to the shore in an insensible condition, but recovered after being relieved of some of the water she had swallowed.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other goods offered for sale in our store.

The Band Concerts.

A letter appear in another column that should receive the careful attention of Mr. Gliddon and members of the band. The writer takes reasonable ground, and we are sure his suggestion will receive careful consideration by the band. There is no doubt that these open air concerts are appreciated to a far greater extent than one would suppose. The thousands who attend, and the applause which follows selection, is ample evidence of this.

To Start To-Day.

Mr. T. Blackwell, with a gang of men, will start to-day to survey the route for the Cement Company's electric tramway between Lakefield and Buckley's lake. The road will be about a mile-and-a-half in length, and will be operated by electric power supplied from Young's Point. Mr. Chas. Wynn has the contract for supplying poles for the Cement Company, and will begin operations in Down's swamp at once.

"Example is Better Than Precept."

It is not what we say, but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that tells the story. Thousands of testimonials are examples of what Hood's has done for others, and what it will do for you.

Dyspepsia – "I was weak and had fainting spells. Dyspepsia and indigestion in severe form troubled me. Five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla made me well and strong." MRS. WILLIAM VANVALKENBURGH, Whitby, Ont.

A Good Medicine – "We have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla in our family as a spring medicine and used Hood's Pills for biliousness and found both medicines very effective. For impure blood we know Hood's Sarsaparilla is a good medicine." R. S. PELTON, publisher Bee, Atwood, Ont.

Bell Pianos

At Toronto Fair.

The attention of all music lovers and piano buyers is directed to the exhibit of Bell Pianos and Organs in the Musical Pavilion at Toronto Exhibition. The pianos shown are not specially prepared for exhibition, but are samples taken from the company's regular stock, and for touch, tone, and finish, cannot be duplicated anywhere. We invite a critical inspection and comparison of our instruments, each one being guaranteed for ten years ensuring to the purchaser a lasting satisfaction.

We have also obtained the sole right for Canada for the manufacture of the wonderful "Apollo," a new and wonderful automatic piano-playing instrument, which will be shown for the first time at the Company's exhibit The "Apollo" is built on the experience of earlier inventions. It is in no sense a mechanical instrument. It can be attached to any piano, and the player can at all times control the volume and expression, and renders the most difficult pieces of music in a truly masterly way. Whoever owns a piano should have an "Apollo."

At the city warerooms, 70 King Street West, can be seen an exact duplicate of the stock shown at the exhibition, and a great array of second-hand pianos and organs of nearly every make, which we are clearing out at low prices, the terms being made to suit the purchaser. If you are thinking of purchasing an instrument, don't fail to inspect this stock at Bell Piano Warerooms, 70 King Street West, TORONTO.

Conroy all their property situated at Deschenes, on the Ottawa River, in the Province of Quebec, on Lots 15 and 16, in the First Range of the Township of Hull, south of the right of way of the Pontiac Pacific Railway

Messrs. Conroy also undertake to complete the new power house already nearly built, the power generated in which is rented to the E. B. Eddy Co., Ltd, and to turn the whole over to the Company as a going concern for the sum of Four Hundred Thousand Dollars, of which Two Hundred Thousand is to be paid in cash, balance in fully paid up ordinary shares of the Company on Oct. 1st, 1900. The whole to be to the satisfaction of the Company's expert.

Until the before mentioned date, the vendors have agreed to allow interest at 6 p. c. upon any moneys paid by the Company to them, on account of said purchase, thereby ensuring the earning power of all moneys subscribed and paid from the date of payment.

THE PLANT CONSISTS OF:

Power plant leased to the Hull Electric Company, which consists of two 52-inch Turbines, equal to 332 horse power.
Large power house, the power in which is leased to the E. B. Eddy Co., Ltd.
10 61-inch Turbines, equal to 2,280 horse power.

1 66-inch Turbine and 1 33-inch Turbine, equal to 175 horse power.
Spare power flume not leased, but which can at a small cost be made to develop about 500 horse power.

WATER POWER BONDS AND PREFERENCE STOCK AS AN INVESTMENT.

It is impossible to find conditions which secure for invested capital greater safety than is exhibited by water power propositions when such are situated upon such a reliable stream as the Ottawa River and when there is a constant demand in the immediate neighborhood for the power to be generated. That Ottawa requires the power is evidenced by the fact that all the power generated by the works of the Company has already been leased for terms of years with a certainty that at the end of the terms the prices paid will be increased.

It may be fairly accepted that the transmission of power electrically has passed all experimental stages, as is witnessed by the successful operations of such power plants as the Niagara Falls Power Co., the Hudson River Power and Transmission Co., Chambly Power Company and others.

The Five per cent. Bonds of the Niagara Power Co.—$9,000,000 in amount—are selling at 109 whilst the Bonds of the Hudson River Power Co. and of the Chambly Power Co. are selling at substantial premiums.

Bonds, and even Preference Stock, such as are now offered may fairly be considered as equal if not superior to any investment as to safety, whilst yielding a considerably better return than Bank Stocks and other investments which carry with them onerous responsibilities.

It is intended to get the Shares and Bonds of this Company listed upon the Montreal Stock Exchange.

PROVISIONAL DIRECTORS.

E. B. Eddy, Esq., President E. B. Eddy Co, Ltd., Hull, Match and Paper Manufactures; Louis Simpson, Vice-President Northrop Loom Co., Ltd., Cotton Manufacturer; J. M. Shanly, Esq., Great Northern Railway Co., Civil Engineer.

The Preference Shareholders will elect two directors.

The match on Monday between the Cobourg and Peterborough teams resulted in a victory for the visitors by a score of 21 to 9, and one innings. The rain interfered with the game, and doubtless accounted for the heavy score against our boys.

Football.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the Rugby club was held in the Oriental Parlors last evening.

The interest manifested at the meeting augurs well for the success of football this year.

After Sec. McClellan had read the minutes of the last meeting, the election of officers was proceeded with, the following being chosen—

Patrons—Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McWilliams, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McClellan.

Hon. Pres.—Mr. C. F. McGill.

Chaplain.—Rev. J. H. Bushell.

President.—Mr. H. R. H. Kenner.

1st Vice.-Pres.—Mr. H. B. Burnham.

2nd Vice-Pres.—A. A. Hollingshead.

Captain.—R. F. McWilliams.

Manager.—J. M. McLeod.

Secy.-Treas.—R. S. Clarry.

Asst. Secy.-Treas.—H. Rush.

Exec. Com.—The Officers and Messrs. Rickey, McPherson, Campbell and McClellan.

Team Com.—The Captain and Messrs. G. H. McWilliams, H. B. Burnham and Dr. A. Scott.

It was decided to enter a team in the Intermediate series of the O.R.F.A., and we hope that the boys will duplicate their success of last year and again land the Intermediate championship of Canada. It was left to the discretion of the officers whether a team should be entered in the Junior Series. We have the the material in town to form a very strong junior team, but the question of finances troubles, as the teams have to travel a considerable distance to get matches.

A committee of ten will be chosen to canvass those interested in football, and it is hoped that they will be able to raise enough to start the boys off on a good financial basis.

Practices were arranged for Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays in the P.A.A.A. grounds. There is nothing like getting out early and being in good condition by the time the season opens.

GOLD FIELD IN MICHIGAN.

Precious Metal is Found Near Nahma on the Sturgeon River.

Marinette, Mich., Sept 5.—A new gold field has been discovered on the Sturgeon river, near Nahma, on Big Bay De Noque Mich. Prospectors are now at work there and gold is said to have been taken out in laying quantities.

James Hutton, steward on the steam yacht Bonita, has resigned his position and leaves this week for Nahma. He is a returned Klindiker and spent two years in Alaska. With a companion he will hunt for gold on the banks of the Sturgeon river. Hutton is quite enthusiastic over the prospects of opening up a new Klondike near home.

Preparations are being made to mine for the precious metal on quite an extensive scale, and Hutton will bring all his Alaskan experience to bear in the new work.

WAR IS LOOMING UP.

Trouble Between Rouman.a and Bulgaria Becomes Most Serious.

Vienna, Sept, 4.—Many Bulgarians hold ing high positions in their own land have been compromised in cases of murder tried by the Roumanian authorities. Among secret letters discovered was onefrom Savaroff, president of the Macedonian Committee, announcing that he was sending several Bulgarian officers and soldiers in civil dress to Bucharest to dynamite the prisoners and liberate the Macedonian agitators confined there. Others letters showed that Savaroff was personally cognizant of all the details of a score of murders in Roumania.

The Roumanian Government peremptorily demanded the arrest of Savaroff, the payment of a large sum of money, and the institution of criminal proceedings against a dozen or more members of the committee. This has led trouble, and war between the two countries is imminent.

Many excesses against the Bulgarians are taking place everywhere. A leading Bucharest paper says that an army corps is being mobilized, and it is well known that the Roumanian guards on the Bulgarian frontier have been increased. The quarrel, unless quickly settled, is bound to breed serious mischief, in spite of the Balkan agreement of April, 1897.

HAD GOOD EFFECT.

Visit of the French Gunboat Ended the Anti-Foreign Outbreak at Swatow.

Paris, Sept. 4.—The French Consul at Canton, under date of onday, September 3, cables that the French gunboat Comete has returned to Canton. He adds that her trip to Swatow has had a good effect, and has ended the troubles and agitation against foreigners which were spreading in the region north of Kouang Toung (or "Eastern Province.")

The consul also reports that a missionary has been attacked and wounded in the district of Fat Kong, 100 kilometers from Canton.

DISGUSTED WITH RUSSIA.

Foreigners in Shanghai Amazed to the Proposal to Withdraw From Pekin.

London, Sept. 4.—A Standard correspondent says it is impossible to exaggerate the feeling of amazement, and indeed disgust, given rise to in Shanghai by Russia's proposal to withdraw from Pekin.

The Times' correspondent in Paris has received from a friend holding a high diplomatic post a letter, in which it is stated that the origin and motive of Russia's recent actions are to be found in a desire to correct the impression produced by Emperor William's statement that the appointment of Count von Waldersee to the chief command of the allied armies was largely due to the initiative of the Czar.

CARDER DOVE IN SHALLOW WATER.

Struck His Head on the Bottom and His Side Was Paralyzed.

HE WAS VISITING TORONTO

Doctors Hope to Pull Him Through. Was Bathing in Parkdale

John Carder, of Marmora, aged 26 years, is in the General Hospital with his right side paralyzed.

On Saturday afternoon Carder and some of his friends went to the old Parkdale water works for a swim. Carder ran out to the end of the wharf, and, seeing a boy in the water with only his head showing, concluded the water was deep enough to dive into, and accordingly he went in head-first off an eight foot pier.

The water was only two feet deep, and Carder struck his head on the bottom. He did not lose consciousness, but was unable to move. Recognising his danger from drowning, he held his breath until other bathers noticed his predicament and carried him ashore. He was paralyzed down the side from some injury to the brain, probably a blood clot.

Dr. G. G. Rowe attended the young man and he was removed to Toronto Junction, where Dr. McNamara was called. Upon Dr. McNammara's advice Carder was removed to the General Hospital, where Dr. Peters is attending him. It is expected he will recover the use of his limbs.

WANT THE PALACE SAVED.

Chinese are Negotiating for the Preservation of Great Palace.

Pekin, Sept. 4.—Chung Li, member of the Tsung-li-Yamen, and perfect of poloice, was arrested yesterday for complicity in the attecks on the Legations. He was military governor of Pekin, and has been turned over to the Japanese.

Members of the Tsung-li-Yamen are trying to negotiate with the generals of the allied forces, through Sir Robert Hart, Director of Imperial Customs, in order to prevent the destruction of the innermost palace of the Forbidden City. With the same object in view, the Russians have occupied the place.

ENGLAND WILL WAIT.

London, Sept. 4.—The Government is determined to consult with Sir Claude Macdonald, the British Minister at Pekin, before replying to the Russian note setting forth the Czar's policy in regard to China, but the great trouble in consulting with the British representative is the diffculty of exchanging despatches.

The Vienna correspondent of the Standard telegraphs that he learns from a good source that the Germans, Austrians and Italians will remain in Pekin after the Russians withdraw.

Shanghai and Hong Kong despatches express the utmost astonishment at the idea of evacuating Pekin.

The Daily News suggests editorially that Russia may have been made secret terms with China behind the backs of the powers.

The Statdard expresses gratification at the explanation that the United States Government does not approve of Russia's proceedings.

WILL THE POWERS NOW SPLIT IN CHINA

Some Reason to Hope That the United States Will Stand By Great Britain

AND DEFEAT THE AIMS OF THE RUSSIANS

Speculations as to the Combination or Disagreement of the Great Powers for the Settlement of the Chinese Difficulties.

London, Sept. 5, 4.15 a.m.

To-day's despatches from Shanghai and Tien Tsin refer to the hopeless confusion and mismanagement of the Chinese telegraph system, which may possibly account in part for getting news from Pekin. Another reason for the delay, doubtless, is the anxiety of the Chinese authorities to secure the evacuation of the capital. No efforts are being spared by them to bring this about. Their idea is that should the foreign ministers in Pekin be allowed free communication with their governments, the full extent of the complicity of the Chinese Government in the anti-foreign outrages would be revealed and would lead the allies to decide to remain until retribution

London, Sept. 5.

"Six months' rations for the British force," says the Tien Tsin correspondent of the Standard, wiring Aug. 27, "are being forwarded to Pekin." Newspaper correspondents are seriously handicapped by the bad arrangements of the telegraphs. Messages have been delayed and tampered with, and nothing has been safe unless mailed to Shanghai. A good deal of curiousity is felt here regarding the fate of the mail bag containing official and press despatches describing the entry into Pekin, which was sent by an admiral to Chefoo, in a Russian gunboat, and is reported not to have been received there. The proceedings of the Russians in and around Pekin are watched with some anxiety; the situation threatens to develop many complications. It is said that the Russians intend to take Shanghai Kwan. They have assumed complete possession of the Hai Ku Mai arsenal at Tien Tsin, and allow to none but Russians. The arsenal still contains thousands of pounds' worth of guns and ammunition. The Russians are charged with cutting the wire between this point and Pekin, and with committing various other petty annoyances.

Pekin, Tuesday, Aug. 2. Prince Ching is endeavouring to open negotiations with the allies. Yu Hsien Governor of Shanghai has sent a memorial to the throne asking for a reward for having invited 52 foreigners under his protection and for having afterwards killed them.

Pretoria, Sept, 3. General Baden Powell started for Capr Town Saturday.

London, Sept. 4, 1 a.m.—The explanations of the American circular note, which have been cabled here from Washington, have caused general astonishment. hatever the State Department may have meant to convey, I can answer for it that Downing street understood the United States Government to be supporting Russia's proposal for an immediate retirement from Pekin. I am not here speaking without due warrant.

The British Foreign Office has received two disagreeable surprises during the past week. They were justly annoyed at finding that Russia, after all her declarations of affection for the international concert, had calmly given orders for the retirement of the Russian troops and Legation, without even waiting to hear what the other powers thought of the move, but the attitude of the United Sattes was almost equally disconcerting. The British Government thought it was entitled to rely on American support in the endeavor to settle the Chinese question effectually.

Russian Selfishness.

The British official view is that this retirement from Pekin is only advantageous for Russia, which kills three birds with one stone. In the first place, she has troops free for use where she wants them most, namely, in Manchuria; secondly, she limits the expenditure of money, which in the present condition of her financies is highly desirable; thirdly, she prevents the possible removal of the Chinese seat of Government from Pekin, where, for reasons of her own, she particularly desires that it should remain. But in general the Russian withdrawal is a mistake, since the Chinese will simply believe that the powers are afraid of them, and there will be no reorganization, no permanent safety for foreigners and no guarantee of the "open door."

Possible Coalitions.

If Great Britain in her effort to secure a durable settlement once for all, could rely on a solid American backing she could put herself at the head of a combination of at least four powers and so defeat the Russian project. Were England and America united on this project Japan certainly and Germany probably would join them, but without the United States the combination would fall through, and England's effort to arrGnge the eastern question without the partitioning of China, or without leaving that empire in a condition to invite further intervention, may may have to be abandoned.

English statesmen thought that they had a right to count on American aid in pursuing their unselfish policy, which is for the common benefit of the civilized world, and will be deeply disappointed to find that they are mistaken, and that the American regard for the open door and Chinese integrity is limited to words if at this moment when the United States is asked to accept some amount of responsibility it hastily effaces itself and executes a precipitate retreat.

If They All Retire.

Active communications are now passing between London and Washington and London and Pekin. The final decision of the British Government can be easily predicted. Unless some prospect is held out of active support to the non-retirement policy of the United States it is probably that the Russian example will eventually be imitated by all the other powers. France in any case will follow Russia, and Germany may do the same, though with great reluctance, sooner than separate from her eastern and western neighbors. England, under these circumstances, will naturally feel that she is not called upon to incur the risks and burden of a winter occupation of Pekin, and will also withdraw after a vigorous protest and an attempt to convince the allied governments of the grievous mistake that is being made.

WAITING FOR A REPLY

to Russia.—Salisbury Trying to Have Russian Proposal Modified.

London, Sept. 4.—The absence of news regarding the actual situation of affairs fairs at Pekin continues as complete as the lack of authentic information regarding the ultimate attitude of the powers towards the proposals now before the concert.

Shanghai reports that an Imperial edict issued at Tai Yuan Fu appoints Li Hung Chang, Yung Lu, Hsu Tung (tutor of the heir apparent) and Prince Ching commissioners to negotiate peace.

Dour German warships arrived at Woo Sung yesterday, Sept. 3rd.

The unmistakable condemnnation of the proposal to withdraw immediately from Pekin, which is voiced from all the foreign colonies in the far east is taken in some quarters as a forecase of the opinion which may be expected from the Ministers when their views are obtainable. As already suggested, the Russian proposal are capable of modification, and it is thought in well-informed circles that Lord Salisbury is striving to conform them more closely to the terms first formulated by the Government at Washington.

According to a special despatch from St. Petersburg, dealing with the question of Manchuria, the Russian officials repudate any intention to permanent occupy or annex Manchuria. The despatch adds that Russia will claim no territorial concessions, provided the other powers refrain from so doing, and express the hope that the question of indemnities can be settled by the co-operation of the allied powers.

EASE AND DISEASE.

A Short Lesson on the Meaning of a Familiar Word.

Disease ist he opposite of ease. Webster defines disease as lack of ease, uneasiness, trouble, vexation, disquiet." It is a condition due to some derangement of the physical organism. A vast majority of the "dis-ease" from which people suffer is due to impure blood. Disease of this kind is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla which purifies enriches and vitalizes the blood. ENGLAND'S BIG WAR SCARE.

It is reported that the alarm is abroad in England, of a French war, and that the gathering of the vast stores and other preparation in the Channel ports of France have at last taken such a form that the belligerent hand of the republic will now certainly be raised to strike an early blow at England.

It seems to us we have heard something of this before, and, in fact, the same alarm has blossomed perennially for 834 years that is, since the Norman conquest, to bear fruit in parliamentary war grants for defense the English have never been called upon to make. As a matter of fact, there has never been a possibility of war between France and England since the first steamboat crossed from Dover to Calais, and the continued cry of "the French they come! they come!" should by this time have lost something of its efficacy in filling the British heart with fear. It seems, however, that it is not so and the alarmist retains his ridiculous power to stir the nation into transports of terror every time the French buy a new gun or order a regiment out to drill.

Suppose France had a spasm every time England strengthened the encampment at Aldershot or laid the keel of a new battleship in Chatham Docks. The first to deride her would be the English themselves, and, in fact, the Britons would be the object of ridicule if it were not that their agonies for the same causes had long since become a subject for mournful pity.

In the Crimea the French were England's allies, and showed them how Sebastopol was taken. Since then they have mutually stood by each other in the East, where the French took lower China, or Anam, while the British added Burmah to her Indian Empire. Similarly they have tipped each other the encouraging wink as the English fastened their grip upon Egypt and the French extended their domain in Algeria. Some adventurers had a clash over the Fashoda incident, but that was natural with those high spirits, and the issue they raised in the centre of Africa never was dignified by rising to international importance. Just now they are allies in China, up to the same mischief, but neither of them sufficiently in possession of the plunder to fight over its division.

But then, would they go to war for? Over the criticisms on the Dreyfus case, the famous cartoons in La Rire, the neglect of the English to support the Exposition, or because the cockney can't arrange a grammatical peace with the French irregular verb?

The very conditions of Europe tend to draw them together. Germany hated and feared by England, is reported, with more or less accuracy, to have joined hands with Russia, whom England equally fears and hates together with Japan, in proclaiming formal war with China. It may not be true that Kaiser and Czar have linked interests, but even the report of it yields the same reasons for more closely drawn relations between France and England. But the English alarmists will get their grants. Mr. Chamberlain, who professes to give credit to the immence of hostilities, will divert attention from his South African blunders, and the wrath of Napoleon standing on the shores of Boulogne gazing with awful menace at the white cliffs of "Albion perfide" will haunt the troubled sleep of the Englishman.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Marshalltown, Iowa, is a little city of 12,000 people that has owned and operated a municipal waterworks system for the past twenty-three years and a municipal street lighting system for the past twelve years, and has no desire to abandon municipal ownership either.

Sir Charles Tupper is walking with a crutch now, and there are some of our Grit contemporaries mean enough the insinuate that nothing short of an ambulance will suffice for him after the elections.

REPARTEE ON DRESS PARADE

An Incident of One of the English Reviews at Aldershot.

During some manouevres at Aldershot to gain practice in the vedette system of employing cavalry to watch and report the movements of an enemy the mounted troops employed on the occasion were extended at intervals in a long line reaching some miles.

The major at one end of the line had occasion to send a message to the captain, who was at the opposite end:

"The enemy are in force in front."

The signal was passed along the line all right till it came to a man stationed about midway, who thought fit to add a private message of his own, intended for the benefit of his neighbor:

"Have you a chaw of tobacco?"

Unluckily, his comrade thought these words were part of the signal message, and they were passed from man to man until they reached the captain.

The latter was somewhat astonished at this request, but sent back this answer:

"I don't use tobacco, but there are two cigars."

The major found the cigars welcome, and as he lighted one, sent back the answer: "Who said you did?"

M. Faure's Irreverence.

Here is a laughable and true little anecdote about President Faure's historic visit to St. Petersburg. It seems that the Cathedral of Sts. Peter and Paul at St. Petersburg has a remarkable repeating echo, which is nowhere so pronounced as in the passages leading to the subterranean crypt where the famous collection of holy relics is stored. Moreover, as might be expected, the approaches to the crypt are somewhat drafty. Just at the moment when in solemn silence the group of ecclesiastical and other dignitaries in attendance on the president and czar were ushering their illustrious visitors into the hallowed vaults, M. Faure's voice was heard in the half darkness to this effect: "Mollard!"

Immediately and as if by enchantment, innumerable other eerie voices resounded and re-echoed the word on all sides.

"Mollard! Molllard! Mo-oll-a-rd!"

M. Mollard is a diplomatist of parts, but it was distinctly uncanny to hear his homely name thundering away thus in the obscurity of the crypt. The Russian clergy present were scandalized, the laymen were astounded.

But the astonishment became more intense when the president's voice droned out once more:

"My hat!"

And once more the noisy echoes took up the words and bandied them to and fro among the gloomy arches: "My hat! My hat! My ha-at!"

M. Mollard brought the president's hat. And M. Faure immediately and unconsciously did the cause of the third republic much mischief by putting it on while he made his obeisance to the sacred relics of the imperial church of Russia.

The Deception of Sight.

"I'm through trying to prevent crime," exclaimed Brown.

"What's up now?" asked Cumpstead, wiping his fingers on the towel that swung from the counter.

"Well, it was this way," his friend went on. "You see, I went over to the Lyceum theatre the other evening—George Nicolai's a friend of mine, you know—and after the first act I strolled out into the confectionery next door for a package of cigarettes.

"There was a girl waiting on the crowd there. I bought a large package of the brand I smoke and handed the young lady in payment ten cents. She rang up five on the register. 'Ah, ha,' I said to myself, 'knocking down, I see.' Then a man came along and bought three glasses of ginger ale for himself and two friends. He gave the girl fifteen cents. She rang up another nickel. Then a fellow bought a quarter's worth of cigars and she rang up five dollars. Light began to dawn upon me. I understood. 'That girl,' I thought, 'knocks down a while, then rings up a big amount to sorter square her stealings.' I watched her a few moments longer. I saw her ring up three nickels on three purchases of a dime each, and then I made up my mind to tip her off to George. I couldn't see my friend Nicolai done like that, you know. So I went and told him. He listened till I had finished, and then what do you suppose happened?"

"I don't know," replied Cumpstead, "what did?"

"He laughed a loud, hoarse, winter weather laugh and told me the register was busted and had been for three weeks, and that nickels and five dollars were all that it would ring. And I've been buying things for Lyceum employes ever since."

The onyx is apt to cause terror to the wearer, as well as ugly dreams.

Hopeless and Helpless.

The consequences of a diseased condition of the stomach and digestive and nutritive system are most disastrous to the whole body. One by one every organ may become involved. The misery is maddening. The most extreme cases of "stomach trouble" and the evils resulting from it have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood and builds up the body with sound healthy flesh.

"I was taken with severe headache," writes Thomas A. Swarts, Box 103, Sub-Station C, Columbus, Ohio, then cramps in the stomach, and my food would not digest, then kidney and liver trouble, and my back got weak so I could scarcely get around. I just gave money to the doctors whenever I thought they would do me any good, but the more I doctored the worse I got until six years passed. I had become so poorly I could only walk in the house by the aid of chair, and I got so thin I had given up to die, thinking that I could not be cured. Then I saw one of my neighbor boys and he said, 'Take my advice and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and make a new man out of yourself.' The first bottle helped me so I thought I would get another, and after I had taken eight bottles in about six weeks I was weighed and found I had gained twenty-seven (27) pounds. I have done more hard work in the past eleven months than I did in two years before, and I am as stout and healthy to-day, I think, as I ever was."

WHY HE QUIT JOURNALISM.

Only a Tenor, But He Saw it Late and Resigned Immediately.

When I was editing the Bogtown Bugle," remarked the Colonel, "I had just finished a leader one day on 'Prosperity with Us Once More,' and sent it to the compositor, when in came a brisk stranger.

"'Editor in?' said he.

"'That's what he is,' I replied. 'What can he do for you?'

"'Well,' said the stranger, 'I am introducing a new cash register. The Lightning Cash Register we call it; And I thought I might sell your——'

"'Oh, you thought so, did you?' I interrupted, laughing ironically. 'Cash registers, eh? Why, certainly! There's nothing this establishment is short of just now but cash registers! You've come to the right shop to sell cash registers! Especially lightning ones!'

"I thought I was making my meaning plain enough, but that stranger merely smiled and said:

"'Yes, I see. But I thought I might sell your——'

"'Say!' I exclaimed, interrupting him again and talking pretty loud, 'what's the matter with you anyhow? If you've got a cash register that'll measure buckwheat, cord wood and potatoes, and weigh butter, skin coons and count eggs, fetch it in and we'll strike up a dicker! That's the sort o' cash this shop handles!'

"The stranger looked at me as if he was getting tired, and he put a little more vim in his talk.

"'But seriously, now,' said he. 'What I came in to say is that I am introducing a new lightning cash register, and that I thought I might sell your——'

"'Now, you git!' I shouted, pointing to the door. 'A man that doesn't know more than to try to sell cash registers to a country printing office ought to be——'

"'Say, you ding blasted idiot, you!' the stranger yelled back. 'I tell you I'm introducing a new lightning cash register, and I've been trying to tell you that I thought I might sell your fellow citizens the machine more rapidly if I put a ten dollar ad. in your paper telling them all about it, but I see that a man is only wasting his time talking to a pig headed chump like you! Good day.'

"The cash register man went out, banging the door. I sat down and pondered a while and yanked my hair. Then I called to the foreman:

"'Tom,' said I, 'is that leader of mine on "Prosperity with Us Once More" in type?'

"'Yes,' replied the foreman.

"'Kill it!' said I.

"I replaced it with one on 'An Unprecedentedly Gloomy Outlook,' and quit journalism that week."—Ed. Mott.

LIFE'S TRIAL.

Ever lurking, trying fading,
On my way;
Pleasant visions all erasing,
Joy disturbing, quiet chasing,
Fondest selfish schemes defacing
Day by day—

What's the use of trying, daring,
In this life?
Trials waylay, with spite unsparing
Baffling, slighting, paining, wearing,
Every peaceful thought ensnaring
Into strife.

Would I rest, then cares assailing
Banish peace;
Triumphing but leads to failing;
Sudden joy is turned to wailing;
Ease of mind begets but ailing;
Cares ne'er cease.

What's the end of all this toiling,
Troubles scene—
Where no sense is free from soiling,
Where belief but breeds embroiling,
Where no rest from planning, moiling
E'er is seen?

This I know, when trials defiant
Rise forlorn,
For the conflict, strong, reliant,
Wakes the soul, like sleeping giant,
To whose sinews, suple, pliant,
Strength is born.

This I know, that brave endeavor
Sinks in rust
If from trials we rest us ever;
Vain from courage trial to sever;
Toil and conflict draw us never
Into lust.

Each endeavor, true and earnest,
Leads to strength;
If from hope thou never turnest,
If for higher deeds thou yearnest,
Peace and joy, tho' late, thou learnest
Come at length.

Welcome trials, hidden blessings,
Sent from God;
Wooing not with soft caressings,
Teaching not in doubtful guessings,
Curing all our weak confessings
With thy rod.

A MYSTERY.

During my sojourn in Egypt," said Walton, removing his hookah from his burnt black beard, "I became interested in the horse; and desirous of possessing an Arabian of high quality, sought guidance of our local consul as to the best way of going about obtaining one. He gave me a letter to a certain camel and horse breeder of renown, located near Samana, Bedouin sheik, Hassam Moakbar by name. The sheik, he informed me, had reason to feel under obligations to him, which would insure me a pleasant reception. I took with me only a small escort—the consul's letter, in the Arabian tongue, being a sort of passport and affording me immunity from the toil gathering customary among the desert tribes. Arriving at the encampment at twilight, a scene of great beauty burst upon me. The stars were beginning to blaze forth with unusual size and brilliancy through the wonderful rare atmosphere. Threads of smoke rose perpendicularly from fires which sparkled among the long, low, wide tents, where preparations for the evening meal were going on.

"Negro slaves were roasting coffee, which gave forth a perfume only 'Araby the Blest' could yield. Round about parties of Arabs were exercising the horses—such creatures!—with manes flowing like the tresses of Princess Badroulbadour.

"Sheik Hassam, a man of noble appearance, met me, and after reading the letter, at once relaxed the stern dignity of his countenance, and the supper being now ready, bade me partake of the same tray with himself. The meal consisted of kid's flesh roasted delicately with certain condiments, of the nature of eau de cologne, and washed down with mare's milk. A noble cup of coffee, however atoned for the singularity of this repast, and lighting cheroots of a strong, sweet flavor, we strolled among the horses much of whose beauty and fine points were observable in the moonlight, for that luminary had now risen above the horizon. For reasons of his own, the sheik certainly did his best to get me what I wanted, and out of fifty, every one of which seemed to possess some different charm. I chose one, and regretted I had not chosen all the others. I was loath to leave so romantic a spot, and, though duty called, lingered some days, the guest of the sheik, who seemed equally unwilling to have me go, and plied me with rare tobacco and still rarer legends, dusky happenings of desert land, which had come within his ken, and revealed to few. I began to feel as if I had chewed the lotus buds, and did not care greatly whether I returned to my native land or not.

"One evening (that before the day set for my departure) while strolling and smoking, as usual, in the moonlight, at some distance from the encampment, our footsteps, whether by accident or the sheik's design, were directed toward a dark ridge of rocks which created a great rise of sand on the horizon and shone jagged against the rising moon.

"'That forbidding pile,' said Sheik Hassam, with a wave of his long arm, causing a meteoric effect with the glowing end of his cheroot, 'formed once the centre of an oasis, discovered by myself and tribe while seeking an unfrequented portion of the desert for the purpose of establishing ourselves for the favorable pursuit of our business.

"'This oasis seemed the portal of paradise when, in the splendor of the noontide, we halted, after days of travel beneath a copper sky, before its waving palms and luxuriant shade, among which gurgled hidden springs of water, blessed water, and the songs of birds echoed among the foliage.

"'"Allah be praised! We shall prosper here!"' I cried aloud, and bade them set up the tents, which were not few and dig a cistern, which was filled from the springs amid the groves. The heat diminished not, but rather intensified from day to day, so that the outer springs became dry, and we had to force our way inward (for the oasis was wide and of densest growth) to obtain supplies of water.

"'Here and there we encountered beaten paths, which struck us as being rather singular, as we had seen no living thing save birds. Possibly, we argued, they were made by the jackals, which howled about in the day time and went there for water after dark although on one occasion I could have sworn that a vague imprint in the sandy pathway was that of a beast of prey.

"'I kept a sharp lookout and sentinels even on watch about the horses, camels and goats tethered a short distance from the camp beneath leafy sheds. Nothing of note transpired for several days, except slight additional proofs from time to time that some living creature inhabited the place. The heat seemed to increase daily, and the sky assumed that reddish tinge which bodes no good to the dweller of the desert. At rare intervals across the yellow hillocks would come pirouetting diabolical little spirals of sand moved by puffs of wind, like breaths from a furnace.

"'On the morning of the fifth day Hamed my Circassian slave, a man of rare courage and singular personal beauty, disappeared into the depths of the oasis in quest of fresh water, that in the cistern being used for the beasts only, and, from the length of time elapsing, must have penetrated further than usual. Suddenly we perceived him at the edge of the jungle, wildly gesticulating. The Arabs' rifles were at their shoulders in an instant, but there was a mingled scream and roar, a flash of tawny flanks, and Hamed, dragged down from behind, disappeared into the wood.

"'The riflemen who had been nearest to him fell upon their faces, paralyzed with some awful fear, and could not be induced to stir. What they had seen I knew not. Drawing my simitar and grasping my pistol I bade a huge black, under threat of instant death, follow with a lance, and plunged into the tangled wood at the spot where Hamed had disappeared. White fragments of cloth upon the broken twigs, borne down by what must have been a creature of unusual size and ponderous strength, guided us onward. Panting with the heat, bruised with falling, and now feeling giddy with a strange odor which began to prevade the air, we proceeded with the utmost caution along a path grown steep and rocky.

"'The terrible ordor had grown almost stifling, and mingling with it came a low, whining purr, apparently at no great distance now.

"'Crouching behind a ragged mass of rock which seemed to have been split by the heat (the black calling incessantly upon Allah with chattering teeth) I peered through the crevice into the space beyond. Soul of Mohammed! What a sight met my gaze!

"'Sprawled upon its belly at the entrance to a cavern, the lithe tail beating the ground, was a creature, the sight of which caused my scimitar to fall from my nerveless grasp. Out of a tangled red mane, rose a white neck of columnar strength, surmounted by a countenance of awful beauty. Beneath netted eyebrows glowed eyes like burnished brass, human in all save the slit pupils. The lips were a venomous red arch, through which flashed long canine teeth.

"'Before her, slightly propped against a bowlder, lay Hamed, white and limp, but conscious and fascinated. Ever and anon the great furry paw was thrust forward caressingly (the claws sheathed), and the eyes of the dread creature became narrow and tender, and the purring sound was repeated.

"'Streaming with sweat, I had managed to level my pistol across a projection, when a shadow fell over us which deepened, and a murmur broke upon our ears, increasing to a roar. Springing to its feet, its eyes blazing greenly in the gathering gloom, the Thing seized the shoulder of Hamed's garments in its teeth, and with a horrid screaming snarl leaped past us, as the simoon in all its fury burst upon us.

"'The black had already clambered to the highest rock and lay clasping the base of a large palm, face down, enveloped in his burnous. I did likewise, and after a period of unconscious seem, awoke, and painfully drawing myself up to a sitting posture against what remained of the palm stree, gazed about me. The black lay rigid at my side, stifled.

"'Around about among the rocks and trees and across the plain were great drifts and billows of sand, but of all my faithful people and valuable beasts there was no trace. A tent pole, with a fragment of canvas here and there, marked their graves.

"'I was rescued in a delirious condition by my partner, who came weekly to visit the encampment.

"'That I am stopping in this vicinity is owing to an irrestible fascination the spot has for me, and to its being in the direct road to the market town, whither I go at intervals to trade. The mystery that yonder sand heaps envelop will never be revealed until the desert and the sea give up their dead.'"

"How did you and George get along at the seashore?" asked her best friend. "Swimmingly," was the reply.

The Town Council did not meet last night, as called, there not being sufficient members present to form a quorum.

The Cement Works.

Mr. J. M. Kilbourn, the President of the Lakefield Cement Co., was in town yesterday, and dropped into The Times.

The Company is preparing to push the work with vigour. Men are now at work getting out timber for poles and ties. The work in surveying the electric tramway is in progress, and contracts for building power house, and supplying the machinery is on the point of being let. Work will be pushed as rapidly as possible.

About Exemptions.

The abolition of tax exemptions, ecclesiastical as well as all other kinds, is in the air and the opinion is gradually gaining ground that they should be done away with entirely. At the last meeting of Toronto City Council a motion was passed to petition the Legislature against all tax exemptions. The time is not far distant when ecclesiastical and other now exempted institutions will have to pay their taxes the same as any private individual. Peterborough is in favor of exemptions.

The Times and its Contemporaries.

Fenelon (Falls Gazette) We are indebted to the Peterboro Times for the following account of the catastrophe at the Burnt River bridge which we did not hear of in time for last week's Gazette." ...."Lindsay Post; and the Peterboro Times is indebted to the Evening Post published it the day after the occurrence." And the Times tenders its apology for not crediting the item, which happened to be overlooked at the time. While on this subject we might mention that the esteemed Post helps itself freely from our columns, sometimes crediting and sometimes omitting to do so. On one occasion, it credited one of our local contemporaries with an article that first appeared in these columns. So far as this great family journal is concerned, our contemporaries are at liberty to help themselves, and credit or not, just as they please. We would not have referred to the matter at all, only that we desired to place ourselves right with our Lindsay contemporary.

CHATTANOGGA WOMAN.

Has Reason to Take Coffee out of Her Family.

"After drinking coffee some years, I became badly run down in health, had serious indigestion, flatulency, and nervousness, with severe spells of sick headache.

"My physician advised me long ago to stop drinking coffee, but I said it would be an impossibility, that I would rather do without my breakfast and have my cup of coffee.

"About six months ago, I tried Postum Food Coffee and made it strictly according to directions. I was so delighted with it that I immediately discontinued coffee and began using Postum. I have not had a pound of coffee in my house since and never expect to again. All symptoms of indigestion have disappeared entirely and my nerves are growing stronger every day. My weight has increased about twenty pounds and I now weigh more than I ever weighed in my life.

"I have known people to try Postum and throw it aside, for the reason that they made it carelessly. It has a delicious flavor and is dark and rich as Mocha or Java, if properly boiled, but if not boiled long enough, it is tasteless. Put a piece of butter in the pot, the size of a navy bean to prevent boiling over.

"My husband's weight has increased thirty pounds since he began drinking it, and my little boy, who has been very delicate and did not eat as children usually do, used to drink coffee at breakfast. After I gave him Postum for a few days, his appetite improved and he is gaining in flesh daily. You can imagine we are strong friends of Postum Food Coffee." Mrs. Robt. Harris, 515 Walnut St., Chattanooga, Tenn.

The Servant Girl Question.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I see that the servant-girl question is again being discussed by newspapers. Recently a Toronto daily asked for letters on the advisability or rather the wisdom of country girls leaving the farm for city life. The opinions expressed were as varied as they were numerous, but upon one point there was unanimity, and that was, better the girl should stay on the farm if possible, but if she must earn her living, then domestic service is preferable to employment behind a counter, or, worse still, at the mill loom. It does seem remarkable how young and sometimes frail women can labour from half-past six in the morning till the same hour in the evening listening to the hum of wheels and their nostrils continually assailed by the sickening odour of machine oil. Hardly has the clang of the factory bell sounded announcing that one more day's work is done till they are on their way home, and half an hour later may be seen on the street glad to get a breath of God's pure air. Service as a domestic is far superior to that life of drudgery, and, though every evening is not granted the maid to spend as she will, she is, if in a private family, more retired and not subject to the gaze of men not particular as to what they say, nor subservient to the command of persons oft-times rude and uncouth. Mill life may have an attraction for some, but it is generally admitted that the moral atmosphere of the factory is injurious to one and all. The domestic can, if she will, keep within her own sphere and have advantages, if a faithful servant in the employ of a good family, that her mill sister cannot hope to enjoy.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other goods offered for sale in our store.

The Effect of Advertising.

For every line of business in a community there is a certain amount of trade. What share a particular establishment shall have must depend a great deal on its location. If a store or an office be where it can attract the notice of the largest number of people it will have of the largest patronage, other things being equal. It is possible, however, for a business man whose establishment is not as well located as those of his competitors to overcome much of the disadvantage by judicious advertising. When he has once gained the confidence of the public the location of his store becomes a matter of secondary importance. Everybody reads the Times.

C. P. R. HOUSE BOAT.

A Most Delightful Outing Home for Those Who Desire it.

The new C. P. R., house boat which is now completed and ready for occupation has been visited by a large number of Nelson people, all of whom declare it to be an ideal outing home. The boat is completely furnished in every respect. The four state rooms with their four double and four single berths are equipped with everything one would desire in a bed room at home. In the dining room is all that a dining room requires, silverware, glassware, etc., and the room itself is sufficiently large to accommodate any party that could travel on the boat. The kitchen is complete, too, and in fact, there is nothing lacking anywhere. All of the rooms are carpeted and the hallway is laid with oilcloth. Upstairs you are in the open air, with an awning to shield you from the sun and a hammock if you would lay down and read and rest. No more delightful place, to spend a week or two, could be imagined, provided, of course, the boat is anchored in some one of the thousand beauty spots of Kootenay Lake. Nowhere, perhaps in all the Dominion of Canada is there a body of water offering to the man of the reel and fly or he of the gun such inducements as are offered anywhere on Kootenay Lake and nowhere are there more delightfully secluded places than can be found here. And it is, to give visitors the opportunity of seeing all this, under most pleasant conditions, that the C. P. R. has caused to be built this house boat. It is to be rented to parties and at a figure which makes it within the reach of everyone who can afford an outing. The boat itself will rent at $5 per day, with a minimum charge of $20. It will be towed to any point that can be reached from Nelson at the regular towage charge of 50 cents a mile, with a minimum towage charge of $5. All that those who rent the boat have to do, is to stock it with eatables and drinkables. Nothing else is required by them unless they desire a servant and this the C.P.R. officials will undertake to secure for them.

BULLER GETS INTO A TIGHT FIX WITH BOERS.

Their Sharpshooters Were Concealed Between the Lines of the British Troops, Who Finally Received Assistance from Lord Roberts.

Maseru, Basutoland, Sept. 5. The Boers left Ladybrand last evening. They looted the stores and took all the horses, including the cavalry mounts. The British casualties were five wounded.

New York, Sept 5.—Mr. I. N. Ford, the Tribune's London correspondent, cables the following—

Lord Roberts' annexation of the Transvaal, as I have pointed out, is generally regarded as proof that in the opinion of the military authorities, both at home and in South Africa, the war is practically over. The Stock Exchange takes this view, and most of the Kaffir shares show a slight rise on the prospect of a speedy renewal of mining operations. Nevertheless there has been a good deal of miscellaneous fighting in various parts of the annexed republics. The War Office received a despatch from Lord Roberts yesterday giving an account of a slight engagement north of Pretoria, in which the Boers were driven off, losing one hundred rifles, a large supply of ammunhundred rifles, a large supply of ammunition and a few prisoners. About the same time a party of Boers made on the Johannesburg water-works.

More serious fighting took place on Monday in the mountain passes near Lydenburg, where General Buller was engaging General Botha all day. The burghers were about 2,000 strong, with several guns, and they seem to have held the British in check, since the position was not carried by nightfall, and a column was sent by Lord Roberts to assist General Buller. It is thought that General Botha is merely fighting to cover the removal of his transport and supplies from Lydenburg, and that he will retire to the mountains farther north, where the next stand will be made.

The effect of the annexation proclamation will be to cause the Transvaal burghers now in arms and also forfeit the belligerent right. It is hoped that by this means the hopelessness of further resistance will be speedily brought home to the Boers.

TO BE TREATED AS REBELS,

London, Sept. 4.—(Special) —Later accounts of fighting near Lydenburg say that the British cavalry, with two miles of the enemy's position. The Boers then fired three Long Toms, which were located, one on either side of a pass and one at a distance to the right. They also had another gun of high velocity mounted.

British forces occupied a position in the basin on the right of the pass and were unable to retreat at nightfall. The Boer guns were accurately trained and were fired continously all day, while the British, being unable to use their position for gun fire effectively, advanced their infantry.

Between the lines and hidden in creeks and overgrown scrub were numerous Boer sharpshooters. General Buller occupied an exposed position on the ridge at the front. The behaviour of his troops under heavy shell fire was excellant.

DELAREY REPORTED DEAD

Pretoria, Sept. 5.—It is reported that General Delarey, the Boer commander, died of wounds received at Eland's River.

London, Sept. 5.—The War Office publishes the following despatch from Lord Roberts, dated Belfast, Sept. 1—

"Gen. Buller marched with his force to-day from Helvettia on his way to Lydenburg. He is now encamped on the north bank of the Crocodile River. The enemy's rear guard is retiring before him without opposition.

"Paget reports that a small column of Baden-Powell's force, under Col. Plumer, despatched by him, drove off a small commando under Gen. Pretorius, east of Pienaar's River. Plumer captured 1,000 head of cattle, thirty-one wagons, twenty-six prisoners and ninety Martini rifles. The families who were with the commando are being taken care of in our camp.

That Supply Train Affair.

"The enmy managed to derail another supply train five miles south of Klip River early this morning. Two men were killed, one was wounded, and thirty-five were taken prisoners. The engine was blown up and thirteen trucks were burned.

"A party of Brabant's Horse, on duty at the Klip River bridge, followed the enemy, as soon as the report of the accident reached them, into the neighboring hills and recovered all of the prisoners. (The foregoing has already been told in press despatches.)

"Over 1,700 of our prisoners have come into camp. Half of these have been sent to Pretoria, and the remainder go tonight."

Routed a Body of Boers.

Another despatch from Lord Roberts, sent Aug. 30, says—

"Major Brooke, commanding at Karai railway station, reports that with 100 men he attacked the Boers, who were holding a kopje about 600 yards from the railway, on Aug. 27th. The Boers were completely routed, and left on the field five dead, including H. Pretorius. Our only casualty was one slightly wounded."

The War Office has received the following from Lord Roberts, under date of Belfast, Sept 2, 10.35 p.m.—

"Paget's men are at Warnpar, Col. Plumer, in his engagement at Rooikop, captured 7 prisoners, 160 rifles, 40,000 rounds of ammunition, 350 head of cattle and three wagons. His casualties were two officers severely and three slightly wounded.

Boers Near Johannesburg.

"On Aug. 31, Gen. Hart had an encounter with a party of Boers who were attempting to destroy the Johannesburg waterworks. The Boers evacuated a strong position. The British casualties were nine wounded.

"There have been several minor engagements in the Krugersdorp district, in which the British had 60 wounded and the Boers lost heavily."

In another despatch from Belfast, dated Sept. 3, Lord Roberts says—

"Gen. Hamilton drove off the few of the enemy who opposed him, and is tonight at Swartzeekopjes.

Plumer's Big Capture.

"Paget reports that Col. Plumer successfully engaged a party of Boers near Warm Baths yesterday in an impassable bush country. He destroyed twelve wagons, and captured 200 head of cattle, 180 sheep, forty donkeys, and twelve horses. He secured 24 prisoners, 6,000 lbs. of mealies and a considerable quantity of flour, rice, groceries and clothing. Our casualties were four wounded and some missing.

"The enemy tampered with the Petrusburg line yesterday, and derailed a train conveying a company of the West Riding Regiment. Some of our men were slightly hurt.

"The officer commanding at Erstefabueken reports that ten men, with several women and children, came into his camp bringing 5,000 sheep, 800 head of cattle, fifty horses, eight mules, eight wagons, and six Cape carts."

Buller in a Fix.

In a despatch dated Belfast, Sept. 3, Lord Roberts says—

"Buller reports the enemy to be holding a strong position in his immediate front, which he could not turn. I sent a column to-day along the direct Belfast-Dulstroom road to assist him."

A press despatch says of the latter incident—

The British forces occupied a position in a basin on the right of the pass and were unable to retreat at nightfall.

Between the lines, and hidden in creeks and overgrown scrub, were numerous Boer sharpshooters. General Buller occupied an exposed position on a ridge at the front. The behaviour of his troops under heavy shell fire was excellent. His casualties are not stated.

LETTER FROM BULLER.

He Writes to a Torontonian Praising the Strathconas.

In answer to a letter sent to General Buller last June by Mr. Henry Watts, 160 1-2 Younge street, wishing him every success, and enquiring about the welfare of the Canadians at the front, the General has sent the following reply.

Standerton, July 30 1900.

Dear Sir,—I have to thank you for your letter of the 6th June and your kind words. The only Canadian corps I have actually under my command is Strathcona's Horse, and very fine fellows they are.

Yours faithfully.

Redvers Buller.

YIELDS TO WEEPING SON.

Johnny Ray's Mother at Last Consents to His Wedding.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 6.—For two long years Johnny Ray, a bright, handsome lad, who is now 17 years old, was disconsolate because his mother, on account of his tender age, strenuously opposed his desire to take unto himself a wife. He cried almost daily for two years, until his mother yesterday relented.

Johnny two years ago became enamored of Miss Lulu Gordon, who was then 17 years of age. He proposed marriage and she consented, but the parents would not allow the marriage. He became morose, and at intervals would cry bitterly.

To-day his mother secured the marriage license, and Johnny lost no time in notifying his fiancee. He then sent invitations to his friends, and there certainly was a "rough house" at the bride's home. Johnny is getting $6 a week and daily promises of an increase.

GOOD NEWS OF LADYBRAND FIGHTS

British Garrison of 150 Withstand Attacks of Boers.

THE LATTER HAVE RETIRED

After Several Desperate Attempts to Capture the Place the Boers Decided to Leave.

Cape Town, Sept. 6.—The siege of Ladybrand has been raised, after several desperate attempts to capture the town, and its little garrison of 150 British troops. The Boers who attacked Ladybrand are estimated to have numbered over 2,000 men. The British were summoned to surrender Sept. 2 (Sunday), but refused, and from that time on were subjected to continued cannon and rifle fire. The burghers twice tried to rush the British position. Probably the approach of a relief force saved the little garrison.

CHASE AFTER BANDITS.

Over 500 Men on the Trail of Union Pacific Robbers Who Got $100,000.

Rock Springs, Wyo., Sept. 6. — The authorities are hot on the trail of Butch Cassady and his gang who robbed the New York and Pacific Coast express on the Union Pacific road on Wednesday night. The robbers have been cut off from their liar in Brown Park, and are now making for the Robbers' Roost country near the Hole-in-the-Wall.

Everything points to the fact that the robbers secured at least $100,000 in currency of small denominations, which was being sent to the Philippines. They also got $10,000 in unsigned currency, which was being sent to the First National bank of Butte.

More than 500 men are now on the trail of the bandits, all intent upon earning the $1,000 reward. The chase is similar to the famous hunt for the band of Curry brothers in this same section about this time last year. The latter blew up an express car on the Union Pacific and got away with $50,000, though chased for 10 days by a small army of men. The escape of the Curry gang indicates just how difficult the pursuit of outlaw bands in this country is.

RED RIVER REBELLION.

Annual Dinner of the Veterans To-night in Toronto.

The annual dinner of the Red River Rebellion Veterans will take place at Webb's, Toronto this evening.

Amongst those who are likely to be present is Mr. W. H. Anthony, of town, who went out with expedition in 1870 under Garnet Wolseley The only other Peterborough man in the expedition was the late David English, who died in Montreal some few years ago, and the late Hon W. N. Kennedy.

The expedition consisted of about 2,000 men, who traversed the whole distance from Thunder Bay to Fort Garry, Win., on foot and in boats. On the arrival of the troops, Reil, the rebel chief, and his government had taken their departure. It was said that so sudden was their leaving, that they left their breakfasts untouched on the table. Reil escaped across the lines into Dakota, and some years later was pardoned being elected to the Dominion Parliament, but never having taken his seat. After the second rebellion he was captured and executed.

MEET FORTY YEARS AFTER.

Man and Wife Separated at Time of Civil war—Both Since Married

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 6.—After forty years' separation, during which each believed the other dead, W. W. Howard, sexton of Oak Hill cemetery, and his wife have again come together, although both have since been married. The woman's husband has died, but Howard married the sister of his wife, and she is living. The woman is Mrs. Jane Cooper, and she has for a logn time resided at Leroy, McLean county, Ill. The fact that both were living was discovered by Arno R. Nauman of Leroy, who married the woman's daughter. Wishing to know something of the early life of his mother-in-law, he began an investiation, which resulted in the discovery that Howard and Mrs. Cooper were both alive and living apart, although never legally separated.

The separation occurred when Howard went to war. Report came that he was killed. When he returned here his wife had left with James Cooper, and news came that she was drowned while crossing the Mississippi river. Howard then married a sister of the wife mourned as dead, and by that union is now several times a grandfather.

The young women whom Nauman married at Leroy is Howard's daughter, although Howard has never seen the girl, she having been born after he went to war. The meeting between Howard and Mrs. Cooper occurred when the latter came here to visit her sister, who is now the second Mrs. Howard.

TRADERS QUARREL.

American and Canadian Traders Battle for Business.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept 5.—American and Canadian traders in the Great Slave Lake district have had had a fight over the trade with the Indians. The Americans, it was charged, smuggled large quantities of supplies in and were thus enabled to undersell the Canadians. They also furnished whiskey to the Indians, who, after a good trapping season, had plenty of skins to trade.

The Edmonton traders, furious at losing their trade, sent a committee to notify the Americans to retire. The latter declined, and in a fierce altercation that ensued some one fired a shot. Shooting at once became general, the Indians siding with the Americans.

The Americans, who numbered about fifteen, finally fled to the timber. One of them, August Briske, said to come from Seattle, was fatally wounded and several of his companions were less seriously hurt.

Mounted police have been sent to the scene. It is feared the Indians may become restless and an outbreak ensue. The trouble occurred three weeks ago, and it will be some time before more news can come.

KING WILL BE HANGED.

The Government Declines to Interfere With an Execution in the Yukon.

Ottawa, Sept. 5.—Alexander King who had trouble with Herbert Devenport over the floating of a scow near the White Horse Rapids, shot and killed Devenport, and was tried and sentenced to be executed on October 2. King was tried by Justice Craig at Dawson City. An order in council has been passed allowing the law to take its course, and King will be hanged at Dawson on the day appointed for the execution.

FATAL RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.

Manvers Township Young Lady Instantly Killed.

The Lindsay Post says—"A deplorable accident occurred Monday morning in Manvers township, about a dozen miles from this town, which resulted in the death of Miss McNeill, a popular young lady of the locality. Between 9 and 10 o'clock she went for a drive with Mr. Fred McGill, and while they were returning home the horse shied suddenly and got beyond the driver's control. Both occupants of the buggy were thrown out onto the hard roadway; Mr. McGill escaped with several painful cuts and abrasions, but Miss McNeill was very seriously injured, and was unconscious when picked up. She was conveyed home as soon as possible, and medical aid was called in, but she never rallied. Death ended her sufferings about 2 o'clock. Deceased was about 20 years of age, and was loved by all who knew her. The funeral will take place to-morrow at 2 o'clock."

A Belated Item.

What might have been a terrible tragedy occurred a couple of weeks ago. It appears that Mr. and Mrs. Lyons, who reside on Bonaccord street, with a number of others, were attending a picnic near Auburn. Mr. Lyon's little boy, about 9 years of age, went for a bathe in the mill race. He jumped off a log into what he thought was shallow water, but which was ten feet deep. The child's mother, who was sitting on the bank of the stream close by, sprang in to save her child. She, too, was beyond her depth, and went down. Mr. Wellington Bradshaw ran to the assistance of the mother and child, and bravely sprang in after them. He seized the two, but was unable to get them to shore. All three would undoubtedly have been drowned but for Mr. Lyons, who is a strong swimmer, and who happened to be near at hand. He also jumped in and succeeded in dragging the three half drowned people to shore, where they soon recovered. It was a close call.

SOUTHERN CHINA MAY RISE AT ANY TIME

The Flame of Rebellion Being Fanned by Reactionaries---An Appeal to Britain.

REFORMERS ASK HELP TO FORM A GOVERNMENT

They Wish to Establish a Government at Nanking and for That Purpose Have Asked the Assistance of the British Government.

London, Sept. 6, 4 a.m. Sir Alfred Gaselee's despatch, which shows that the situation in Pekin was unchanged on Aug. 29, is the only Chinese news this morning. The cancellation of the order holding back the fourth Indian Brigade is regarded as important. It shows that whatever the outcome of the Russia npolicy, the British Government is determined to have sufficient troops on the spot adequately to protect British interests. Considerable significance is attached to the statement by the Journal De-St. Petersburg as possibly indicating a modification of Russian policy. This paper is the organ of the Russian Foreign Office, its editor being a Councillor of State. It is noted while the Journal de-St. Petersburg announces Russian determination to maintain the solidarity of the powers, it only mentions the withdrawal of the Ministers and not of the troops to Tien Tsin. It is believed that the powers might agree to such a modification of the original Russian proposal.

London, Sept. 6. General Sir Alfred Gaselee, Commander of the British-Indian troops at the Chinese capital, wires as follows from Pekin, Aug. 29.—To Lord Geo. Hamilton, Secretary of State for India—"The allies marched through the Forbidden City yesterday (August 28.) The British had third place in the procession, the Russians and Japanese being in greater strength."

Shanghai, Sept. 4. About 1,500 more British-Indian troops have been landed here, making altogether 20,000 of such troops and 10,000 camp followers at this port.

New York, Sept. 5.—Influential natives state that the flame of rebellion has been fanned in the southern provinces, and predict a tremendous conflagration within a month, says a despatch to the Herald from Hong Kong. Placards and pamplets are being circulated in Canton and the provinces, intimating that the allies are thoroughly routed. The feeling against foreigners is bursting the bounds of official control.

The majority of the mission stations in Kwang Tung have been either destroyed or looted. Native Christians are terribly abused. Natives in foreign employ in Canton have been threatened. A systematic looting of the horses of the English-Speaking Chinamen has taken place.

Several reform parties with their headquarters in Hong Kong, who have been supported by funds from rich Chinese in the interior and in the United States, have hitherto refrained from aggressive action, believing that the powers would effect the regeneration of the Government. One powerful organization is distributing thousands of copies of a reform appeal in the British colonies. The memorandum has been signed by two hundred names for presentation to the British Minister, imploring the assistance of a reform Government. It recommends establishing Nanking as the capital, and the selection of enlightened Chinese officials to administer the Government with foreign advisers.

These people are disheartened at the reported intention of the powers to withdraw from China. Different societies are combining to raise the standard of revolt and overthrow the corrupt Government.

The practical cessation of trade with the north has thrown thousands of Chinese in each port out of employment. They are ready to join the rebels.

French aggression at Swatow and Japanese aggression at Amoy unteasify the hatred of the foreigners.

ENVOY OF CHINESE EMPEROR

He Makes a Plea for the Sovereign's Restoration and Policy.

San Francisco, September, 5.—Leong Kai Tinn, who claims to be special ambassador of the deposed Emperor of China, Kwang Su, and is the representativ and the Chinese Empire Association of Reformers, made an impassioned plea to a large audience of his country men in the Jackson Street Theater for the restoration of the Emperor and the modernization of China. His deploration of the indignities that had been heaped upon the unfortunate Emperor by the Empress Dowager were so eloquent that the yellow men in the audience were moved to tears.

Leong Kai Tinn arrived in San Francisco last Monday and his address was the first he delivered here. He came to this country to gain support of the Chinese residents in the United States for the restoration of the Emperor and the inauguration of a liberal policy toward foreigners.

THE EMPRESS' POWER.

London, Sept. 5.—An edict addressed to Li Hung Chang, in the name of the Chinese Emperor, and dated August 19, en route to Taiyuenfu, explains that although the foreign powers have given assurance that their only object in bringing troops to the capital is the suppression of disorder, and that no harm is intended to the Imperial house, the Emperor has felt it his duty, in view of the dangers apprehended from an assault on Pekin, to comply with the wishes of the Empress and accompany her westward, after instructing Yung Lu, Hsu Tung and Tsung Chi to remain in the capital and continue to carry on the government.

ANTI-FOREIGN POLICY.

The Empress Appears to be Still More Bound on Against Foreigners.

London, Sept. 5.—No official pronouncement is yet forthcoming here in regard to the decision of the powers. But the consensus of opinion continues suggestive of a compromise on the proposals now under consideration. In the meantime there is little authoritative indication that the Dowager-Empress is ready to treat for peace even if the allied powers reach an agreement in regard to the best means of opening negotiations. On the contrary many rumours gathered at Shanghai suggest that she is carrying on her anti-foreign policy with increased zeal. The latest reported Imperial decree from Tai Yuen Fu is said to be defiant and unrepentant, and to contain the statement that the court fled lest the Emperor might be killed during the fighting between the Boxers and Christians, and thus leave no one to continue the "ancestral worship." The decree is also said to exhort a union of the Viceroys, to "avenge the injuries inflicted on China" by the powers.

FENIANS ADOPT RESOLUTIONS.

Alleged American Entanglement With England is Denounced.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 6.—The old guard of the Fenian Brotherhood was today addressed here by P. J. Cercoran, Edward O. M. Condon, and Captain George Sweety. Resolutions were adopted against the present alleged American entanglement in foreign affairs, especially any alliance with England and denounced any violation of the principle of consent of the governed.

The resolutions also denounce the course of England in South Africa, and condemn the sending of prisoners of war to Ceylon.

ROBERTS COMING HOME.

Will Leave South Africa Next Month—Dewet Captures a Train.

London, Sept. 5.—(Special)—A despatch from Pretoria states that it is reported that De Wet has captured a British train near Kroonstad and secured 44 cars of supplies.

Another despatch from Allahabad, India, announces that Lord Roberts will leave South Africa for London about the middle of October.

According to advices from Lorenso Marquez, of yesterday's date, Boers are trekking from Lydenburg towards Swaziland. Swasis are looting Boer stock. There are indications that the Boers are preparing to abandon the siege of Ladybrand.

Pretoria advices say that Commandant Grobler is negotiating for the surrender of his men.

RAISED A BOER FLAG.

A Rich New Yorker's Act—Condemned by His Fellow Americans.

Bar Harbor, Maine, Sept. 5.—(Special—Edward Van Nam, of New York, whose summer residence is here, raised a Boer flag on his lawn as five English warships came into the harbour yesterday. A mob gathered, and there was great excitement until the flag was cut down by the chief of police, against Van Nam's protest.

Eating and Sleeping.

Food supplies the substance for repairing the wastes of the body, and gives strength. Sleep affords the opportunity for these repairs to be made. Both are necessary to health. If you can't eat and sleep, take Hood's Sarsaparilla. It creates a good appetite and tones the digestive organs, and it gives the sweet, restful sleep of childhood. Be sure to get Hood's.

Let your end medicine you should get the best money will buy, and experience proves this to be Hood's Sarsaparilla.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 6 1900.

LORD ROBERTS AS COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF

The accession of Lord Roberts to the high office of Commander-in-Chief of the British army, comes not unexpectedly in view of his distinguished services in the field and the high esteem in which he is held by the English people.

Neverthe less it will cause many disappointments, and particularly in the little band of royal blood who wear her Majesty's military uniform and seek with unsupported ambition the distinction of rank and place. When the Duke of Cambridge was finally shouldered out of the office of Commander-in-Chief on the failure of the "small supplies bill" in Parliament, Viscount Wolseley was raised to the post with the understanding that he should vacate it at the end of five years to make way for H. R. H., General the Duke of Connaught and Strathearn. It was understood that the Queen eagerly urged his appointment in immediate succession to his uncle, but the young man had been entrusted with a divisional command in India wherein he had acquitted himself in no brilliant manner, and her Ministers opposing his appointment were forced to agree to the temporary employment of Lord Wolseley in the envied office. But there are other relatives of her Majesty who have claimed it, among them H.H. Field Marshal Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar and H. R. H. Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein the former an admitted soldier, the latter with no military reputation whatever.

Had these been piping times of peace the contract for the Queen's son, Arthur of Connaught would probably have been carried out by his promotion, but since it was made there have been circumstances that render its terms impossible, and which indicate Lord Roberts and no other as the man for the place.

The causes lend to the appointment almost the character of an election by the army. In the absence of a conscription act in England and the necessity of encouraging by every means possible voluntary enlistments, the War Department has been forced by reduced terms of service, increased pensions and higher pay in the reserve corps, to render the army popular not only with those eligible for enlistment but with the people; and the popular feeling is strongly against the naming of any except those who have won the right to be so selected for fat places. The popular voice is that Lord Roberts has won the right to be appointed, but as he is an old man and cannot long perform the duties of the office, the royal Princes may still look forward to having it restored to them at no distant time.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If the Boers make an attack on Pole-Carew's centre, it will go hard with that hyphen.

We do not know that the next election will be in the fall, but we do know that the fall will be in the next elections.

FUN AND SENTIMENT.

"I don't think that Mr. Eatington ever declines an invitation to dinner." "Oh, no! He's a sort of social lion seeking what he may devour."—Puck.

"I see it is becoming the fad to have your wedding cinematographed." "But a feller doesn't have to have his courtship cinematographed, thank heaven!"

"Pa, what is a lineal descendant?" "A lineal descendant is a person who has to fall back on some praiseworthy ancestor for his own importance."—Detroit Free Press.

"As to the emperor," said the empress dowager, "the silly boy hardly knows whether he is dead or alive." "From which," remarked Li Hung Chang, "I infer that he reads the papers."—Puck.

Visitor—"What is the meaning of this large and enthusiastic demonstration? Is there a peace jubilee being held?" Boy—"Naw, sir. De local football club wiped de earth up wid der rivals."—Norristown Herald.

Book Canvasser—Pardon me, madame, but are you interested in the study of prehistoric man? Miss Antique—No indeed! It keeps me busy trying to get the man of to-day interested in me.—Chicago News.

"Young Populare is the most self-possessed man I ever saw. He never gets the least bit rattled under any circumstances." "Why, in what exigency did you ever see him tried, to have such confidence in him?" "I saw him exhibiting his first baby to half a dozen women at once, and answering every question rationally."

A Tart Old Lady.

Out in Indiana a good many years ago a certain old lady, summoned as a witness, came into court wearing a large poke bonnet, such as was then much affected by rural folks. Her answers to the questions put to her being rather indistinct, the court requested her to speak louder, though without much success.

"The court cannot hear a word you say, my good woman," said the judge. "Please to take off that huge bonnet of yours."

"Sir," she said composedly and distinctly enough this time, "the court has a perfect right to bid a gentleman take off his hat, but it has no right to make a woman remove her bonnet."

"Madam," replied the judge, "you seem so well acquainted with the law that I think you had better come up and take a seat with us on the bench."

"I thank your honor kindly," she responded, dropping a low courtesy to the court, "but there are old women enough there already."—Law Notes.

Mistakes in Telegraph Messages.

Two funny telegraph stories are printed by the Pittsburg Disptach on the authority of a former employe of the Western Union company.

He was receiving a dispatch from Albany, in which the sender was not overcareful in spacing his letters. Lawton took the address as follows:

"Dr. A. Wing, room car agent, Central depot, New York."

The dispatch came back with the marginal report that there was no such person at the address named. The operator at Albany was called up and explanations followed, in consequence of which the address was changed to "drawing room car agent, central depot."

A still more absurd mistake was once made in the same office when a telegram was received for "James W. Giles, pie clerk, Brooklyn nasty yard." This was afterward amended to read. "James W. Gillespie, clerk, Brooklyn navy yard."

A Correction.

An amusing double-barreled case of heterophemy occurred not long ago at a meeting of the licensing sessions in an English city. The chairman, discussing the law requiring the bona fide travelers to go a certain distance before being entitled to liquid refreshment, referred to it as being "three miles as the flow cries."

A superior person hastily rose to correct his worship, but could get no nearer than "Your worship means 'as the fly crows,' or rather," he added hastily, "'as the cry flows.'"

No one was rash enough to make a further attempt, and the magistrates went on in their efforts in behalf of sobriety.

Correct Advice.

The Rev. Mr. Perkins being called upon sudenly to address a Sunday school, thought he would get a few original ideas from his young hearers. "Children," said he, "I want some of you to tell me what I shall talk to you about to-night, What shall I say?" At first there was no response. "That bright little fellow over there," said he, pointing to a youngster on a back seat "What shall I say to you to-night?" In a little, piping voice came the answer:—"Say amen and sit down."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

A Resourceful Bride.

"Can we afford," he faltered, sadly, "to have a skeleton in our closet?"

As for the woman, she wept, for they were indeed wretchedly poor, but she was not, therefore, altogether unresourceful.

"We might keep it in the hall and use it for a hat rack!" exclaimed the bride, for her mind was giving way under the constant effort to practice economy.—Detroit Journal.

His Purpose.

"What are you assuming such a belligerent air for?" said the small potentate's adviser. "Don't you know that we don't want to fight?"

"Of course, I know it. And I realize that we've got to do something exceedingly plausible to keep the other people from finding it out."—Washington Star.

No Wonder.

"I learn," she said reproachfully, "that you were devoted to no fewer than five girls before you finally proposed to me. How do I know that you didn't make desperate love to all of them?"

"I did," he replied promptly.

"You did!" she exclaimed.

"Certainly," he returned. "You don't suppose for a minute I would be foolhardy enough to try for such a prize as you are without practicing a little at first, do you?"—Chicago Post.

The First Baby.

When baby comes to the home it will bind the wife closer to the husband, or it will gradually tend to cut her off from his companionship. A sickly mother loses in physical charm, and often in temper and disposition. A fretful child is a trial, even to loving parents. The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription prepares the wife for motherhood. It strengthens the body, and induces a healthy condition of mind, free from anxiety or fear. It makes the baby's advent practically painless. The mother being healthy her child is healthy, and a healthy child is a happy child, a joy to the parents, linking them together with a new bond of affection.

There is no opium, cocaine or other narcotic in "Favorite Prescription."

"I read what your medicine has done for other people," writes Mrs. Edwin H. Gardner, of Beechwood, Norfolk Co., Mass., Box 70, "so thought I would try it, and I found it a blessing to me and family. I took your medicine a year when I had a ten pound girl. I had the easiest time I ever had with any of my three children, and I have been very well ever since. I took three bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' three of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and three vials of 'Pellets.' Before I took your medicine I only weighed 135 pounds, and now I weigh 175 pounds."

ONE CENT A YEAR

Is the Salary That Frank Lynch Will Receive From the Government.

Iowa County, Wisconsin, lays claim to having the lowest-salaried official in the employ of the United States Government. The Government hires Frank Lynch for 1 cent a year to carry the mail between Dodgeville, the county seat of Iowa County, and Mineral Point, nine miles distant.

It is the law that such employes shall be paid quarterly, but Lynch, although he has been carrying the mails regularly since last July, has as yet received no quarters of a cent or check for those amounts. The young man is not looking for any remitances on his salary until next July, when he expects a check for a whole cent. It is supposed this will be the smallest check ever issued by the Government and efforts have already been made to secure possession of it. The mail carrier has received several offers of $15 or $20 for the check, but he has so far warily avoided any definite entanglements.

Both Dodgeville and Mineral Point have railroads, but there is none between the two towns. The trip from one place to the other by rail is so roundabout that it is out of the question, so passengers and mail are driven across country. Whoever has the contract for carrying the mail feels that he is certain of all the passenger trade, for no one has yet had the courage to compete for passenger business with the United States mail carrier. For this reason the transfer of the mail is deemed a valuable privilege.

Every four years the post office department advertises for bids and the contracts to lowest bidders for transfer of mail sack. Last year there was the liveliest competition ever known for the Dodgeville-Mineral Point contract. Several different men signified their intention of going into the contest, and the "talk" was kept up until each bidder knew he would have to go pretty low to get the prize, the man who then held the contract had been receiving about $40 per year for carrying the mail. It is said that when the bids for the new contract were opened in Washington it was found that the three lowest offers for carrying the mail per year were 1 cent, 20 cents and $1.50. Frank Lynch, being the 1 cent bidder, was awarded the contract for four years.

The worst famines of modern times were the famine in Ireland in 1846-7, in which 1,000,000 people perished; the Indian famine of 1866, which claimed 1,450,000 victims; the Indian famine of 1877, in which 500,000 people perished, and the great famine in China in 1878, in which 9,500,000 died.

A SINGULAR START IN LIFE

How did I get my first start in life? Well, in a very singular manner—a very singular manner indeed. I will proceed to tell you.

Let me see. I am now rather advanced in years—seventy-seven last January— what some people call getting old; though, somehow, my heart feels as young as ever. Seventy-seven years, with nineteen off, leaves fifty-eight. Fifty-eight years ago in June; that would carry it back to the year 1841. Yes, that is right—that is the year I went out to Port-au-Prince, Hayti, as captain's clerk.

The captain and I not agreeing very well, I left him there, and while looking for another berth I fell in with a countryman of mine who wanted to take a trip into the interior, merely to gratify his curiosity.

"I have heard," he said, "that the scenery among the hills is the most beautiful in the world, and I am anxious to see it, but would rather not venture alone, and hitherto have found no one to be my companion. Now if you can spare a few days and will go with me I will not only bear all expense, but pay you a reasonable price for your time."

"I am your man," was my reply.

We immediately set to work and procured a good outfit—rifles, pistols, knives, tinderbox, wallets, knapsacks, canteens, and dry provisions, which we expected to eke out with fresh game, and the second day saw us on our travels into an uninhabited region.

I pass over the first few days of romantic exploration, during which we penetrated deep forests and dense jungles, where vegetation ran riot, forded numerous streams, climbed steep hills, scaled precipices, descended into dark valleys, and saw nature in all her wildness, grandeur and beauty, with enough of peril from wild beasts and poisonous reptiles to keep us keenly on the alert.

On the fifth or sixth day we discovered the finest scene at all—a succession of precipices, like so many terraces, one above another, down which poured and roared a series of cascades, with mountains towering far heavenward on three sides of the whole, and a tranquil river and a flowery valley on the fourth—altogether a combination of grandeur, beauty and sublimity that was really enchanting. We spent the remainder of the day here, built our campfire on one of the highest ledges, and slept listening to the music of the night-birds and falling waters.

On the following day we discovered the entrance to a beautiful grotto, which we immediately determined to explore.

Collecting some resinous sticks, and binding them together to serve for torches, we lighted our bunch, and entered where perhaps the foot of man had never before penetrated.

The entrance was narrow, a little higher than our heads, and my companion went cautiously forward with the light, and I as cautiously followed.

After getting in some fifty feet, in a zig-zag course, we suddenly came to a large apartment, hung with the most beautiful stalactites, which flashed and sparkled in the light with an effect which defies description, and we could easily fancy we were in a palace of diamonds.

"This is worth the labor of a lifetime to behold!" exclaimed my companion, enthusiastically.

"Gorgeous beyond my wildest dreams!" I replied.

This hall was very large, not less than three hundred feet in length, by two hundred in breadth, and in some places perhaps fifty feet to the roof, with an even, level floor.

While feasting our eyes on the surrounding beauties we gradually moved on, and came to where three dark passages led deeper into the bowels of the earth, the central one going straight forward, and the others turning off respectively to the right and left. We took the middle one, which was about ten feet wide, and as many high, and arched at the beginning with nearly as much regularity as if cut out by the hand of art.

After advancing a few paces we found it gradually narrowed, and began to descend somewhat abruptly, the air becoming more damp and heavy. Presently it expanded into a long, low hall of solid rock, which, unlike the first apartment, was dark and gloomy, affording the wildest contrast.

On exploring this apartment we found no less than six more passages, leading off in as many different directions.

We selected the largest and still went forward, though I confess I began to feel a little uneasy, for fear we might venture too far, lose our way, and not be able to get back.

"Don't let us risk too much for the first time," I said to my companion by way of courtesy; "for I have no desire to be buried alive."

"There is not the least danger," he replied. "I watch every turn, and could find my way out in the dark."

Soon after this we came to where the passage was so contracted that, at first, we were compelled to stoop, and then to crawl forward on our hands and knees.

Again I remonstrated, but my companion did not heed me.

We kept on in this manner for some distance, and then the passage enlarged, and led up a steep ascent. After toiling up about fifty feet we came to another brilliant chamber of stalactites, and found a dozen more inviting passages leading we knew not whither.

Our first torch was by this time pretty well burned out, and, as we lighted one of the two others which I carried, I remarked:

"It would be tempting fate to go any further now. I propose turning back."

"Hark!" he said. "I do believe I hear running water, and I must see what it is. This way; follow me. There is no danger. I will guide you back in safety."

He again went forward as he spoke, and as he still carried the light I was obliged to accompany him, or remain in darkness.

We thus went on and on, through a rather open passage, and, as we advanced, the sound of falling water became more and more audible, till at length we came in sight of a bright running stream, that flowed over a clear bed, and fell down, with a sudden plunge and gloomy roar, into some dark abyss that was frightful to behold.

As we stopped and contemplated this wonder of nature, with the lurid torch lighting up the awful scene, I suddenly perceived what appeared to be several bright sparks of fire in the bed of the stream.

As the depth of the water was only a few inches, I fixed my eye on one, descended into the current, stooped down, picked it up, and held it to the light.

"What have you found, Benson?" asked my companion.

"What is it?" I said, handing it to him.

Never shall I forget his wild, eager look, as he fairly shouted:

"Gold! Gold! Gold! As I live, gold! Hurrah! Our fortune is made!"

In a moment I was as much excited as he; and, forgetting everything else, we both began a hurried search along the bed of the stream for gold. We found it in particles—here, there, and everywhere—sparkling like fire beneath the light of our torch; and while we gathered it, looking eagerly among the rocks on every side for some enriching vein, we indulged in the wildest dreams of wealth and ambition.

Time passed unheeded, our torch burned low, and yet we thought of nothing but gold.

At last coming back down the stream toward the edge of the dark abyss, my companion saw something that drew him forward in haste. I perceived his danger, and shouted:

"Have a care!"

The words had not done echoing through the subterranean gloom, when there was a sudden slip, the dashing forward of a human body, an agonizing scream, the ghastly gleam of a swiftly descending torch, and then I was alone in the bowels of the earth, in the most appalling darkness.

For a time I was bewildered and stupefied, and I sat down there in the rayless darkness, moaning and wringing my hands. Then I shouted the name of my companion many times, and begged him to answer me, though I knew it was all in vain. Echo alone responded—an awful echo—that finally died out far away in the terrific gloom.

At last I aroused myself to thoughts of my own preservation. Fortunately I had brought with me the means of striking a light, and one bundle of sticks was still in my possession.

I lighted the last torch, cast around my one terrified glance, and hurried away from the roaring water, that was singing the funeral dirge of my late companion.

My presence here now is a proof that I reached the outer world alive; but more than once I was in despair, believing I had lost my way. After that I had a long, weary journey back to Port-au-Prince, and it was not till near the close of the fourth day that I came in sight of the town. It rained a great deal, and being completely drenched, I was often foul during those four days, and after exposed to a scorching sun.

The effect of all this was a fever, which kept me on my bed for six weeks, during which time my life was more than once despaired of; and it was nearly four months from my first attack before I was again fit for business.

My purse having now become pretty low, I bethought me of my golden cave, and at once endeavored to turn it to some account.

I mentioned my discovery to several different parties, telling them, at the same time, the sad tale of the loss of my companion.

Most of them listened with indifference, saying they did not think gold enough could be found there to defray the expense of searching for it; and I was about to give up the idea of making any money out of it, when I fortunately met a speculating Frenchman, who asked me what sum I would require to guide him to the cavern and relinquish all claim to whatever might be found within.

I named a sum equivalent to twenty-five thousand dollars, and after considerable arguing, he offered me twenty thousand, which I finally accepted.

I guided him to the grotto, conducted him to the subterranean stream—at which I shuddered as I again beheld it —showed him the little sparkles of gold, and received my promised reward. I never saw him afterward, but heard that he made a fortune by his purchase.

That twenty thousand dollars, so strangely acquired, I may say was my first real start in life. With that I began to trade in different articles, buying and selling, and two years afterward returned to England in a vessel freighted by myself.

I was prosperous in all my undertakings, and twenty years ago, retired from business, having what I considered enough of this world's goods.

"Hunger is the Best Sauce."

Yet some people are never hungry. Whatever they eat has to be "forced down." There is, of course, something wrong with these people. By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla a short time they are given an appetite and then they enjoy eating and food nourishes them. If you find your appetite failing, just try a bottle of Hood's. It is a true stomach tonic and every dose does good.

The best family cathartic is Hood's Pills.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other goods offered for sale in our store.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

A Snap.

Photogravures, mounted on a heart shaped velvet pad, with easel, of all the Generals serving in the South African war—the nicest novelty out for 20 cents each. Also a large colored picture 18 x 24 for ten cents. Times Bookstore.

The Times at Summer Resorts.

The Morning Times is sent to summer resorts and residences, addressed to individuals at thirty cents a month. Persons visiting the lakes and other places may have the Times addressed to them for as short a period as one week.

The Times' Megaphone.

The very thing for Stony Lake cottagers and campers. It will carry the voice half a mile to a mile and a half. Made in two sizes. Price $1.25 and $1.00. Every cottager should have one.

School Books Cheap.

Parents who have children going to school will save money by purchasing their school books at the Times Bookstore. We manufacture our own school supplies and therefore can afford to sell cheaper than anybody else. Besides we give presents with purchases. Don't forget this—you save dollars by going to the Times Bookstore.

They All Say So.

Mr. Percy Pearson, of Messrs. W. J. Pearson and son the well-known horse buyers of Montreal told the Times yesterday that his little advertisement which appears at regular intervals in the Times for horses, is the means of getting him some very fine stock. Especially is this so in the outlying towns and villages. The Times has a large and constantly increasing circulation throughout the district. It pays to use these columns. Every body reads the Times.

Horses Bought.

Messrs. W. J. Pearson and son, the well know horse buyers, of Montreal, arrived in town yesterday morning, and succeeded in securing a car load of as fine horses as one would wish to see. To the Times Mr. Pearson said that there was an erroneous idea prevailing that the South Africa war has made horses scarce in Canada. This is not correct. The number of horses required for war purposes is so small comparatively that it has little or no effect on the market.

To Reach the People.

The number of persons who pass a store, an office or other business places may be large, but there will always be many who will never see its sign. If the establishment be off the most frequented thoroughfare a great proportion of the people will not know of its existence. However, if a business be persistently advertised in the newspapers it will become known in time to virtually everybody in the community. A newspaper "ad," published regularly, gives the advertiser advantages more than equivalent to those possessed by the most conspicuously located non-advertiser in the city.

Inquest Ordered.

As a result of the investigation made by County Constable Cochrane, the Attorney-General has ordered an inquest to be held for the purpose of enquiring into the cause of death of Ira Derry of Malone, and Charles McLauchlan, of Blair- were killed in shaft No. 3 of the Cordova ton. the two miners who on Friday last Exploration Co., near Marmora. It is said there is strong suspicion of foul play. As the remains of the two unfortunate men were interred at Marmora, they will have to be brought back ten miles to the scene of the catastrophe. County Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, and Coroner Gray left for the mines last night.

Johnny's Wisdom.

At the Central School yesterday, Mr. Smith asked the scholars to write a sentence in which the word "chaste" was used. Johnny M——, whose father is a subscriber to the Times, (which enables Johnny to keep posted on current events) wrote—Gen. DeWet is the most chaste man there is.

WAS FLIM-FLAMMED.

Wm. Nichol, of Peterboro, Defrauded Out of $10.

Mr. W. Nichol, of Peterboro', who was en route to Brantford, was flim-flammed out of $10 at the Stuart Street station of the G.T.R. on Friday afternoon. He took a seat in the train for the Telephone City, and in a few minutes a stranger sat down beside him. The stranger jumped up, saying he would go and buy a box of cigars. He returned in a second or two and said the bartender couldn't change a $50 bill, and asked for the loan of $10 for a few minutes. He got the loan and disappeared.

Nichol reported the matter to the detectives and was advised to remain over. He did so and when the train from the east Saturday pulled in he pointed out a man to Detective Coulter. This man, he claimed was the man who beat him out of his money. The prisoner gave his name as Richard Meredith, and said he is a hotelkeeper in Buffalo. He is charged with theft.

Meredith was taken to the jail for a two-day remand and appeared before Magistrate on Tuesday when he was committed for trial.

AN OLD EDITOR

Found $2,000 Worth of Food.

W. S. Gilham, editor of the Capitol of South McAlester, I. T., said. 'Yes, it is true when I got hold of Grape-Nuts food, it was worth more than a $2000 doctor bill to me, for it made me a well man. I have gained 25 pounds in weight, my strength has returned tenfold, my brain power has been given back to me, and that is an absolute essential, for I am an editor and have been for 35 years.

"My pen shall always be ready to speak a good word for this powerful nutritive food. I had of course often read the advertisments regarding Grape-Nuts, but never thought to apply the food to my own use, until, in my extremity and sickness, the thought came to me that it might fit my case. The statements in regard to food are absolutely correct, as I have proven in my own case. One very fortunate thing about the food is that while it is most scientifically made and highly nourishing concentrated food I have ever known, it has so delicious a taste that it wins and holds friends.

LOCAL NEWS-LETTERS.

HIAWATHA.

(Correspondence of the Times.)

—We regret to report the burning of Mr. Cragg's shingle mill on Sabbath last. Cause unknown. The fire had spread into Mr. Ord's swamp, and but for the timely rain of Monday, a large quantity of valuable timber might have been destroyed.

—If the unsightly weeds that grow on the sides of our highways were cut down, the appearance of our village would be improved.

—The drive has brought quite a number of strangers to our vicinity. The men evidently know how to behave at church, and their attendance at religious service is welcome.

—Miss Eliza Mangon is spending a few weeks in town. Her place as church organist is being well supplied by Miss Nelson, teacher.

—We are glad to learn that Mr. Arthur Taylor, who has been lying ill for some weeks at the Nicholls Hospital, is showing signs of improvement.

DEATH OF MR. A. HUNTER.

One of North Monaghan's Oldest Citizens Crossed the River.

On Tuesday last Mr Anthony Hunter, one of North Monaghan's oldest and most esteemed citizens, passed away.

Mr. Hunter was the son of a U. E. Loyalist, who came from Scotland to Dunkirk, N.Y. early in the century. He owned the land on which that city now stands, with its 10,000 people. One night Mr. Hunter attended a political meeting at which there was a good deal said against Britain and British institutions. This so annoyed him that he sold his land for $50 and started for Canada, having to drive the entire distance. He finally settled in Cavan, where the deceased was born.

Mr Hunter was a consistent member of the Presbyterian church, Centreville, and was greatly esteemed and beloved. He leaves a grown up family of five boys—T. M. Hunter, the popular and efficient Reeve of North Monaghan; Jos. and William, who are in business in Portland, Oregon; and George and Albert who are at home on the farm.

The funeral will leave the family residence, Lot 3, concession 11, North Monaghan, this afternoon, at 2 o'clock, and proceed to the cemetery in Centreville for interment.

FOOLED THE SOLDIER BOY

Not Used to Feminine Ways That Are Dark and Tricky.

One of the soldier boys swung along in the parade with a heart far heavier than his gun, and as he passed a balcony on the avenue and saw a pretty girl and a repulsively well-dressed man there, he scowled fiercely. Last fall it was far otherwise. He smiled whenever he saw the girl, and the repulsively well-dressed man hadn't dawned yet. Last spring the soldier sacrificed two buttons from his blouse and had them made into hatpins for that girl. Two weeks ago he sat near her at the theatre, and when she removed her hat he saw that it had been pinned on with a turquoise fleur de lis and an enameled violet. The military buttons were not there. The girl had promised to wear them forever and ever.

The soldier boy went home and wrote her the witheringest note you can imagine. He told her that as she no longer cared for him she could no longer value the button hatpins, and that he'd like them back again. Of course, he put in a number of other remarks, some of them general, referring to the sex, and others specific and referring to her and to her conduct. She's a nice girl and an amiable girl, but that note was too much for her to endure. She sent a man servant with her answer:

"My Dear Mr. Skaggs: I would be very glad to return the hatpins you ask for, but I cannot tell which ones they are. They are all so alike that I am not at all sure which ones you gave me, but I send you what I have, and you can pick out yours. Very sincerely. FRANCES."

And that's why the soldier boy scowled. Being a mere man, he didn't even dream that six of the hatpins were borrowed.—Washington Post.

AN EXPIRIMENT IN LOVE.

It Cost the Bachelor a Wedding Present but He Was Satisfied.

Themoirs lifted his chin from his chest and his eyes from the toe of his shoe and sighed dolefully.

"I don't believe she'll have me," he said for the some dozenth time.

I smoked on.

"Why should she?" he asked, argumentatively.

"Why?" I asked, reflectively.

Tremoirs glanced at me. "What can she see in me?" he demanded.

"True," I replied; "what?"

Tremoirs regarded me doubtfully. "It's crass presumption in me to dare to love her," he asserted.

I nodded an enthusiastic assent.

Tremoirs glared at me for a full minute. "She is so lovely and pure and—and beautiful, that for a rough, crabbed, worldly fellow like me to marry her seems like an insult," he said.

"It is," I agreed.

"Confound you!" cried Tremoirs, hotly. "I'm as good as you are."

"Undoubtedly," I observed, in as sarcastic a tone as I could manage.

"And I'll propose to her this very night, if you do think I'm too big a scoundrel to" Tremoirs announced, bitterly, as he hastily departed.

Well, I suppose I'm out a wedding present, but I've proved my theory, which is that the self-abnegation lovers indulge in is simply unconscious hypocrisy.—Puck.

A HANDY ELEFHANT

He Would Rock Babies Asleep With His Trunk

Stretched on the floor of an annex of the Crystal Palace is all that now remains of Charlie, the performing elephant—a great dusky skin and huge frame, says the London Chronicle. Everything else has been buried, and soon the hide and skeleton, mounted after the most approved taxidermic methods, will be added to the natural history section of the palace.

Although he had two human lives to his record, Charlie was not without friends, and there are at least three men who mourn his inglorious end. One is a black attendant, who declares: "Charlie all right, poor old fellow;" and another Mr. Edgar Shrubsole, who is renovating the "specimens" at the palace, and speaks admiringly of the dead elephant as the best proportioned animal of its kind he has ever seen. But perhaps Charlie's most sincere mourner is Mr. Sanger, with whose circus the creature traveled for close upon forty years. "He was the most docile, affectionate and intelligent animal and the finest performer I have ever known," said Mr. Sanger recently to one of our representatives. "He has been up and down the country with me for thirty-eight years, and has never interfered with the public. Why, he has nursed all my children and my grandchildren, and what better evidence can there be of his docility than that? It sounds surprising, but what I mean is that he took them in his trunk and swung them gently until they fell asleep. Money will not replace him. I don't know where I could get an elephant of his size and quality as a performer." Before the final tragedy of Charlie's life took place Mr. Sanger bade him an affectionate farewell in his stall.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other goods offered for sale in our store.

Bell Pianos

At Toronto Fair.

The attention of all music lovers and piano buyers is directed to the exhibit of Bell Pianos and Organs in the Musical Pavilion at Toronto Exhibition. The pianos shown are not specially prepared for exhibition, but are samples taken from the company's regular stock, and for touch, tone, and finish, cannot be duplicated anywhere. We invite a critical inspection and comparison of our instruments, each one being guaranteed for ten years ensuring to the purchaser a lasting satisfaction.

We have also obtained the sole right for Canada for the manufacture of the wonderful "Apollo," a new and wonderful automatic piano-playing instrument, which will be shown for the first time at the Company's exhibit The "Apollo" is built on the experience of earlier inventions. It is in no sense a mechanical instrument. It can be attached to any piano, and the player can at all times control the volume and expression, and renders the most difficult pieces of music in a truly masterly way. Whoever owns a piano should have an "Apollo."

At the city warerooms, 70 King Street West, can be seen an exact duplicate of the stock shown at the exhibition, and a great array of second-hand pianos and organs of nearly every make, which we are clearing out at low prices, the terms being made to suit the purchaser. If you are thinking of purchasing an instrument, don't fail to inspect this stock at Bell Piano Warerooms, 70 King Street West, TORONTO.

BOERS STILL FIGHTING AROUND BLOEMFONTEIN

General Bruce Hamilton Defeats an Attack Upon the Bloemfontein Waterworks—Boers Appear in Thaba N'Chu—Buller Confronted With a Difficult Task.

London, Sept. 6.—The chief feature of the news from South Africa is the recrudescence of the war in the neighborhood of Bloemfontein, or nearly 400 miles in Lord Roberts' rear. The capital of the Orange River Colony was occupied by the British on March 13th, nearly six months ago, and it is indeed a commentary on the stubborn resistance of the Boers and their dogged nature that they are still waging war only a few miles from their erstwhile capital, and not more than fifty miles from the scene of disaster—the field of Paardeberg. A second attempt has been made upon the Bloemfontein water works, the scene of a similar attack during Lord Roberts' occupation of the town. This was happily defeated by the vigilance of Gen. Bruce Hamilton, who probably saved the garrison from being deprived of of its water supply and confronted with the risk of a second outbreak of enteric fever, which proved so fatal when the Boers made their last raid upon the water works. Father north Gen. De Wet is again said to be in the field engaged at his old task of raiding convoys and snapping up supplies, while the siege of Ladybrand proved rather a serious affair and only resulted in the escape of the garrison by a narrow margin. On the whole, therefore, it will be seen that a difficult state of affairs exists south of the Vaal, and one requiring all the energy of Lord Roberts to cope with. This being so, it is scarcely likely that the commander-in-chief will return to England for some time, as reported from some quarters. Gen. Buller in the meantime appears to be confronted with a second edition of Spion Kop, which it is to be hoped may turn out better than the first.

BOERS AT THABA 'NCHU.

London, Sept. 6.—A Boer commando has appeared at Thaba N'Chu, between Bloemfontein and Ladybrand, the scene of one of the most successful exploits of the burghers in the spring campaign. A British force, under General Bruce Hamilton, hastily left Bloemfontein on Saturday, and there was an engagement the waterworks on Sunday, in which the Boers were defeated. In the central district of Orange River Colony the Boers, supposed to be under De Wet, have raided the railway in two places and captured a train of trucks carrying supplies and stores.

STRONGER THAN LAING'S NEK.

London, Sept. 6.—As if in defiance of the annexation proclamation the Boer resistance is assuming fresh activity in various distance quarters. General Buller's column has been continuously since August 21, and now finds its progress blocked by General Botha among the Lydenburg mountains, in a position which is described as stronger than Vaal Krantz or Laing's Nek. The fighting of Sunday and Monday made no apparent impression on General Botha's force, which will probably be able to hold out against a frontal attack, but Lord Roberts hopes to turn them out by a flank movement.

OF COURSE, HE DOES.

Durban, Natal, Sept. 6.—A despatch from Lorenzo Marques, Portuguese East Africa, says it is reported that President Kruger, of the Transvaal, has protested to Lord Salisbury and the powers against the annexation of the Republic by Great Britain.

IS ROBERTS RETURNING?

Cape Town, Sept. 6.—The arrival here of four of Lord Roberts' charges is taken to be an indication that the Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in South Africa will soon return to England.

MORE CANADIAN HORSES.

Montreal, Sept. 6.—Canada is to send out another consignment of horses to South Africa, there to be used by the British army in chasing Oom Paul out of his cover. The steamship Cervona, of the Thompson Line, arrived in port last evening from London and after discharging her general cargo she will place on board about 800 horses for the use of the Imperial army. The Cervona will sail direct for South Africa on or about the 15th of this month.

IS SENATOR COX THE COMING MAN?

Report Goes that He Will be the Liberal Candidate.

CAN HE REDEEM THE RIDING?

The Conservative Party Fear it, and live in the Hope that Mr. Cox. will stay in the Senate—The Government Said to be Anxious to have Mr. Cox Run.

The rumor is persistent that Hon. George A. Cox, is being strongly urged to contest West Peterborough in the interests of the Liberal party at the approaching parliamentary elections. It is claimed that Mr. Cox will be able to redeem the riding, and that his candidature will help the Liberals in East Peterborough and in South Victoria.

Yesterday a prominent Liberal told the Times it was true that the government was urging Mr. Cox to contest the riding, and that he is now seriously considering it. Mr. Cox would of necessity have to retire from the Senate, and it is thought that if the seat is given to the late member for West Peterborough, Mr. James Stevenson, who is entitled to some recognition for his long services to the country, it would secure for Mr. Cox and Mr. Lang in the east considerable conservative support.

Mr. Cox is regarded by the people of West Peterborough, practically as a local man. He has much property in the riding, and would naturally do all in his power for his constituents should he be elected. It is however, known that he is very much opposed to the idea, on account of the work and worry that it will entail, saying nothing at all about the large expense. It is said the government has reminded Mr. Cox, of what it has done for him in the Crow's Nest and other matters, and that this argument is irresistible.

Perhaps the best idea of the situation and the probable outcome, should the senator accept nomination, is the fact that the Conservatives are seriously alarmed. They do not make any bones about saying that their chances of holding the riding will be very much reduced, should Mr. Cox enter the contest.

The matter will be disposed of in a few days. The Liberals have called a meeting for this evening, to arrange for a convention of the party, to be held probably in 8 or 10 days.

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs.—To-day fine and cool.

A period of rapid weather changes is settling in and the general autumn type of conditions is becoming apparent. The West India hurricane now covers Southern Florida, its course at present being northerly. Showers were general during the night in Ontario and Quebec.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

Claims New Germicide Discovery, which will Cure all Diseases.

London, Sept 7.—William Kilsby, an Oxford street chemist, claims to have discovered that diphtheria and other contagious diseases can be cured by inhaling the fumes of nitric acid. He tells of a cure of of a virulent case of diphtheria in his own family. In order that the medical profession might enjoy the benefits of his discovery Kilsby wrote to the Royal College of Physicians stating he had found an absolute cure for infectious diseases, and by way of reply received the customary asinine intimation that the college did not deal in secret remedies.

HORTICULTURAL SHOW.

The Exhibition Last Night a Big Success.

A VERY FAIR ATTENDANCE

The Market Building Becomes a Beautiful Flower Garden—Full List of Prizes Awarded.

The annual exhibition of the Peterborough and Ashburnham Horticultural Society took place yesterday evening in the Market Building. The show of flowers was fully up to the average of former years, while the fruits and vegetables, were also well worth seeing.

Some very pretty designs in cut flowers were also on exhibition. A monster bouquet of perennial phlox is very fine, and the fern, geranium, begonia and fuschia exhibits are especially good.

The membership list, we are pleased to say, is larger than it has been for years. Entries, however, are not quite as numerous as on former occasions, the dry weather of the past month being anything but an encouragement to floraculture. As has not been the case in former years, the gardeners of the vicinity have made few, if any, entries, and the reason for this is one of those things no man can find out, as they more than any other party would be expected to reap the greatest profit by having on view as fine an exhibit as it would be in their power to furnish. The flower show is therefore almost entirely made up of private contributions.

Mr. E. T. Collins, of the Horticultural Gardens, Toronto, acted as judge, he having filled that office for the past two years with eminent satisfaction.

GERMANY DECLINES TO WITHDRAW HER TROOPS

Reply of the Kaiser to the Absurd Proposal of Russia Received at Washington.

AN EXPEDITION SENT OUT AGAINST THE BOXERS

Four of the Revolutionists Beheaded at Tien Tsin as an Example—Goldwin Smith Expresses Strong and Original Views on the Chinese Situation.

London, Sept. 7. 3.30 a.m. Germans polite refuse to withdraw from Pekin is commented upon with keen satisfaction. In London and the Hope is expressed that Lord Salisbury will show similar firmness. The British opinion has not yet been formulate, Lord Salisbury desires to consult with his colleagues and has notified the foreign office of his intention to return to London from the content early next week. There is little doubt that Germany's reply is the outcome of this discussion carried on during the last few days between the European Cabinets and that the compromise policy of maintaining the occupation of the capital but withdrawing the greater part of the troops to Tien Tsin will general concurrence from Shanghai, it is reported that Japan has notified the powers of her willingness to withdraw her troops provided an adequate guard is left for the legations and on condition that China formally requests evacuation and opens genuine negotiations for peace altogether. Appearances are now hopeful and it is likely that when field Marshall Count Von Waldensee arrives a fortnight hence at Taku, he will find the allies agreed up some common policy. Shanghai is full of conflicting rumors regarding the movement of Li Hung Chang.

It is asserted that Marquis Seng and 30 officials remaining in Pekin have appealed to Li Hung Chang to repair immediately to the capital to save the situation, since nobody is there to assume authority, Prince Ching being detained in the Province of Shansi by illness. Chang Chi Tung, the Wu Chang Viceroy, has telegraphed an urgent appeal to the British Consul in Shanghai, urging Great Britain to institute peace negotiations. He emphasises the magnitude of the British trade, and refers to the activity of the secret societies and the decline of trade. He gives these as vital reasons why England should take the lead, instead of, as in 1894 allowing Russia to usurp her power and prestige. His final ground of appeal is that Great Britain, the United States and Japan have shown anxiety to promote commerce and to befriend China, and he implores these three powers to appoint plenipotentiaries authorized to open peace negotiations with Li Hung Chang. It is reported that 2,000 Boxers have been killed and wounded in conflicts with the troops of General Yuan Shi Kai, Military Governor of Shantung. A Hong Kong despatch reports from Wu Chan, that serious disaffection exists at Lu Chan. Three hundred robbers besieged the residence of a wealthy Chinaman at Tarping Fu. The Prefect of Wu Chau with 100 soldiers, went to his assistance, but has been compelled to telegraph for 400 reinforcements.

London, Sept, 6.—What is now designated in some quarters as an attempt to establish a "Russian Monroe Doctrine" in Asia, seems doomed to modification. Hence the prospects of the continued concord of the powers are believed to be improving. It is thought that the announcement of the names of the four personages appointed by Imperial edict as Chinese commissioners will furnish Russia with a plausible reason to join in the American demand for the appointment of a more satisfactory commission and give Russia ground for delaying the withdrawal of her troops from Pekin until the Chinese Imperial party a more conciliatory disposition.

According to a despatch from Shanghai it is reported there that Prince Tuan (the father of the heir apparent and reported leader of the extreme anti-foreign movement at the palace), is hiding within easy reach of Pekin, awaiting the result of the present conference of the powers.

The rumors emanating from Shanghai that the expedition which it is said will shortly start for Pao Ting (about 80 miles south-west of Tien Tsin), will go thence to Tai Yuan Fu (about 300 mile south-west of Tien Tsin), capital of the Province of Shan Si, where the Dowager Empress and Emperor, and the court are sojourning can be dismissed as fantastic. The allied forces are in no way equipped for such a crusade.

The Boers are still active in Shan Tung Province. An official despatch from Tien Tsin reports that 300 Boxers attacked a patrol of German marines near Lan Tsun September 5, with the result that forty Boxers were killed and the Germans suffered no loss.

BOXRES WERE EXECUTED.

Tien Tsin, Aug. 30—Four prominent Boxers were executed in Tien Tsin to-day. The French shot two and the Japanese beheaded the others. The executions have had a good moral effect.

EXTERMINATING THE BOXERS.

Taku, Sept, 4.— An expedition will shortly start for Pao Ting Fu, clearing the villages en route, which were the seat of the first Boxer outrages in the Province of Chi Li.

The Russians intend to repair the railway through to Pekin.

It is reliably asserted that native soldiers acting under the orders of Li Hung Chang, are exterminating the Boxers in the Provinces of Hu Nan and Chi Li.

THROUGH THE FORBIDDEN CITY.

London, Sept. 5.—General Sir Alfred Gaselee, commander of the British Indian troops at the Chinese capital, wires as follows from Pekin, August 29, to Lord George Hamilton, Secretary of State for India. "The allies marched through the Forbidden City yesterday (August 28). The British had third place in the procession, the Russian and Japanese being in greater strength."

GERMANY SENDS HER REPLY.

Washington, Sept. 6.—The attitude of the German Government on the Russian proposal to withdraw the troops from Pekin has been made known to the United States, and is to the effect that Germany considers it necessary to retain her forces in Pekin.

LATEST FROM PEKIN.

Washington, Sept. 6.—The War Department to-day received the following cablegram from General Barry—

"Taku, China (no date).—All quiet Pekin. No communication Chinese official after August 28. Telegraphic communication Pekin, Tien Tsin bad. Extreme heat ended."

GOLDWIN SMITH'S OPINION.

Goldwin Smith thus expresses his opinion on the Chinese crisis in the current issue of the Weekly Sun—

There is no use in trying to form an opinion without trustworthy data, which about the situation in China we have not. When the central authority of a bureaucratic Government of four hundred millions is overthrown confusion must ensue. What will be the limits of the confusion must depend largely on the authority and character of the Provincial Viceroys, as to which we are very much in the dark. It is evident enough that the allies are at variance among themselves and will find great difficulty in agreeing on any plan for the re-establishment of order. This was sure to be the case, the motives of all being, as Lord Elgin sorrowfully said of those of Great Britain, purely selfish, while their interests point different ways. Russia, from her territorial position, plays her game with great advantage, and has roused the angry suspicions of all her rivals. Discordant on most points, on one point the allies seem, as might have been expected, to be agreed. They are all looking forward to the exaction of money indemnities from the unfortunate Chinese people, the masses of whom make a bare living by unremitting toil and painful frugality, utilizing every scrap and remnant, almost like the famished inhabitants of a beleagured town. For what are the indemnities to be exacted? For the crime of the predatory powers themselves in conspiring to partition China under the guise of dividing it into spheres of influence and thus goading the people to a frenzy of which all the confusion, havoc and slaughter are the inevitable results.

Halifax, N.S., Sept 6.—Although nothing definite has been received from the War Office regarding the appointment of Lieut.-General Warren, of Spion Kop fame, to succeed Lord Seymour as commander-in-chief of the British forces of North America, yet Col. Biscoe, acting commander at Halifax, has received intelligence that Gen. Warren has been named for the position.

THE WORK CURE.

In a recent address before the British Medical Association Dr. Pye-Smith named hard work as the nearest universal remedy and as helpful for most ills. He says it is a cure for a thousand nervous ailments, and remarks that this is apparent when one thinks that hard working people are not affected by them.

This is an open prescription to the world and it may be said of it that it is easily followed and cheap. But does it accord with the facts? As a rule, nervous troubles arise from overwork. People strive to get rich, to live well, to attain fame, to secure a competence for their families, to educate their children, to gratify ambition, and whether they fail or succeed they apply themselves to work with an energy that too quickly exhausts their vitality and leaves them the victim of the cure Dr. Pye-Smith proposes. It is a wise man that knows when to stop work and where to draw the line at overwork. What the doctor probably means to convey in this, that if people are without care or great ambition, if they are able to live by moderate physical exertion every day and are content to do so, they will in a great measure be free from nervous troubles.

It would not serve in all cases to adopt the rule suggested by the man who found he could not work and drink whisky too, and so he gave up the work, for that might lead to dropping the least harmful part of our occupations. But if these last generations could live like the patriarchal tribes of yore, tending their herds and gazing at the unspeakable stars, having no mortgage on the sheep run, nor notes to meet at the shepherds' bank, nor anxieties about the county fair diploma for a prize ram, they would, like their forefathers, be free from nervous disorders in a large degree, and perhaps emulate their years in number.

Even in this day the paupers in the almshouse survive those who work for their daily bread, and it is because they are settled for life and have no worry. It is this hustling for hash and glory that makes nervous patients for doctors and shortens and burdens life, and to attain either of these aims nowadays means work and plenty of it.

PLAGUE IN GLASGOW.

The plague situation in Glasgow is assuming somewhat serious proportions. According to yesterday's dispatches, eleven persons are now suffering from the disease and five others have symptoms of it. Two deaths have occurred, both being in the family where the disease was first found. The first death occurred last Monday and was that of a child, who for a few days had been treated for pneumonia under a misapprehension of the nature of the disease from which it was suffering. That the child died of bubonic plague has been proved in a post-mortem examination, the results of which have just been made public. The origin of the Glasgow epidemic, which started in the crowded tenement district, has not yet been traced, but it would not be surprising if a connection were found between it and the arrival in the Thames early in the month of a ship from Calcutta with four cases. The crew of this craft was large and there were many passengers aboard, so that it would have been quite within the possibilities for someone lightly afflicted to have got past the health authorities and communicated the disease to the Glasgow family. It would have been possible, too, for the disease to have developed in the case of some sailor who apparently was perfectly well and had been passed through quarantine.

The spread of the plague in the United States in this way is what is feared by the American authorities. Supplementary orders urging a most rigid examination of all persons arriving from Glasgow have been issued by the Marine Hospital Service of the United States. With the plague on all sides, it will be strange if we escape. The disease, it is asserted, has appeared in the Chinese quarter of San Francisco, but this has been vigorously denied by the local health authorities. If the health officers prevent the entrance of the plague much credit will be due them, for the efficiency of the quarantine service, but even if it does get past the line, there will be no cause for fear. Health officers in all parts of Canada and the United States are alive to the situation and the possibility of the bubonic plague becoming epidemic anywhere on this continent is remote, indeed. The plague cannot flourish where there is cleanliness any more than can yellow fever, and it is a fact that the sanitary conditions of the large communities of this country are better than ever before.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The profits accruing to the City of Auburn, Maine, under municipal ownership of the waterworks system seem to be very satisfactory, says the Waterville Mail. The net profit for the last year was almost $8,000 and the total net profit for all the time since the city acquired the works is about $57,000. That is rather better than putting that much money into the pockets of a private corporation.

INT R STING ITEMS

The New York Times tells of an incident that shows how large ocean steamships have become: "Once a little immigrant boy, about 7 years old, was lost for four days on the voyage over. He left his mother and started in quest of adventure about the big ship, but upon growing tired was unable to find his way back to her. Instead of asking some one to show him where to go, or telling that he was lost the young truant decided to continue his explorations indefinitely. When found he was sleeping in an empty coal box down among the engines. One of the crew took him to the captain, who detailed six stewards to search for his mother. They found her with some difficulty, and discovered that out to look for her son and not being she, two, had been lost, having started able to get to her own part of the ship again."

Americans who have visions of living cheaply in Paris should banish them. It is a good rule to count on its costing as much in the City of Laughter as in New York or Chicago, with this difference, that in Paris sleeping rooms heated by steam or hot air and lighted by electricity or gas can only be found in high-priced hotels and pensions. Bath rooms are equally scarce closets are important enough to be especially mentioned in the advertisements, a single window is the rule, and the majority of rooms face courts or back yards because of the peculiar construction adopted for French apartment houses. Americans cannot find "all the comforts of home" without paying roundly for them.

A well-known water-front character in Bath, Me., recently spent a month in jail at Wiscasset and rather enjoyed it. The warden treated the man leniently, allowed him to go fishing and enjoy other reliefs to the monotony of prison life and used him as a mail messenger and errand boy. One night the prisoner was delayed on a mission to the post-office and did not arrive at the jail until after six, when the institution is closed for the night. The warden was waiting for the delinquent and gave him a small lecture, ending by saying: "If you are as late as this again I shall lock you out!" The prisoner was careful to be on time after that.

Trades unions hitherto have been but little known in Paris. It is now announced that 3,000 assistants employed in the three great shops, the Bon Marche, Louvre and Samaritaine, are meditating the organization of an association of this kind.

For the first time in the history of the national census there will be an enumeration this year of animals employed in cities and towns. Heretofore the live stock census has been confined conclusively to farm animals.

Women students are in future to be admitted to such courses in the medical department of Owens' College Manchester, England, as will enable them to qualify for a medical degree.

There are now in the United States army two regiments of colored cavalry and four regiments of infantry, and a large number of colored men are enlisted in the navy.

An Economical Duke.

The Duke of Cambridge is not famous for his liberality. They say that he is not in the habit of spending twopence where a penny will do. One wet day long ago he hailed a cab in Pall Mall and bade the jehu drive to Victoria station. Arrived in due course at the terminus, the Duke handed the driver a shilling. The cabby looked at the shilling and then looked down at the Duke.

"'Ere wat's this?" shouted the cabby. "Cant yer make it another tanner?"

"Certainly not," replied the Duke, "and, what is more, you came the wrong way. What made you go right round Hyde Park corner and Grosvenor place?"

The cabby saw he had no chance, but boldly replied: "Coz St. James's Park is closed, sir."

"Closed?" queried the Duke. "St. James's Park closed? Why, how's that?"

"Oh," bawled the cabby, sarcastically, whipping up his horse, "they say as 'ow the Dook o' Cambridge lost a three-penny bit a-comin' 'cross the park last night, and the park's closed by 'is order till they find it!"

Pimples

Are more than a disfigurement of the skin; they are a handicap to a young man, alike in love and business. The pimply face looks dissipated and both merchant and maiden look askance at the unfortunate fellow whose face is his misfortune. An almost certain cure for pimples and similar disfiguring eruptions is found in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It purifies the blood of the corrupting cause of ordinary eruptive diseases, cleanses the skin and builds up the body with sound wholesome flesh. "Discovery" contains neither alcohol nor narcotics.

"I am well pleased with your medicines," writes John A. Calloway, Esq., of No. 316 28th St., Columbus, Ga. "In 1896 I was working at night and I broke out in lumps all over, and when these left the skin peeled off. I took six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and two of Doctor Pierce's Pellets, and I do believe that I am sound and well. I have a good appetite, but before I commenced treatment I had no appetite at all. My eyes were sunken and my face was pale. I had pimples and brown spots on my face. Now these are all gone. I have used many kinds of medicines but received no benefit. Last year I weighed one hundred and thirty-four pounds, and now I weigh one hundred and forty-five. Please accept my thanks. I am so glad I found the right kind of medicine."

"Caliber 54"—Story of a Little Hero

When General W. T. Sherman was alive, he was often greeted with the shout, "Caliber 54." Old soldiers would shout it sometimes without understanding its significance, says the Pittsburg News. Its origin is well deserving of a place in history, especially as it proves that even the little drummer boys who were in the field in the Civil war, like the late T. C. E. Ecclesine, often did as efficient service as the older boys.

"Caliber 54" had its origin at the battle of Shiloh. General Sherman was riding along over the field hurrying to get to his troops when he heard a delicate voice calling: "General Sherman! General Sherman!" The old war hero stopped, and the boy piped out:

"The —— Illinois regiment is over there on the hill holding the rebels back as much as they can and they're all out of ammunition and they want some." And then, with as much volume of voice as he could muster, he added. "Caliber 54." That was the most important part of the message, for the wagon trains might have gone with loads of ammunition and if it hadn't been caliber 54 it would not have been of the least use.

General Sherman got down from his horse to pat the urchin's head, and to call him a "noble little fellow," when he saw three or four tears on the boy's cheek and he said: "There, don't cry, my little fellow; get right along back, for we're going to whip them."

"I know that," said the boy, "but when I was coming here to give you the colonel's message, a rebel's bullet struck me here," pointing to the calf of his leg. "I was crawling along the ground the best I could, and I knew I could catch you."

Then the general assisted the lad to the hospital, and a few days later he went home to his mother in Vermont. But "Caliber 54" lives in history.

It sometimes happens that a man of resources is one who has ingenious methods of contracting liabilities.

A man learns a good many things from his children until they get old enough to know as little as he does.

SHE NEVER WAS A BOY.

When I came home the other night
With an ugly looking eye
That I had got into a fight
Poor ma commenced to cry,
But when I told pa how it was
He clapped his hands for joy
And told me I'd done bully, 'cause
Once he had been a boy.

"Boys will be boys." I heard him say;
"They won't be otherwise,
And the one that learns to fight his way
Is the one that wins the prize;
When I was his age fightin' was
My greatest earthly joy—'
But ma, she kept on cryin', cause
She never was a boy.

My golly, but I'd hate to be
A girl with fluffy hair,
And always prime as A. B. C.,
With clothes too clean to wear!
When ma was small I s'pose she was
Red cheeked and sweet and coy—
But, oh, the fun that missed her, 'cause
She never was a boy.

PAYING OFF.

"I'll pay him off! I'll pay him off first chance I get, if 'tisn't till I'm old as Methuselum, now!"

Tony's two brown fists came together with a thump. His eyes flashed and his face was like a flame. Mamma looked up, surprised and grieved at the outburst, but she didn't say a word; she only waited for what would come next.

"I will!" cried Tony. "I'll have to, mamma! He's the worst boy that ever lived! He's—he's—I'd like to pound him all black and blue, so!"

Whack! came his fists together again, poor Tony; and the fire in his eyes was all at once put out by tears. Mamma spoke then.

"Tell mother all about it," said she.

And Tony sat down on a little cricket at mamma's feet, and laid his head against mamma's knee, and told: which was just what he wanted to do.

"He's kept plaguing me even since I began to go to school, mamma Johnny Spratt has and he's the biggest too. I wouldn't plague a boy littler than I was would you mamma?"

"No, dear; I don't think I would."

"But he does, and calls names, too," Tony went on, beginning to grow rosy again. He calls me 'Tony George' because I always lift my hat to old aunty Dinsmore—and that's right, isn't it, mamma?" as he thought he saw a little twinkle in mamma's eye.

"Quite right, Tony," she answered, quietly.

"'Cause it pleases her so much, you know. And sometimes I carry her basket for her a ways. And he makes fun. And this morning"—Tony's breath came fast and he doubled his fists—"this morning I was the least bit late to school, and when I went in they all commenced to laugh, easy, of course, so Mr. Blake wouldn't hear, and look at the blackboard. And I looked, too; and there was a picture of a boy lifting a hat bigger'n he was, and bowing real low—an awful-looking boy, mamma, and Tony George' was right under it. I knew who made it quick enough, and my face got hot as fire; and just then Mr. Blake saw it, too, and he said, 'John, rub that thing out!' cross as anything. He knew who made it, too, you see. Mamma, if I was big enough I'd—I'd thrash him all to pieces. I'd just like to pay him off so he'd stay paid one while Mamma!"

Mamma didn't even smile. She felt that this was a serious matter.

"I don't blame you a bit," she said, soberly, "I think I would want to pay him off if I were you. I think, dear, I would kill him."

Tony jumped from his cricket, he was so astonished.

"Why, mamma Walters!" he cried. "Why—mamma—Walters!"

Mamma smiled then—she couldn't help it. But she was quite in earnest.

"It would be a great deal better than thrashing him all to pieces, Tony," she said; and Tony hung his head and blushed. "Suppose you try it."

"I don't know how," said Tony.

"I think you can guess, dear. And now we won't say another word about it for a week."

"I s'pose," said Tony, slowly, with his face puckered into a dozen wrinkles over this new idea. "I 'spose, mamma, you mean the way that old Quaker man did that grandpa used to tell about. But I can't be kind to Johnny Spratt, mamma—how can I after the way he's acted? 'Sides, I wouldn't have any chance."

"Make one," said mamma. "Now—no more for a week, my son, and then——"

Tony knew what that meant. It meant that at the end of the week he would be expected to tell mamma just how much he had done toward killing Johnny Spratt with kindness.

"I'm 'fraid it won't be much," he thought, with a little discontented pucker between his eyes. "It'll be pretty hard, I s'pose."

And so it was. Why, it did seem as if Johnny Spratt grew worse every day. Tony had to bite his tongue hard a good many times to keep from telling tales out of school about him. And as for being kind to him—that seemed quite out of the question, though Tony honestly did his best and didn't get angry more times than he could help.

At the end of the week his birthday was coming, and Washington's; and the night before, he rushed home from school all out of breath with his hurry and delight.

"O mamma!" he cried, eagerly. "We're going to have the best time, to-morrow! We're all—all of our class you know—going to put in twenty-five cents apiece and hire Mr. Baker's great big cutter, and Mr. Blake's going to take us to—to some kind of a lake that the last of it's 'gustic,' and his sister lives right close side of it, and we're going to skate, and fire at a mark, with just arrows, you know, mamma, and eat dinner at his sister's house. And we've got to meet at the schoolhouse real early, and—won't it be grand, mamma?"

Mamma smiled, and kissed both glowing cheeks; for though Tony was a good deal more than half past nine, as he would have told you, he hadn't grown away from his mother's kisses, yet.

"I hope you will have a very nice time," she said.

She said it again, next morning, when she had helped him into his ulster, and tied his muffler carefully, and settled his fur cap on his brown head.

"And now, Tony," she said, looking down into his clear, brown eyes, "I want you to remember whose birthday this is—and all about it, dear."

"Yes'm, I'll try," said Tony. And then he darted off to join the merry little crowd at the schoolhouse.

Johnny Spratt was there, too, but somehow he didn't look so merry as the rest. His eyes looked almost as though he had been crying.

But before Tony had time to wonder much about this, Mr. Baker's big, four-seated cutter was at the door, the bells jingling and the horses breathing out little puffs of steam on the clear, frosty air. Then what a scramble there was! It didn't seem longer than a minute before all of the laughing, merry company had piled in, and were tucking the robes around themselves.

Not quite all. There was one lonely little figure left on the platform.

"Come Johnny!" called Mr. Blake, kindly.

But Johnny Spratt shook his head and looked down at his feet. There were tears in his eyes, and he didn't want to cry before them all—a great big boy, almost eleven years old!

"I—I ain't going," he said. "I only came to see you off. I ain't got no—no twenty-five cents."

There was a stir in Tony Walters' heart just then, and he felt a funny little warm rush all over him. He thought of mamma—he remembered whose birthday it was. His cheeks grew cherry-red and his eyes grew misty. In a flash he was out of the cutter, pressing his silver quarter into Johnny Spratt's hand.

"Here, Johnny, take this," he cried. "You—you want to go more'n I do."

Poor Johnny Spratt! He looked at Tony and then at the sleigh-load of boys, and then at Tony again, and his face turned very red.

"I—I'd look pretty," he said, "s-taking your money after I've—— O Tony Walters! I won't!"

But the more he wouldn't, the more Tony insisted.

"Because it's my birthday as well as George Washington's, you know," he said, with a little laugh; "and I'd 'most as lieves stay to home with my mother. Come, Johnny!"

And then Mr. Blake, who understood all about it, said, "Come, Johnny, jump in," and Johnny obeyed, nearer to crying now than he had been before.

But all at once there came a voice from the driver's seat.

"Crowd in yourself, little chap," it said. "I don't believe you'll weigh half of twenty-five cents' worth. All aboard, now! Off we go-o!"

And off Tony went with the rest—if he hadn't I think I couldn't have told the story with half so good grace. And he never was so happy, and never had so good a time in all his life before as he had that day. It was a good time all around, and as for Johnny Spratt——

"Why, mamma," cried Tony, when he told his mother the story of the day's fun, "I b'lieve he's going to be one of the very best boys you ever saw—one of the very best ones!"

Bismarck and the French.

Bismarck had no great opinion of the French. He believed that they are too easily swayed by popular catchwords. "Talk to a Frenchman about liberty, equality and fraternity, tell him that his nation is the greatest in the world, and you can do anything with him. You can impress the French more than any other people if you tell them it is done in the name of freedom."

Asked his opinion in the case of a certain French spy, he said: "It's a sad case. You've got to hang him, but do it with the utmost politeness, so as not to hurt his feelings."

Ready for the Sun.

An Unexpected Answer.

Parent—Who is the laziest boy in your class, Johnny.

Johnny—I dunno.

"I should think you would know. When all the others are industriously writing or studying their lessons, who is he that sits in his seat and watches the rest, instead of working himself?"

"Why, the teacher."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Horses Bought.

Messrs. W. J. Pearson and son, the well know horse buyers, of Montreal, arrived in town yesterday morning, and succeeded in securing a car load of as fine horses as one would wish to see. To the Times Mr. Pearson said that there was an erroneous idea prevailing that the South Africa war has made horses scarce in Canada. This is not correct. The number of horses required for war purposes is so small comparatively that it has little or no effect on the market.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other goods offered for sale in our store.

Unnecessary Expense.

"A Teacher" tells the Belleville Intelligencer that he believes the pupils themselves are responsible for many of the troubles of parents in regard to buying school books. He mentioned a case in which a scholar misunderstood him and brought new books when it was not necessary at all. Other scholars, he says, tell their parents they have to have new books simply because the old ones are torn or soiled. Undoubtedly the best plan would be, for the teachers to give each scholar a written list of new books when required.

With Indignation.

Mr. T. H. Yelland, the genial fishery Inspector, desires the Times to contradict the statement which recently appeared in an evening sheet, to the effect that he had nets stolen at Stony Lake. The fact is that Mr. Yelland does not leave any nets lying around loose, either in the water or out of it. In his official capacity he naturally comes into possession of a considerable number of nets during the year. These he makes into hammocks, in which he rests at night at his summer cottage at Stony Lake where he spends most of his time enjoying the cool and refreshing zephyrs that occasionally blow through his whiskers. On behalf of Mr. Yelland, this g.-f. j. hurls back with indignation the infamous accusation of its puny contemporary.

The Arbitration.

The arbitrators in the case of R. A. Morrow vs. the Town, will meet in the afternoon to consider Mr. Morrow's claim of $3,000 for alleged damages to his building on the corner of George and Brock streets, through the lowering of the sidewalk. Evidence will be taken in the matter at four o'clock, witnesses being examined to ascertain whether or not the town was liable. If the liability of the town is established evidence will be taken afterwards to decide on the amount of damages due Mr. Morrow.

The Conservative Leaders.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Will the Times tell its readers how it is that Sir Charles Tupper and his party are not to speak in Peterboro? Is it because the riding is regarded as "safe," that no meetings are considered necessary? I see the veteran chief is visiting many places throughout Ontario Many of them of less importance than Peterborough.

A CONSERVATIVE.

Ans.—We do not know why Sir Charles is not to hold a meeting here unless it is because our local contemporaries have not yet come to an understanding in regard to West Peterborough. Or, maybe the local Tory "machine" is afraid of offending those good Grits (?) who occasionally vote Tory. Or, still further—if Sir Charles speaks in Peterborough it may mean that Sir Wilfrid will have to be brought here to reply to him, a circumstance which might seriously interfere with any arrangement between the two local machines.

ENGLAND AND FRANCE.

A Growing Feeling of Friendship Between the Countries.

London, Sept. 7.—If the feeling of good-will starting with Seymour's letter in praise of the French troops in China continues to increase at the present ratio France and England will be celebrating a love feast this coming fall instead of fighting battles, as many predicted a short time ago. Two new omens of peace are reported this morning.

The Lord Mayor of London has accepted an invitation from the President of the Paris Municipal Council to be present at the Fetes des Municipalities on Sept 22 and 23 while yesterday 300 delegates from the British Chambers of Commerce, on the way to Paris to attend the Congress of United Chambers, were welcomed as warmly at Calias as if they had been Russians. The delegates were met at the boat and entertained at a banquet by President Darquier of the Calias Chamber of Commerce.

The health of the Queen was proposed by the Sousprefect of Boulogne and responded to by Lord Avebury. M. Darquier, in a speech, declared the mass of Frenchmen had only good feeling towards England and wished for the most cordial relations.

Lord Avebury declared he loved France greatly and that the general feeling in England was one of good wishes toward France.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

An Unfortunate Deseronto Girl in the Clutches of the Law.

Deseronto, Sept 6—Chief Gunyou, of Deseronto, this morning brought to the County jail a young woman named Mabel Luffman, aged 19, from that town, who will have to answer the charge of attempting to kill. It appears that the unfortunate very recently gave birth to a child and on Saturday last it was found concealed behind a barn in the town, having been well wrapped up in clothing. It has since been ascertained that the little one had been left concealed for some hours, and that it was alive when discovered seemed almost incredible. The Luffman girl was arrested for the offence and has been committed to jail pending an investigation, which will be held on Tuesday next.

Simple Language the Best.

Just talk through the newspapers as you talk to your customers when they come to your store to look at or purchase your goods only say less. Tell all about your goods in the simplest language, that everybody can understand. You may be familiar with all the long words in the dictionary, and there may be some others in your vicinity who are, but the majority of people are not, and advertisements should always be written for the majority of people, not for the highly educated. Everybody reads the Times.

The Times' Megaphone.

The very thing for Stony Lake cottagers and campers. It will carry the voice half a mile to a mile and a half. Made in two sizes. Price $1.25 and $1.50. Every cottager should have one.

RACE RIOTS IN NEW YORK.

Numerous Assaults Made on Negroes During the Day.

New York, Sept 7.—A number of incipient race riots broke out here to-day, the direct cause being the shooting of John Brennan, a white messenger, aged 20 by John Davis, alias "Lamplighter," a negro. Brennan was one of a crowd of whites who taunted Davis, and bullets from the negro's revolver lodged in his stomach and chest. He is in a hospital and likely to die. The shooting was done on Sixty-Second street, and becoming noised about, the rough white element began to search out negroes. Before daybreak this morning James Arnold, colored, while passing Sixty-Fourth street and Amsterdam avenue, was attacked by a crowd of whites and badly beaten. He was treated at a hospital. Shortly afterward, about two block away, the gang oiled out a similar experience to Alexander Ballantine, colored, who was passing quietly along. In neither case was an arrest made.

At 9.30 o'clock in the morning a crowd of whites, led by Frank McPike, 24 years old went to a five-story tenement on Sixtieth street, occupied by negroes with the avowed purpose of cleaning it out. They had about demolished all the windows and incidentally cracked a head or two when the police arrived. McPike and another man were arrested. At 1.30 o'clock in the afternoon, Joseph Doyle, aged 18 years, filled his hat with stones and took his stand at Fifty-Ninth street and Eleventh avenue. He succeeded in inflicting scalp wounds on two colored men before a police clubbed and arrested him.

Officer John J. Cleary placed under arrest for "being sassy" William Hopson, colored. He rashly undertook to take his prisoner to the station through West Sixtieth street. That street between West End and Amsterdam avenues is called "Cuckoo row," and here colored people live by the hundred. The fact that one of their race was in the hands of a policeman was all that several of them wanted, and half a dozen of them thought they would release Hopson. Cleary used his club and then drew his revolver. By threatening to shoot the first man to move he held the mob at bay until other policemen came to his aid. They arrested Geo. Meyer, also colored. Cleary said he started the attempted rescue. Meyer resisted all the way to the station, and when he got there he had several scalp wounds. One in particular is large and it is thought the negro's skull was fractured.

William and Henry Rapp, brothers and white, were arrested and locked up this evening on complaint of Adam Johnson, colored who claimed they had stoned him.

The above are only a few assaults which came to light by arrests. The fact is that all day long the police in the neighborhood mentioned were kept busy dispersing small mobs bent on mischief.

The Stanley Piano Co.

The Toronto Globe, in speaking of the exhibit of Stanley pianos at the Toronto Fair, says.—People from the country always enjoy good music, and yesterday thousands of our Canadian farmers stood before the splendid exhibit of the Stanley pianos in the Music Pavilion and listened to their heart's content to the exquisite harmony of these superb instruments. There are pianos and pianos, as we all know, but among them all the Stanley takes a first place always. The reason is not far to seek. These instruments are exceptional in volume and purity of tone, in thoroughness and honesty of workmanship and, in beauty of design and finish.

Says it is Demoralizing.

The Times is in receipt of a letter from a citizen who states that the school inspector has passed a large number of pupils into higher forms than they are entitled to work in. Our correspondent argues that when pupils discover that some are "promoted" in this way, it will have a demoralizing effect on the rest, who are trying to get through in the regular way. This letter is very strongly worded, and is not unreasonable, we think. There would be no good object served in publishing the letter, we simply take this means of calling Mr. Walker's attention to the matter.

CANADIAN VICTORY OVER BOER RAIDERS

Squadron of Mounted Rifles Defeat an Attempt to Cut the Railway.

THE TROOPS SPECIALLY PRAISED BY ROBERTS

Boers Were in Great Force, With Three Guns—Canadian Garrison Only Numbered 125—Two Officers and Two Men Wounded—Six Missing.

London, Sept. 7.—Lord Roberts reports from Belfast, under date of Wednesday, September 5, as follows.

"Ian Hamilton traversed Dulstroom yesterday with slight opposition.

"Buller engaged the enemy's left this morning. Hamilton is endeavoring to turn his right.

"Boers with two guns and one pom-pom this morning attacked 125 Canadian Mounted Infantry, guarding the railway between Pan and Wonderfontein. Mahon proceeded to their assistance, but the little garrison had beaten off the enemy before he arrived. It was a very creditable performance. The wounded were Major Sanders and Lieut. Moodie, slightly, and two men. Six men are missing.

Major Sanders is in command of "D" Squadron of the 2nd Battalion of the second contingent. He is superintendent of the N. W. M. P., a graduate of the R. M. C., and fought in the Northwest rebellion.

Lieut. J. D. Moodie belongs to the first troop of "C" Squadron of the 2nd Battalion of the second Canadian contingent. He is an inspector of the N. W. M. P.

BEACHES CAPE TOWN

Cape Town, Sept. 7.—Baden-Powell arrived here this morning. In spite of the early hour of his arrival a great public ovation was given him. The crowd carried him on their shoulders from the railway station to the Government House, a distance of half a mile.

CABLE FROM MILNER

Ottawa, Sept. 7.—A cable from Sir Alfred Milner says that in the fight reported by Lord Roberts in addition to Major Sanders and Lieut. Moodie being wounded, D. F. Johnson was also wounded, and there are missing Sergts. Hague and McCullock and Privates Shaig, Glendenning, Shaw, Dabonk, all Canadian Mounted Infantry.

THEIR OWN RECKLESSNESS

Lieut.-Col Evans, commanding the Canadian Mounted Rifles, 1st. Batt., writing to a friend in Toronto, thus describes the circumstances attending the deaths of Lieuts. Borden and Burch.

"Young Borden had joined us there on the evening we reached Irene. He has been in hospital at Pretoria, and was anxious to get back to his battalion. We were out early on Monday morning, as our outposts at Kobbspruit, consisting of a troop of mounted infantry, had been driven in, and the Boers evidently meant an attack on our position. It was at the point where the road passed through the port through the range of hills that the hottest attack was made. They had managed to get under the hill held by an outpost of the Royal Irish Fusiliers, and were creeping up among the rough boulders on the side of the hill toward the Fusiliers' trenches, when two troops of the 1st Batt. Canadian Mounted Rifles were sent to the support of the Fusiliers. They were dismounted, and it was while they were turning the left flank of the enemy that poor young Borden and Burch were killed. They were both keen and eager to get at the enemy, who were driven back with heavy loss, and their recklessness of danger cost the battalion the loss of two gallant young officers."

HIS SONS ALL KILLED.

London, Sept. 6.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Manchester Guardian states that Gen. De Wet has informed friends that he will fight to the end. His sons have been killed in the war, and his wife has died of a broken heart. Official returns to September 1 show that the Boers have captured during the war 281 officers and 7,288 men, of whom 235 officers and 5,196 men have escaped or been released. One officer and 85 men died in captivity. The number of British remaining in the hands of the Boers is 1,052.

SKIRMISHES IN AFRICA.

Pretoria, Sept. 6.—The Boers still pursue guerilla tactics all along the line. Their raids are causing unrest in Northern Natal. Yesterday a party of the enemy visited a colliery near Ingagane and carried off a hundred pounds of dynamite. The general of communication has issued a warning to the colliers only to store sufficent explosives for their immediate requirement.

The garrison at Kraalpan attacked a Boer outpost on some hills in the vicinity, and drove them off with a loss of some killed and eight wounded. There was no loss on the British side. We captured eight horses. Occasional skirmishes happen to the east of the railway between here and Mafeking, and in the course of these recently a Cape policeman and a soldier have been wounded.

Commandoes aggregating 4,000 men are reported to be in the vicinity of Zeerust. The Boers have been shelling the British position at the Warm Baths with several guns, including a "Long Tom." The railway there, which was broken, is now being repaired.

Died at Souris.

A telegram was received a few days ago conveying the sad news of the death of Mr David Rose, of Souris, Manitoba, which sad event occurred on Friday morning last. The deceased was a former resident of Dummer and lived on the 4th line about three miles east of Warsaw, until about 10 or 12 years ago when he removed to Manitoba. Mr. Rose was highly esteemed in this section and his many friends will regret to learn of his death. He has relatives living in Peterborough.

A Good Season.

The summer resorts appear all to have had a fair amount of business this season. The management of Jubilee Point hotel report an extra good season's trade. The house has been full the most of the season, while the number of picnic and excursion parties visiting this charming resort, has greatly increased. There has been a picnic at the Point every day this week. Yesterday, a very large one came up from Hastings, numbering several hundred.

To Jubilee Point.

The steamer City of Peterborough will run an excursion to Jubilee Point on Thursday next, 13st instant, leaving the wharf at 2 o'clock, and returning by moonlight. This will be one of the best opportunities of the season to spend a few hours on the water. Return tickets 50 cents.

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs—Moderate to fresh northerly to easterly winds; fine and cool to-day

Cooler weather set in through the night in Ontario and Quebec, and minimal temperatures ranging between 34 and 46 were recorded at northern stations. The West India hurricane continues to travel slowly northward, and is now near New Orleans. The weather has been very fine in the Territories and Manitoba.

FORTY-FOUR TIMES LARGER THAN ENGLAND

Chief Dominion Forestry Inspector Says This of the Canadian Forest Belt.

Mr. E. Stewart, the chief inspector of timber and forestry for the Dominion, called on Mr. Thomas Southworth, Provincial Director of Forestry, this morning. Mr. Stewart has just returned from a three months' trip to the West in the interests of forestry. Efforts are being made, especially in Manitoba and the Territories, tore-timber denuded lands and to grow shelter belts of forest to break the winter winds of the prairies. Timber reserves are also being secured by the Government at the head waters of streams. These reserves act as a sort of reservoir of moisture and prevent the rivers from overflowing in the spring and from drying up in the summer. Some fifty townships have been set aside for this purpose in Ryding mountain, Manitoba, where the Red River and Assiniboia have their source.

According to Mr. Stewart Canada possesses an enormous belt of forest land just at the north of the narrow settled district along the southern boundaries. The northern forests of Canada stretch from Labrador to Alaska, a distance of 3,700 miles, and have an average breadth of 700 miles. The area of our northern forest belt is about forty-four times greater than England, which is 50,000 square miles in extent. Any one of these forty-four parts will produce timber enough to supply the ordinary demands of the present population of Canada, thus leaving us in a position to export an almost unlimited quantity of timber.

EAST PETERBOROUGH MOVING TORIES.

A Convention to be Called at an Early Date.

WHO WILL BE THE CANDIDATE?

Several Aspirants for the Honor—The Party Mean to put up their Strongest and Best Man.

Who will be the conservative candidate in East Peterborough is now a live question. In this connection the Times has a word to say. Mr. Lang, the present member, is in a way stronger than he was at the last election. He has the advantage of being the government candidate in a constituency in which considerable money is being spent in public works. The Trent Valley Canal was a power against him on the last occasion, it will now be with him. Then there is the people who have had their property injured by the Otonabee River of overflowing its banks, and who are looking for compensation from the government. This, the Times apprehends, will be arranged satisfactory, and will make many votes for Mr. Lang. Besides all this Mr. Lang is personally popular, knows every man, woman and child in the riding, and has done considerable for his friends as well as his constituents. Since the advent of the Laurier administration to power.

The conservatives in the riding have been doing a lot of thinking in order if possible to secure a man that will have a show to win.

They recognize the fact that they will not only have to put up a strong man, but will have to give him a united support. Then it will take money and a pile of it. The government candidates will be well supplied with funds, but their opponents, in most cases will not be so fortunate. In East Peterborough the conservative candidate will require five thousand dollars at least, if he hopes to win.

Amongst those who are spoken of as probable candidates is Mr. E. A. Peck, Ashburnham; R. C. Strickland, Lakefield; Dr. Couch Warsaw, and Dr. S. P. Ford, Norwood. Mr. Peck, who will probably be strongly pressed to stand, is popular, has ability and would make a splendid run. He is adverse to going into politics at present, however, and if he accepts nomination it will only be under strong pressure. In the event of Mr. Peck declining, Dr. Couch of Warsaw, will probably get the call. He is a good speaker, and is in a financial position to enter the contest.

The selection cannot be much longer delayed, and the outcome is not only being watched with interest by the people on this side of the river, but also by the whole country.

HON. CLIFFORD SIFTON A VERY BUSY MAN.

He is in Manitoba Arranging for the Elections Which Are Now to Take Place.

NO LONGER ANY DOUBT AS TO THE ELECTIONS.

The Minister of The Interior is Making Full Preparation for the Coming Battle.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept 7.

Hon. Clifford Sifton, Minister of Interior, has been in Winnipeg since Saturday morning. The Telegram of this city says that from the time he arrived until midnight he was kept busy with a steady stream of callers, consisting of leading party heelers and men after office. He is without doubt the busiest man in Manitoba. There is a big pull being made for the postmastership of Winnipeg, and the "Young Napoleon," as Mr. Sifton is called, is being waited on by influential deputations representing the various claimants for the plum.

It has been decided by the Liberal party to discourage in every possible way the bringing out of independent candidates, including R. L. Richardson, M. P. for Lisgar, and A. W. Putted in Winnipeg, who are no longer regarded as safe Liberals.

Mr. Sifton has started on a starring trip through the Province and has already spoken at several places. He is not having things his own way, even at his own meetings, where Conservatives are not represented by speakers.

That Hon. Hugh John MacDonald intends to resign the Premiership and oppose Mr. Sifton in his own constituency, is regarded as certain. Should he do so, it will be carrying the war into Africa with a vengeance.

There can no longer be any doubt that the elections will be sprung in the course of a few days or weeks at most.

Mr. Sifton, when asked by the Times' correspondent, said that he did not know when the House would be dissolved; but would not deny that immediate dissolution was probable.

MAY BE SALVED BY COMPROMISE

Suggestion That a Portion of the Troops be Taken From Pekin.

BIG FORCE FOR SHANGHAI

Allies are Quietly Preparing to Cope With the Situation in the Yang Tse Valley.

Berlin, Sept. 7.

It is said in court circles that Queen Victoria will visit Dowager Empress Frederick next month, unless the latter's condition meanwhile should considerably improve, which is not probable.

London, Sept. 7.

The London Chamber of Commerce has received a cablegram from the the Hong Kong Chamber of Commerce, with the request that it be communicated to the British Foreign Office, advocating a continuation of the occupation of Pekin until a proper government has been established and the guilty officials have been punished, and pointing out that an early withdrawal would be disastrous to foreign prestige in China. The despatch, together with a special letter from the London Chamber of Commerce recommending it as deserving of consideration, has been sent to Lord Salisbury.

London, Sept. 8.

The Daily News says that the Government expects decisive news from South Africa within a fortnight, and that parliament will be dissolved during the last week of September.

London, Sept. 8, 4.15 a.m.

The Chinese crisis furnishes no new features this morning. Nothing appears to be certain regarding Russia's action. Various statements are made in Vienna and Berlin, with an assumed air of authority, but the balance of opinion leans to the belief that Russia is still inclined to adhere to her decision to quit Pekin, whatever the other Powers may do.

The studiously moderate tone of Emperor Williams message is much remarked. There was nothing of the "Mailed Fist" of or revenge in his utterances. According to the Standard's Moscow correspondent, Russia's program mainly concerns Manchuria and the need of troops from Pekin to assist in the seizure of that province, which is looked upon as another Egypt. Her withdrawal from Pekin is considered an attempt to pose as of the principals of The Hague conference. The Tien Tsin correspondent of the Standard, wiring Aug. 30.—Says the Germans paired with the Americans in the march through the Forbidden City. The British Naval brigade and the marines of the legation guards left Pekin to-day. The Pekin correspondent of the Morning post in a despatch dated Aug. 23, says Mr Cronges has written a letter asserting that without the aid of the American missionaries the defence of legations would have been impossible. According to this the United States Minister received congratulary telegrams from President McKinley and others.

London, Sept. 7.—The German Kaiser, is straightforward and candid even if he lays himself open occasionally to the charge of lacking discretion. In the Chinese affair he has taken a sensible stand, and one which cannot help but have a great effect upon the present uncertainity on the part of his colleagues in China. Germany at least will not lend herself to any intrigue between Russia, Li Hung Chang and the Dowager, but intends to still press towards the goal which the allies originally set themselves, but from which some of them are swerving. The story that a limited withdrawal of troops from Pekin may be arranged cannot be relied upon, even though it may be considered advisable to salve wounded Russian susceptibilities by making a hollow pretence of acceding to her wishes. The Chinese crisis cannot be dominated by sentiment of this sickly sort, and it is ridiculous to suggest that such a thing may rule great nations. The example set by Germany of no compromise which does not assure the object aimed at by the allies—a safe and peaceful China—will no doubt be followed by Britain, the United States and Japan forming a majority which will bring about the fulfilment of this object. In the meantime the powers are quietly assembling a strong force at Shanghai, which clearly confirms the rumors of the past few weeks that disturbances were feared in the Yang-tse Valley, and shows that the allies are going to be ready to cope with them when the time arrives.

A COMPROMISE SUGGESTED.

New York, Sept. 7.—What is believed to have been a Cabinet meeting was held last night at the Country Club, in a suburb of Washington, says the Washington correspondent of the Herald, who continues—

"The dominant feature of the forthcoming note from Washington among the Powers as to China, will be the necessity for complete harmony. It is not intended to withdraw from Pekin, but Russia's views are to be met half way. That is to say, the proposal will be considered, and, in fact, it is hinted that a suggestion to the same effect was embodied in the reply of Germany—that each Power reduce its force in Pekin to a limited number of men the rest of the troops to be withdrawn to Tien Tsin. The American proposition will, therefore, be a compromise. The authorities are hopeful that it will suit Russia, which desires entirely to withdraw and Germany, which does not propose to retire. In anti-German circles apprehension has been expressed that the arrival of Count Von Waldersee with 20,000 men at Pekin would mean the permanent occupation of the Chinese capital. By limiting the number of men to represent each nation cause for such apprehension would be obviated."

AN ARMY AT SHANGHAI.

New York, N.Y., Sept 7.—The London correspondent of the Tribune says — A very suggestive item of Chinese news is that an order suspending the departure of the Fourth Brigade of Indian troops has been cancelled and that the entire force will proceed at once to the far east. Twelve hundred more Indian troops have been landed at Shanghai by England, so that there are now over three thousand there. The German troops landed at Shanghai yesterday and the Austrians are to disembark a small detachment doubtless to give moral support to the allies; so that a powerful little International army is gradually being formed at the Yang Tse treaty port.

It is possible that the Powers may also have to land a force further south before long. Street riots are said to be frequent in Canton, and the situation in that quarter is by no means settled.

VON WALDERSEE'S VOYAGE.

Colombo, Sept. 7.—Count Von Waldersee, commander-in-chief of the allied troops in China, arrived here this morning. After spending a few hours ashore the Count resumed his voyage.

LI APPEALS TO BRITAIN.

London, Sept. 7.—A despatch to the Times from Shanghai, dated September 5, say that Viceroy Chang Chih Tung has telegraphed an urgent appeal to Mr. Warren, the British Consul, urging that Great Britain should not delay in initiating peace negotiations. He lays stress on the magnitude of British trade interests in China, which he says will be seriously threatened if there is a continuance of disorder. He refers to the activity of the secret societies and the recent decline in trade. In conclusion, he declares that there are vital reasons why Great Britain should forthwith take the lead in arranging a settlement.

—A Belleville man announces that he will soon publish in a pamphlet form a history of the celebrated Napanee bank-robbery trial, with the full evidence, sketches of the lives of Billy Ponton and the others who occupied so much attention then.

—Mr. Jno Clancy gave a fandango to his friends on Monday evening, 3rd inst., Mr. Clancy gave everybody a cordial welcome, and by nine o'clock the house was filled to overflowing. The music was furnished by Messrs Doris and Dougherty, while Mr. Wm. Torpey did the calling off. Mr. Cavanaugh acted as floor manager. At intervals Mr. Jim Garvey and Frank O'Brien entertained the audience with some of their old time steps. After supper a debate took place, the subject being "was Canada Justified in Sending Troops to South Africa during the present Boer Wars?" J. Herr and Joe Calling took the affirmative, while J. Guerin and F. Murray took the negative. It is needless to say the affirmative won and the oratory of Mr. Herr on the occasion was deserving of much applause. The crowd dispersed about daybreak, Mr. Flinders entertaining the audience by turning a few wild cats.

EUROPEAN OR MANCHOO?

The allied powers in China sent armies to Pekin with two purposes in mind. One was to save the lives of envoys and citizens in North China. The other was to compel the Chinese government to recognize its international obligations. The envoys have been rescued and the Chinese capital in the possession of the allies. This is only the beginnign. There seems to be no difference of opinion among the allies as to what must be done, but there are differences as to how it shall be done.

The Rev. William N. Brewster of the Hing Hua mission, China contends that there are three possible methods of procedure; First, restore the rightful Emperor, Kwang Hsu, to the throne. Second, establish a new dynasty under a protectorate. Third, partition the empire among the powers. Of the three plans, Mr. Brewster insists that the first is by far the best, because with the Emperor restored and supported by the allies, the lawful government would at once assume control, there would be no delicate international difficulties to adjust, the country would be saved from a season of uncertainty, and the restoration of the Emperor would be hailed with delight by the great mass of the Chinese nation.

At all events the Empress Dowager and all her crowd of reactionaries, learned and venerable fools, must be turned out. Mr. Brewster believes that, if a new dynasty is established under a protectorate, America will be called upon to play an important part in supervision. If the outcome should make it necessary for the powers to govern China in sections instead of from a central authority, Mr. Brewster believes, the United States cannot stand aloof. American influence will be wholesome in the reorganized empire simply because it is unselfish and not antagonistic to European interests.

Why There are Heroic Jims.

"Why is it," the girl asked, "that the brave boys who are not appreciated at home—who are regarded as black sheep by the rest of the family, and go to war where they fall while carrying the beloved flag of our country up the rocky slopes—why is it that these noble fellows are always named Jim? I have read a hundred poems about them during the last year or two and every one of them was Jim. Is it merely a coincidence, or can there be something in a name, after all?"

"It is not a coincidence," the cynic beside her answered. "It's the name that makes them heroic. Juliet said a rose by any other name would smell as sweet, but Jim by any other name could not have poems written about him. Just think of the possibilities presented by slim, trim, vim, him, brim, grim, dim, whim, glim, rim, limb, not to mention cherubim, seraphim and a lot more long words that could be used in a pinch. Jim is one of the boys that have glory thrust upon them."—Chicago Times-Herald.

A MONOMANIACAL WITNESS

A Murderer Escapes the Hangman by a Lucky Reference to a Stack.

"That calls to mind a queer experience of my own," said a lawyer who had listened to the story. "Some years ago I defended a fellow for murder in a little Southern town, and the worst witness we had against us was an old German who was a stack builder by trade. A stack, by the way, is merely another name for a big chimney. The old fellow was perfectly honest and gave his story in such a clear, straightforward manner that I felt my client was doomed unless I could think of some way to break him down. While I was cudgeling my brains a friend whispered to me to ask him how high he could build a stack. 'What do you mean?' I asked, in surprise. 'Never mind,' said my friend. 'Just slip in that question and see.' So at the tail end of the cross examination I paused, as if struck by an afterthought, and said: 'You are a stack builder, I believe?' 'Yes, sir,' replied the witness. 'Well, sir,' I continued, 'about how high can you build—' I never got any further. A swift inscrutable change flashed over the German's face and he rose excitedly from his chair. 'As high as der sky!' he roared. 'So high dose angels come around it like birds!' In five seconds he was raving. You see, the man was a monomaniac— sane on every subject but one, and my friend happened to know his weak spot. It is hardly necessary to say that his evidence in regard to the homicide was promptly ruled out by the Judge, and as there was no other witness of importance my man was cleared. The rascal should have been hanged, and would have been but for the lucky reference to the stack."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

An Appropriate Text.

A little girl who lives up town went to church last Sunday. She is a bright little maiden and, considering her tender age, only six, she is decidedly intelligent. Her mother has been suffering from the grip and didn't accompany her, and as her father was away from home she went alone.

Whether it was the loneliness of the big pew or whether the church was poorly heated, mamma wasn't quite sure, but, anyway, the little maid came home and declared she was very chilly.

"My toes got so cold while I was sitting there, mamma," she declared. "And so did my fingers and my nose. I don't believe there was hardly a speck of fire in the furnace."

"That was too bad," said mamma; "did the other people seem to suffer, too?"

"Oh, yes, they did," cried the little maid. "They just shivered!"

Then mamma thought she would divert the little maid's attention.

"What was the text, dear?" she asked; "can you remember it?"

"I should think I could," was the quick answer: "I can 'member every word of it."

"Well, what was it?"

The little maid put her head on one side and screwing up her face, shrilly intoned:

"'Many are cold, but few are frozen!'"

And mamma had to admit that it seemed remarkably appropriate.

Willing to Concede.

At a convival party, recently, a gentleman who had returned from a lengthened tour in the East, was relating some of the wonderful things he had seen on his travels. The yarns he spun were decidedly "steep," but the guests politely accepted his statements as true. Encouraged by the reception accorded to his tallest stories he ventured to state that he had seen at the foot of the Himalayas a tiger forty-three feet long, from the tip of the nose to the tip of the tail. This was too much, and everybody kept silence, until a gentleman from Oban dryly remarked:

"Oh, yes, the works of Nature are very wonderful and very large whatever. Just last week I saw a skate brought ashore at Oban, which covered a quarter of an acre of ground."

Nobody spoke, and amid the silence the Eastern traveler left the room. The host, perceiving that something was amiss, rose and followed him.

"Is there anything wrong?" he asked.

"I have been insulted," said the traveler. "That Scotch gentleman has dealt a blow at my veracity, and I cannot return until he apologizes."

Anxious that harmony should prevail among his guests, the host returned to the room, and explaining matters to the company, asked the Highlander to make an apology, if merely for form's sake.

"Weel," said he, "I'll no just apologise, but tell him to come back and take a few feet off the teeger, and we'll see what can be done wi' the skate."

He Could Wait.

A boy was sitting lazily in the stern of a boat dangling his feet in the water, when a man from the dock called sharply to him:

"What are yer doin' there?"

"Nothin'," responded the boy.

"Do you get any pay for it?"

"No," and he drew one foot out of the water, ready to run if necessary.

"Why don't you go to work?"

"Will you get me a job?"

"Yes."

"Steady?"

"Yes."

"Pay anything?"

"Well, no," hesitated the man—"not the first week."

"How about the second?"

"Then I will."

"All right; I'll come round the second week. This is good enough for me now," and the boy put his foot back into the water, and winked at the man on the dock.

ROTHSCHILD'S MAXIMS

In one of the private letters of the late Alphonse de Rothschild these maxims of success of the great house of Rothschild are found:

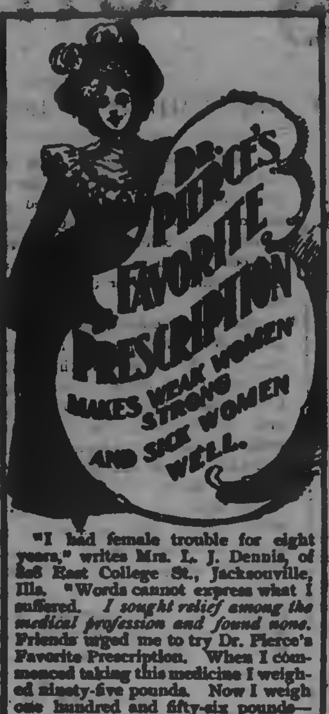
Carefully examine every detail of your business.

Take time to consider, but decide positively.

Dare to go forward.

Bear troubles patiently.

Be brave in the struggle of life.



"I had female trouble for eight years," writes Mrs. L. J. Dennis, of 828 East College St., Jacksonville, Ills. "Words cannot express what I suffered. I sought relief among the medical profession and found none. Friends urged me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. When I commenced taking this medicine I weighed ninety-five pounds. Now I weigh one hundred and fifty-six pounds—more than I ever weighed before. I was so bad I would lie from day to day and long for death to come and relieve my suffering. I had internal inflammation, a disagreeable drain, bearing down pain, and such distress every month but now I never have a pain—do all my own work and am a strong and healthy woman."

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. Correspondence private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

GEMS

The native music of aboriginal tribe is regarded as of great importance in anthropology, and the recent British expedition to the Torres straits and New Guinea have taken steps to preserve some of them. Some of the songs heard on Murray island are already obsolete, and will, it is believed, die out with the old men of the tribes. "In savage life," says one of the members of the expedition, "the songs of a tribe are its chief heritage."

Brimingham, England, is the only place in which manufacturing crowns is an industry that may be said to flourish. The trade is principally with Africa, where the numerous kings have come to regard a crown as a far more elegant emblem of royalty than the stovepipe hat which they formerly affected. A servicable crown, gaudily decorated with imitation precious stones, may be purchased for quite a small sum.

The Japanese apply one of their many pretty ways to the launching of ships. They use no wine but hang over the ship's prow a large pasteboard cage full of birds. The moment the ship is afloat a man pulls a string, when the cage opens, and the birds fly away, making the air alive with music and the whirr of wings. The idea is that the birds thus welcome the ship as she begins her career as a thing of life.

The monster telescope at the Paris Exposition which will, it is said, bring the moon within thirty-six miles, is three times the length of the largest of its predecessors, the Yerkes telescope at Chicago. It is 197 feet long, 5 feet in diameter and weighs twenty-one tons. The lenses, the largest in existence, measure over 49 inches in diameter and weigh 1,320 pounds.

The English people think that the proposed new nine-penny coin will enable them to get the better of the French, who, it is assumed, will accept the coin as the equivalent of a franc. At present, when John Bull visits Paris, he frequently has to surrender a shilling in exchange for an article the value of which is a franc.

Lord Methuen, at his own expense, has erected a monument over the grave of Count de Villebois Mareuil, bearing the following inscription: "To the Memory of Count de Villebois Mareuil, Colonel of the Foreign Legation of France and General of the Transvaal, who died on the field of honor, near Boshof April, R. I. P."

It is calculated that 200,000 women are employed as dressmakers in Paris.

"I could save more money," the young man admitted, "but I find it so hard to break away from my friends. A fellow can't be a boor and cut all his acquaintances without reason, you know."

"I will tell you what to do," said the man with the brindle moustache. "Buy a dog."

B—Do you refuse to close that window, sir?

C—I certainly do.

B—If you don't close it I will.

C—You won't.

B—If I come over there I will.

C—I'll give you odds you won't.

B—I'll ask you once more, sir; will you close that window?

C—No, sir, I will not.

B (getting on his feet)—Then I will, sir.

C—I would like to see you do it.

B (placing his hands on the window)—I'll show you whether I will or not, sir.

Simple Language the Best.

Just talk through the newspapers as you talk to your customers when they come to your store to look at or purchase your goods only say less. Tell all about your goods in the simplest language, that everybody can understand. Unnecessary Expense.

"A Teacher" tells the Belleville Intelligencer that he believes the pupils themselves are responsible for many of the troubles of parents in regard to buying school books. He mentioned a case in which a scholar misunderstood him and brought new books when it was not necessary at all. Other scholars, he says, tell their parents they have to have new books simply because the old ones are torn or soiled. Undoubtedly the best plan would be for the teachers to give each scholar a written list of new books when required.

WE CURE STRICTURE

Thousands of young and middle-aged men are troubled with this disease—many unconsciously. They may have a smarting sensation, small, twisting stream, sharp cutting pains at times, slight discharge, difficulty in commencing, weak organs, emissions, and all the symptoms of nervous debility—they have STRICTURE. Don't let doctors experiment on you, by cutting, stretching, or tearing you. This will not cure you, as it will return. Our NEW METHOD TREATMENT absorbs the stricture tissue; hence removes the stricture permanently. It can never return. No pain, no suffering, no detention from business by our method. The sexual organs are strengthened. The nerves are invigorated, and the bliss of manhood returns.

WE CURE GLEET

Thousands of young and middle-aged men are having their sexual vigor and vitality continually sapped by this disease. They are frequently unconscious of the cause of these symptoms. General Weakness, Unnatural Discharges, Failing Manhood, Nervousness, Poor Memory, Irritability, at times Smarting Sensation, Sunken Eyes, with dark circles, Weak Back, General Depression, Lack of Ambition, Varicocele, Shrunken Parts, etc. GLEET and STRICTURE may be the cause. Don't consult family doctors, as they have no experience in these special diseases—don't allow Quacks to experiment on you. Consult Specialists, who have made a life study of Diseases of Men and Women. Our NEW METHOD TREATMENT will positively cure you. This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the Sunshine, located two miles east of Salida at Cleora station, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, also on the Arkansas river, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 7, 1900

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Wanted.

A good general servant wanted at once. Apply at Weller & Walton Sts.

The Times' Megaphone.

The very thing for Stony Lake cottagers and campers. It will carry the voice half a mile to a mile and a half. Made in two sizes. Price $1.25 and $1.50. Every cottager should have one.

A Snap.

Photogravures, mounted on a heart shaped velvet pad, with easel, of all the Generals serving in the South African war—the nicest novelty out for 20 cents each. Also a large colored picture 18 x 24 for ten cents. Times Bookstore.

The Times at Summer Resorts.

The Morning Times is sent to summer resorts and residences, addressed to individuals at thirty cents a month. Persons visiting the lakes and other places may have the Times addressed to them for as short a period as one week.

The Post Office.

Complaints are constantly being made to the Times at the unreasonable way the delivery system at the post office is conducted. The present staff of clerks appear to be insufficient. They are extremely obliging and appear to be careful, but they are overworked. The public have been long suffering in this regard, but there is a limit even to their forbearance. We hope that steps will be taken to increase the staff, which will doubtless put an end to grounds for further complaints.

Purchased an Indicator.

The other day the genial proprietor of the Snowden House made a purchase for the Gold Lake Hunting Club of a machine known as an "indicator," being a gage to show at a glance the quantity of milk in a tank. The machine is used by cheesemakers, and as soon as Mr. Snowden heard of it, he at once purchased one for the buttermilk tank for the Gold Lake party. In future there will be little danger of the buttermilk giving out, for when it begins to get near the bottom, fresh supplies can be procured in time to prevent a calamity.

The Time to Advertise.

Any time or all the time is the time to advertise. When Sir John Macdonald had an important statement to publish he chose the Monday morning newspaper as least likely to contain striking news to share public interests with his article. On the other hand experienced advertisers prefer to have their extraordinary "ads" in an issue which is to have great news, as an unusual circulation is thereby insured. Advertisers gain the best results, however, by publishing their announcements daily. Everybody reads the Times.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other goods offered for sale in our store.

Shall Women Sing?

The Sacred Congregation of Rites of the Roman Catholic Church has issued a decree prohibiting women from taking part in the music of divine service, either in solos or in chorus. The prohibition is thought to apply more particularly to the Roman Catholic Church in France, where actresses are frequently employed to sing solos in church. The Roman Catholic authorities in Toronto or Peterborough have not as yet been notified officially concerning this decree, and they do not think that it will apply to any but distinctively Roman Catholic countries, as special privileges are generally allowed to the Church in countries where it is in a missionary state. This decree is not entirely a new one, it having been strictly observed for some years past in Quebec and in the archdiocese of Cologne in Germany. It has never been made a general decree applicable to all the churches throughout the world, but it orders came from Rome forbidding women to sing in the Canadian churches it would be impossible to carry on the musical services at many churches in the accustomed way.

THE FATAL EXPLOSION.

Result of the Coroner's Inquest at Belmont Mines—No Foul Play.

An inquiry into the causes whereby the two miners Derry and McLaughlin, met death at the Cordova mine on August 31st, was held by Dr. Gray, coroner, in the storehouse of the Cordova Exploration Company, Belmont. Owing to the fact that the remains of the unfortunate man, McLaughlin had been removed to his home at Blairton, the inquest was only held on the case of Derry. Mr. R. E. Ward, County Crown Attorney, was present to conduct the inquiry. The following is the verdict of the jury—

The jury decided that deceased came to his death in tramping a hole in a rock, preparatory to blasting, were also of opinion that deceased was an experienced miner, and was familiar with the use of dynamite and that material used was of proper quality, and that no blame can be attached to anyone, as far as they could see.

The inquest of the remains of Miner McLaughlin was adjourned until next Thursday, owing to difficulty in securing the attendance of witnesses resident at distance from the home of deceased, which is at Blairton 38 miles from the mines.

Easy and Pleasant Home Dyeing.

Diamond Dyes

Will Color Anything Any Color.

The most wonderful helpers in the home to economical dressing are the Diamond Dyes. They are so easy to use that even a child can dye a rich and perfect color with them.

Diamond Dyes make faded and dingy dresses, blouses, capes, jackets, stockings, scarfs, laces and draperies look like new.

Beware of dyes that claim to color cotton and wool with the same dye. It is impossible to get satisfactory results from dyes of that character. In Diamond Dyes there are special dyes for coloring all cotton and mixed goods, and special dyes are made for all wool goods. Each of the Diamond Dye colors is guaranteed to give full satisfaction, when used according to directions.

A LA "MILLENIUM."

A New England Minister's Comparison.

A peculiar remark made by a minister at a New England dinner, caused some comment. He was being served for the first time with Grape-Nuts food. He looked up and asked what it was, and being told, said, "They might have named it Millenium." The hostess, a lady on the editorial staff of the Boston Watchman, further remarks.—

"Since the 'Millenium' came to our cuisine, we have no further occasion to take into our stomachs the masses of pasty, partly cooked food that we used before Grape-Nuts came. I speak directly of myself. I had been for a long time the victim of gastric indigestion, brought on by steady mental work and a lack of proper food. I passed sleepless nights, and work in the day time was exceedingly difficult. Many spells of vertigo came on and my nerves and temper were in anything but a normal condition.

"I finally had three successive night attacks and I verily thought the end had come. I would throw out at midnight the lunch of Scotch porridge eaten the noon previous, unchanged, except that it had turned intensely bitter. Violent vomiting continued for eight or ten hours and the after-exhaustion was all but deathly.

"I could see plainly that utter break down was ahead of me. Just at this time I was led to use Grape-Nuts and I found the food cure. I quickly gained strength and flesh, my gastric troubles were relieved, and my sleep sweet again. Aside from powerful nutritive value of Grape-Nuts food, do you know that it will impart its delicious, nutritive flavor to almost any dish that it is added to? For instance a spoonful or two stirred into a bread pudding before baking, gives it a marvelous flavor, far superior to spices, also a little cooked in custard for lunch or supper, not only adds special relish, but special sustenance." Mrs. L. S. Goodwin.

MR. MAUD'S EXPERIENCE.

How He Was Robbed While at the Union Station, Toronto.

While waiting for the train at the Union Station, Toronto, Thursday evening, Mr. Maud, mechanical superintendent of the Peter Hamilton Mfg. Co., town, had an exciting experience.

He had been doing considerable shopping, and when he and his daughter, Miss Tesnie, entered the waiting room, the parcel, which was of considerable value, was placed under the seat. As the train was an hour behind time, Mr. Maude went for a stroll, and during his absence a lady came in and asked Miss Tesnie to move over a little to allow her to sit down.

When Mr. Maud went to get his parcel from underneath the seat, it had disappeared, as had also the lady who had asked for a seat. Another lady who was sitting near said she had noticed this lady come in with but one parcel and go out with two. One of the employees, who was sweeping, had also noticed her go out carrying the large parcel wrapped in brown paper.

The detective who was on duty refused to do anything in the matter, but advised Mr. Maud to go through the trains and try and recover it. This he proceeded to do, and after going through two, was travelling through the third, when he came to a seat in which were four ladies. Underneath the seat he noticed a brown paper parcel with one end undone. He leaned over and pulled it out without speaking, and it proved to be the missing one. As the train was by this time on the move, he was obliged to jump off without doing anything further in the matter.

SCALDED TO DEATH.

The Sad Fate of Robert Clark, Formerly of Campbellford.

On Saturday last, Mr. Robert Charles Clarke, son of Mr. Thos Clarke of Campbellford, was the victim of a shocking accident at the Rathbun Co's saw mills at Gravenhurst, resulting in his death immediately afterwards.

Mr. Clarke was employed by the firm as head blacksmith, and he was required with some others to make repairs to a steam pipe of one of the large boilers while there was a pressure of 25 pounds of steam. The pipe was proped up for the occasion, and a valve plugged to prevent the escape of steam.

While thus engaged the prop under the pipe gave way and at the same instant the steam burst forth into the face of Mr. Clarke scalding him in a terrible manner, his bod yhaving been literally cooked from head to foot.

The poor man cried out to his fellow workmen, "For God's sake help me out," and with strenuous efforts they went to his assistance, got hold of his hands and lifted him up in the midst of the escaping steam, and when they reached the door he was heard to say, "Lord, take me soon," and with these words upon his lips, his life ebbed out, ten minutes after the accident.

The body was coffined, placed aboard the train on Monday morning, and in charge of Mr. John Bibby, another employee, it arrived in Campbellford at noon.

Mr. Clarke was a man of 40 years of age, and leaves a wife and three children. He resided in Campbellford a number of years ago.

The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon from his father's residence to Mount Pleasant cemetery, and among others who followed the remains were a few members of the Independent Order of Foresters with which order the deceased was associated, and in which he carried life insurance to the amount of $2000 besides having a policy in another society. A portion of the burial service of the Society was read at the grave, and the bearers sang a verse of "Nearer My God to Thee."

The bereaved wife, parents and friends have the sympathy of the community.

EASE AND DISEASE.

A Short Lesson on the Meaning of a Familiar Word.

Disease is the opposite of ease. Webster defines disease as lack of ease, uneasiness, trouble, vexation, disquiet." It is a condition due to some derangement of the physical organism. A vast majority of the "dis-ease" from which people suffer is due to impure blood. Disease of this kind is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla which purifies and enriches and vitalizes the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures scrofula, salt rheum, pimples and all eruptions. It tones the stomach and creates a good appetite, and it gives vigor and vitality to the whole body. It reverses the condition of things, giving health, comfort and "ease" in place of "disease."

County Maps.

There are still a few copies of the new maps of the County of Peterborough, left. Order one before it is too late. Price, Mounted on roller, $2; paper 50c. Times Bookstore.

"Every Well Man Hath His Ill Day."

A doctor's examination might show that kidneys, liver and stomach are normal, but the doctor cannot analyse the blood upon which these organs depend.

Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies, vitalizes and enriches the blood. It cures you when "a bit off" or when seriously afflicted. It never disappoints.

Rheumatism—"I believe Hood's Sarsaparilla has no equal for rheumatism. It has done me more good than any other medicine I have taken." MRS. PATRICK KENNEY, Brampton, Ont.

Bad Cough—"After my long illness, I was very weak and had a bad cough. I could not eat or sleep. Different remedies did not help me but Hood's Sarsaparilla built me up and I am now able to attend to my work." MINNIE JAQUES, Oshawa, Ont.

Never Disappoints

Hood's Pills cure liver ills; the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Awaiting Events in China.

The Chinese question has now arrived at a waiting stage. Though Russia's determination to withdraw her troops from Pekin was announced without qualification, it does not appear that any movement has yet been made. The Russians are presumably waiting for a reply from the other powers, and the latter are waiting for a better understanding of the actual situation in China.

It is reported now by Shanghai that an Imperial edict appoints Prince Ching and two others as colleagues of Li Hung Chang to negotiate peace. If this is true, as it may be, it will advance matters materially, and it may be thought best for the Ministers and at least part of the international army to remain at Pekin and hold the negotiations there. The importance of the Russo-American declaration is not materially affected by a delay in the withdrawal of the troops, provided it commits all the powers to the engagement that their troops are to be withdrawn just as soon as the situation will permit. This is particularly important in view of the German Emperor's reiterated desire to go in and possess the land.

If the Emperor could be got back to Pekin, it is possible that a government might be set up that could be trusted, under some sort of European supervision But it would be necessary to secure it against the Empress Dowager, since it is evident that as long as she remains at large existence in China will be precarious for the natives and impossible for anybody else.

DE WET AND THERON NEAR JOHANNESBURG

Two Boer Guerilla Leaders Said to Have a Force of Fifteen Hundred Men.

THEY OCCUPY A POSITION IN THE MOUNTAINS

British Force is Sent out to Attack the Boers, Who Have no Artillery—A Budget of News From Lord Roberts—How Ladybrand was Relieved by White.

Cape Town, Sept. 9. Sir. Redvers Buller continues his advance. He crossed the Mancheberg, ten miles east of Lydenburg, and came into action with the Boers. The occupation of Lydenburg which took place last Thursday, is regarded as marking one of the last stages. The Boers now talk of trekking into German territory.

Lord Methuen is marching on Lychtenberg from Mafeking. It is said papers seized at Pretoria show that the Netherlands Railway Company in many ways actively assisted the Boers. It converted its workshops into arsenals and provided the Transvaal forces with horses.

Pretoria, Sept, 8.—It is stated that General De Wet has joined Theron in the neighborhood of Johannesburg, and that the total Boer force there numbers 1,500. The enemy is holding a position in the high hills south of the town. A considerable force is now in pursuit. The Boers have no artillery.

THE RELIEF OF LADYBRAND.

London, Sept. 7.—A despatch from Lord Roberts to the War Office, dated Belfast, Sept. 5, and received to-day, says.

"General Paget reports that in an engagement near Warm Baths he had one killed, nine wounded and two taken prisoners, including Surgeon Foy, who was captured while attending a wounded man. The enemy directed his fire chiefly against a kopje which was ably defended by two mountain guns, under command of Capt. Lewellyn, of the British South African police, and a company of the Munster Fusiliers. The enemy lost five killed, including the field cornet commanding. Paget collected and sent to Pretoria between 4,000 and 5,000 head of cattle."

"Brocklehurst's brigade of cavalry joined Hamilton's column at Barton. He reports that a train proceeding south was fired on last night near Bank station. A few horses were shot. Previously a patrol of bushmen were fired on near the same place. One was killed and two wounded.

"Two strong columns, one under Clements and the other under Hart, are now moving about the district near Krugerdorp and Johannesburg.

"The party of the enemy which failed in the attempt to take Winburg hurried toward Ladybrand which was being held by one company of the Worcester Regiment, and two small troops of the Imperial Yeomanry. The Boers surrounded the position in which the troops were entrenched, and called upon our men to surrender. On the summons being refused their guns opened fire and commenced a heavy bombardent. On the news reaching me I telegraphed the officer commanding on no account to surrender, as Gen. Kelly-Kenny had informed me that, hearing the Boers were making for Ladybrand, he had arranged to send a small column by Lieut.-Col White to the garrison's assistance. At the same time I ordered Sir Archibald Hunter to send Bruce Hamilton's brigade by rail from Winburg and Kroonstad to Bloemfontein to be ready to assist White's small force if required. The enemy, foiled in their object, fired 320 rounds into our position, which occupied a front of about half a mile, and kept up a heavy rifle fire at the same time.

"I was informed yesterday by the Resident Commissioner of Basutland the a small Union Jack was still flying over the entrenchments, and this afternoon I received the joyful news that the garrison had been relieved by White, their casualties being only five wounded.

HID IN EXCAVATIONS.

Pretoria, Sept. 7.—Nine officers of the Imperial Yeomanry who were among the British prisoners at Nooitgedacht, hid in excavations which they had made in their tents, and when the other officers were released and sent on to Barberton6, they were nowhere to be found. They subsequently escaped.

When the other officers were being liberated, Commandant Viljoen came among them and said. "You are free. I am sending a small escort with you to show you the road to your lines. Keep together. Do not loot farmhouses. I know that I am speaking to soldiers of the Queen, and I have confidence in you. I hope that the next time we meet we shall be friends."

The prisoners then started for Gen. French's lines. They state that on the day before that on which they were liberated three trains bearing guns and supplies were hurriedly brought down the line. The Boers were very disorganized and disheartened.

BADEN-POWELL'S OBJECT.

Cape Town, Sept. 7.—The object of General Baden-Powell's visit here is to consult with Governor Sir Alfred Millner regarding the organization of a military police force for the new territories annexed by Great Britain. He will probably visit England before returning to the Transvaal.

DECISIVE NEWS EXPECTED.

London, Sept. 8.—"We learn," says The Daily News, "that the Government expect decisive news from South Africa within a fortnight, and that Parliament will be dissolved during the last week of September."

WON TEN DOLLARS.

By Holding a Coin in His Mouth for Twelve Months.

Alantic, City, Sept. 10.—"Sol." Watson, colored, on a wager, performed the novel feat of keeping a silver quarter in his mouth for 12 months, and this morning at 7 o'clock, when the contract expired, was paid $10 by J. H. Stavcon, the stakeholder. The loser was Wm. Nagle of Harrisburg.

Watson ate, drank and slept with the peace of silver in his mouth. Hundreds of people knew of the wager and would frequently demand to see the coin. No person caught Watson without the coin in his mouth.

The quarter has been worn smooth, the milling having entirely disappeared and the stamp nearly so.

The Stamp Mill.

The Marmora Herald says; "The ten stamp mill on the Sophia mine started working eight days ago, the work of the machinery is O.K., every thing working full straight. The mill has all modern improvements, and is one of the best in this country. The result of milling is very satisfactory, gold having been caught on the plates from the very first day. The mill is running now only as a test for the different kinds of ore, each of the veins giving free milling ore; therefore the owners expect a great future from these operations. A cyanide plant for the treatment of tailings will be put up at once and air compressors will also be put up without delay." This is the mine in which the Meyer Brothers blast furnace promoters, are interested.

CHINESE QUESTION STILL IN DOUBT.

No Decision Has Yet Been Reached as to the Best Course to Pursue.

TROOPS HAVE LEFT AMOY

British Marines are Leaving Pekin to Rejoin Their Vessels.

London, Sept. 10. 4.15. The dead lock in Pekin apparently continues. It begins to look as if no solution would be attained at any rate before the arrival of Count Von Waldersee at Tien Tsin.

London, Sept. 8.—The powers have not made up their minds what they are going to do about China though it is a foreign conclusion that the troops will not be withdrawn from Pekin, seeing that no abatement of military preparations is visible in any direction. But even supposing a definite agreement arrived at that the allied army shall remain in possession of the Chinese capital, it does not seem clear that the powers are certain what to do next. How negotiations with the Chinese Government, which are talked of, will restore order and suppress a revolt which the Chinese Government has admitted its inability to subdue, heaven only knows, but the farce of such negotiations appears to have been decided upon only to end as previous ones. In this connections it is not uninteresting to call attention to the worlds of Mr. Ian C, Hannah, who, in a recent lecture at Trinity College. Cambridge, reported by The Standard, evolved rather an original idea regarding the Chinese chaos, He pointed out that several times in the course of her long history China had experienced a period of decadence exactly similar to the present one, and always prosperity had been restored by a new dynasty, established by a succesful rebellion, or by the conquest of the country by a foreign foe. There could be no question that had not foreigners interfered to prop up the Manchu dynasty, it would long ago have succumbed, and a new and more vigorous house would have taken its place. Here is the situation in a nutshell, and all thinking people agree that peace and order in China cannot exist side and side with the present dynasty. The only true solution of the difficulty is either to allow the Chinese to work out their own salvation by overthrowing such dynasty or for the powers to conquer and partition China. Any compromise apart from these two courses will be merely a quack remedy for Chinese troubles and will not touch the seat of the disease which consumes the Orient.

FRANCE'S COMPROMISE.

Paris. Sept. 8.—Active negotiations are in progress, looking to some compromise wrrangement with Russia regarding the position she has assumed towards Pekin. The communications exchanged between the powers now have better promise of success. The compromise suggested, it is asserted here, is the withdrawal of the forces of all the powers from Pekin, leaving an international guard to protect the Legations, which will be allowed to remain at the Chinese capital, pending a peace settlement. The main body of troops, it is said, will retire to the neighborhood of Tien TTsin, leaving sufficient forces along the road to keep open the route and railroad between Pekin and Tien Tsin. Russia's attitude is interpreted here as meaning that she will withdraw her troops outside of the walls of Pekin, but not necessarily a great distance from that city.

BRITAIN NOT TO WITHDRAW.

London, Sept. 8.—The British Foreign Office has allowed it to become definitely known that the British Government is of the opinion that it is advisable for the allied forces to remain at Pekin until satisfactory arrangements are concluded with the Chinese Government.

NEW IMPERIAL EDICT.

London, Sept. 8.—The Daily Telegraph prints a despatch from Canton, dated Sept. 5, saying that the acting Viceroy of Taku received an Imperial edict on Wednesday, in which the Emperor accuses himself of having been the cause of allowing matters to reach the present despatch crisis. He orders the Viceroys and Governors to maintain peace everywhere, to punish the turbulent and to protect foreigners and Christain converts at all risks. The despatch adds that the Emperor has notified Li Hung Chang, as the oldest servant of the Manchurian dynasty, to negotiate for peace with the powers.

HE WANTS AN ESCORT.

London, Sept. 8.—A special despatch from Shanghai says Li Hung Chang has made a request for an American escort to accompany him on his journey to Pekin, and that United States Consul Good-now is considering his request.

CITY WIPED OUT!

Terrible Storm in Texas in Which Vast Numbers of People Lose Their Lives.

Houston, Texas, Sept. 9. The storm that raged along the coast of Texas last night was the most disastrous that has ever visited this section. The wires are down, and there is no way of finding out just what has happened, but enough is known to make it certain that there has been great loss of life and destruction of property all along the coast for 100 miles inland. Every town that is reached reports one or more dead, and the property loss is so great that there is no way of computing it accurately.

Gavleston remains isolated. The Houston Post and the Associated Press made efforts to get special trains and tugs today with which to reach the inland city. The railroad companies declined to risk their locomotives.

Houston, Sept. 9. James C. Timmins, General Superintendent of the National Express Company has just arrived from Galveston after a perilous trip. He reports that more than 1,000 people have been drowned, killed or missing, and that four thousand houses have been destroyed. He says the magnitude of the disaster remains to be told.

New York, Sept. 9. The World to-morrow will print the following—Austin, Texas, Sept. 9.—Information has just reached me that about three thousand lives have been lost at Galveston, with enormous destruction of property. No information from other points. (Signed) John D. Sayers, Governor.

Dallas Texas, Sept. 8. The following telegram just received from Austin by the next relief train just returned. They could not get closer than six miles of Virginia Point, where the prairie was covered with lumber, debris, pianos, trunks and dead bodies. Two hundred were counted from the train. A large steamer is stranded two miles this side of Virginia Point, as though thrown by a tidal wave. Nothing can be seen of Gavelston. Two men were picked up who floated across the mainland, who say they estimate the loss of life up to the time they left at 2000. The above message is addressed to superintendent Dallas, and comes from Mr. Vaughan, manager of the Western Union Office at Houston.

TO PREVENT STRIKES.

The Street Car Men on the Other Side Will Buy Automobiles.

TO COMPETE WITH CARS.

They Will be Used by the Men Whenever There is a Strike or Lockout.

Detorit, Sept. 8.—The National Executive Board of the Street Railway Men's Association, which has been holding its annual session in this city, adjourned last evening. President Mahon was instructed to treat with the managers of the different street railways throughout the country with a view to getting a universal working agreement between the railway companies and the Street Car Association to adjust disagreements and avoid strikes.

Mr. Mahon has strong hopes of the scheme carrying through, as he already has had assurances from a number of managers of street railway systems favoring the plan. In the meantime to provide alainst contingencies, Mr. Mahon recommended the board to rise funds by assessment for the purchase of automobiles as fast as they can be secured. The machines would be put to work in places where the transportation facilities are poor or where the men are badly treated. The President was authorised to go ahead.

A St. John's Church Wedding.

A very interesting event occurred on Saturday morning at 7 o'clock, at St. John's Church, when Mr. Alfred B. Lambe, jr., of Toronto, was united in marriage to Margaret, daughter of the late John D. P. Bubidge, of town. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. C. Davidson, rector, whilst the services of brides maid and groomsman were dispensed with. The bride was attired in a grey travelling costume. The newly married couple left on the 8.10 Belleville train for points east, and will on their return, take up their residence in Toronto. The groom is well known in Peterborough where he, some years ago resided, and very popular. The bride has many warm friends and has been prominent in church work, being an enthusiastic worker in the Chancel Guild and King's Daughters of St. John's by which societies she was handsomely remembered. The Times joines in extending its congratulations.

ALL EYES TURNED ON HUGH JOHN AND SIFTON

It Will be the Fiercest Political Battle on Record in Canada.

WITH ODDS AGAINST THE YOUNG NAPOLEON.

Deep Feeling Against the Liberal Ministry for the Manipulation of the Voters's Lists.

Winnipeg, Sept. 10. There is much excitement in the city and throughout the Province over the Brandon election, where Hon. Hugh John Macdonald, Premier of Manitoba, has accepted the Conservative nomination for Brandon, in opposition to Hon. Clifford Sifton. It will be a desperate encounter, with odds greatly in favor of the Premier. Mr. Sifton's friends in the city practically admit the hopelessness of the fight, the only possible chance being the wholesale purchase of votes.

The Morning Telegram, says;—"Manitoba's mascotte, Hugh John Macdonald, has been invariably successful. He also invariably tackles the strongest opponent in sight. He ran up against Isaac Campbell, and defeated the people's Isaac so badly that he has never ventured again to enter any field as a candidate. He ran up against the redoubtable Joe Martin, at the height of his popularity and power, and he turned him down so swiftly that Mr. Joe Martin decided to leave Manitoba for British Columbia in order to repair his shattered political fortunes. He undertook to try conclusions with Mr. Greenway, and in short order he made humpty dumpty of the invincible "Farmer Premier." He is now going to engage in battle with "The Young Napoleon of the West" on "His Imperial Majesty's own particular stamping ground, and already "The Ablest Statesman, in Canada" sees his Waterloo and hears the wash of the waves on the rocks of his political St. Helena. "History repeats itself," especially with Hugh John.

Hugh John's Statement.

When seen to-day and questioned, Hugh John said—

"There is really nothing that can be said except the baldheaded fact that I have accepted the nomination offered me in Brandon and am in the field against Hon. Mr. Sifton. I am going east tonight and expect to be back about the 26th inst. After that it will be Mr. Sifton and I for it and I hope the best man wins."

A cabinet meeting was held and it is understood that Mr. Macdonald will recommend the re-construction of the cabinet as follows;

Mr. J. A. Davidson, Premier; President of Council and Minister of Agriculture.

Mr. C. H. Campbell, Q. C., Attorney-General.

Mr. McFadden, Public Works, retained.

Mr. Johnston, without portfolio, retained with either Mr Garland, of Portage, or Robert Rogers, of Manitou.

Mr. Macdonald stated emphatically today that there would be no increase in the number of salaried ministers.

The Voters' Lists.

There is intense feeling among Conservatives as well as fairminded Liberals over the manipulation of the Voters lists. The Voters lists which have arrived from Ottawa show that they have been tampered with. The lists for the electoral districts of Provencher, Lisgar and Selkirk, have all been tampered with. Reports from Marquette, Macdonald and Brandon are to the same effect.

Much Indignation.

There is much indignation among Conservatives over this scandalous manipulation of the lists in the Government printing office at Ottawa. The purpose of the manipulation is only too apparent. Many Liberals, also, express their disgust at these unscrupulous proceedings. A prominent Liberal said yesterday to the Times correspondent, when made acquainted with the state of affairs—"I have never been what you might call an "anti-machine" man, for I believe in the necessity of a party organization; but I draw the line at proceedings of this kind. I believe in fair elections, and have no use for such dishonorable and corrupt methods as stuffing ballot boxes, ballot-switching, and packing the election lists. I do not propose to be a party to fraud, and I regret to find it already being resorted to. If the Government is going to resort to a dirty campaign such as this manipulation indicates, I know one vote it will lose, and that vote will probably influence others. The honest men on both sides should unite to put a stop to the abominable election methods which have been making their appearance of recent years, and which are a disgrace to Canada or any other free and God-fearing country."

ON A MOVING INCLINE.

New Device for Raising Passengers to Elevated Railroads.

New York, Sept 7.—Thousands of persons are using the new Reno inclined elevator which the Manhattan Elevated Railroad Company has put into operation to carry passengers from the street to the platform of the station at Fifty-ninth street and Third avenue.

This is one of the series of elevators which will soon be errected at the stations where traffic is heaviest. Twenty-seven persons can be carried up simultaneously. The elevator has an estimated carried capacity of 3,000persons an hour.

The elevator is a moving, inclined plane, composed of steps covered with ridged rubber and attached to a chain. Along the moving stairs is a moving hand rail. Next to it is the ordinary stationary staircase, by which passengers descend to the street.

The motive power is a nine-horse power motor. The chain of steps makes a trip from the street to the platform in thirty seconds.

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs. Moderate winds; fine; not much change in temperature.

The tropical storm is now travelling northwesterly; it is situated at present near Galveston. When these storms move in this direction they usually break up, but of course there is still a danger of storm in question recurving northeasterly. The weather has been fine throughout Canada.

AFTER SWEET REVENGE

For the Murder of Women Missionaries in China.

Shanghai, Sept, 7.—It is learned from official sources the facts of the killing of several American women missionaries, at the erquest of the Mission board, were withheld out of regard for the feelings of the relatives of the murdered women, but other Americans antagonized the policy of sending women to isolated inland posts, think it important that the facts should be known. The names of the victims are withheld by request.

Two of these women were captured while attempting to leave the stations where they were located, were led about the country naked, repeatedly tortured, and finally killed by a method too revolting to be described.

Two other American women were coming to the coast with a party which a number of Chinamen followed and stoned. The women fell exhausted and were taken by the Chinamen into the presence of the local officials. They were prostrated upon the execution block and a feint was made of beheading them. One of them became hysterical and laughed, and, thinking her insane, the Chinese escorted her to the coast because of their superstition regarding the insane. On the journey, however, the woman was cruelly mistreated. The other women, after being exhibited naked for some days and undergoing untold suffering, was tortured to death by the same shameful methods as were practiced in the other cases. Two Swedish missionary women arrived at Shanghai after similar experiences, except that their lives were spared. The foregoing are matters of official record.

Women and Children Impaled.

The fourteen English missionaries, including six women and four children, who were murdered at Chu-Chau, in the Province of Che-Kiang, according to the story of a Spanish priest who escaped, were koilled with hayforks and ancient spears by the magistrate's bodyguard and their naked bodies were hanged from trees.

These crimes make a lenient policy unpopular in Shanghai, where all the victims had friends.

Placards appeared to-day in all public places exhorting foreigners to oppose a compromise with the government and attacking Li Hung Chang, quoting the remark to Consul Goodnow credited to Earl Li that "the foreigners in Pekin, except the Ministers, were of no account."

THE PRODUCT OF EDUCATION

Helvetius says "Man is the product of his education." The properly educated, trained and qualified druggist if he is acquainted with true business principles, must win the confidence of his townspeople. The liberal patronage bestowed on us up to the present, is ample proof that our efforts to please the public are appreciated. Family dispensing is our special forte.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 10 1900.

THE GREATEST APPLE CROP.

According to the National Apple Shipper's Association the crop of apples this year in the United States and Canada will be the largest crop in the history of the two countries. While the drouth has affected the yield in Missouri, and many apples have dropped prematurely in New York State and the states adjoining on the east, the crops it is estimated, will exceed the record crop of 1896 which was seventy million barrels, by from ten million to thirty million barrels to one hundred million barrels. This year's crop in North American it is believed will be from eighty million to one hundred barrels, bering more than three million each. The report from these states are favorable, and in New England, New York and Pennsylvania the yield is reported to be heavy. There will be large numbers of apples on the Pacific coast in Nova Scotia also. There is a market for apples abroad, and it is said that Great Britain, France and Germany are prepared to take much of the surplus. The quality is good, according to the reports, as well as the quantity.

Testimony of a Babylonian Brick

It is marvellous what a mass of detailed information has come down to us from the perishable brick tablets inscribed, or rather stamped before firing, with minute and complicated inscriptions and preserved in the buried libraries beneath the mounds of the Tigris and Euphrates Valley. Prof. Sayce is able, for instance, to tell us from one of these tablets how "a widow brought action before he royal judges to recover her husband's property. She stated that after their marriage she and Ben-Hadad-Nathan had traded together and that a house had been purchased with a portion of her dowery. This house, the value of which was as much as 110 manehs, 50 shekels, or £62 10s., had been assigned to her in perpetuity. The half-brother now claimed everything, including he house. The case was tried at Babylon before six judges in the ninth year of Nabonidus, and they decided in favor of the plaintiff," for a woman's dowry was her own property. This might be an extract from the law reports of the Times, and other details of ancient Babylonian and Assyrian life are not less precise. "In the reign of Ammisadok three men rented a field for three years on terms of partnership, agreeing to give the owner during the first two years one gur of grain upon each acre. The whole of the third harvest was to go to the lessees and the partners were to divide the crop in equal shares on the day of the harvest." This seems a pleasant kind of agreement, worthy of imitation. The third year free of rent must have been delightful.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other goods offered for sale in our store.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The New York Herald publishes an article saying that Dr. Coulter formerly of Lindsay, and at one time a resident of Peterborough, will sue Dr. Oronhyatekha, Chief Ranger of the Foresters for $100,000 damages because the latter did not push the sale of Dr. Coulter's patented atomizer for the treatment of throat and nose troubles. Defendant is reported as saying to the Herald that Dr. Coulter has no claim at all against him as he was under no obligation to forward the sales of the instrument in question.

THE REMEDY FAILED.

How a Helpful Wife Did Not Cure Her Husband of the Tobacco Habit.

"It will only be necessary for you to drop about half a teaspoonful of the mixture into this cup of coffee each morning," the circular said, "and the taste for tobacco will gradually depart from him. He may not cease the use of tobacco immediately, but within a week he will begin to abhor tobacco if the mixture is given to him faithfully every morning."

And so the young wife sent her little $2 on and got a flagon of the tobacco cure.

"Pretty bum coffee this morning," he remarked dryly the first time she dropped the half-teaspoonful of the mixture into the cup.

"It's the same as we've been using right along," she replied, craftily.

Now, lo and behold! he was a pretty smooth proposition himself, and he had, unbeknownst to her, seen the package holding the flagon of agin tobacco mixture when it was delivered.

So after dinner that evening he produced a large bulky package of fine-cut tobacco from his pocket and took therefrom a plenteous chew of tobacco. It was the first chew he had ever taken in her presence, and she marvelled thereat, but she determined to persist with the "treatment."

"Dead rank chickory again this morning, isn't it?" he inquired at breakfast the next morning.

"I'm sure it tastes the same to me," she replied.

That evening after dinner he produced a short, black clay pipe and a package of a new kind of tobacco that was as black as the ground work of a Jolly Roger.

"Thought I'd bring this old dudeen up from the office," he explained cheerfully. "It's as sweet as a nut."

Whereupon he filled the house with the aroma of punk that was strong enough to break rock.

"This grocery person who gets all of my wages is certainly doing us on the coffee game," he remarked when he tasted his cup next morning.

"Really," she said, gazing innocently at the ten-cent bunch of asters in the middle of the table, "I can't detect any difference."

"And yet there are low foreheads who don't believe that all women are actresses," said he to himself on the way to his office that morning.

That evening he brought home a box of auction stogies, and after he had smoked one of them after dinner all of the people in the neighboring flats stuffed cotton in the hall door keyholes and closed the hall transoms.

"I must persist though," thought his baffled little wife, gloomily.

"Coffee tastes like stewed gunnysack again this morning," he remarked at the next breakfast. She felt a bit sorry for him, but she was determined to use up that flagon of "agin-tobacco" if she had to chloroform him and pour it down his throat.

That evening, however, her resolution deserted her. After dinner, for the first time to her knowledge, he pulled out a package of cigarettes, lit one and began to smoke it.

She went upstairs, poured out the remaining portion of her $2 worth of agin-tobacco and carefully hid the bottle

"Coffee's all right this morning," said he at breakfast the next day.

"Yes?" she inquired, absently.

When he had finished his dinner that evening he lighted one of his usual brand of good cigars.

"Men are mysterious to me," she thought, regarding him out of the tail of her eye.

"Women only think they're foxy," he thought, blowing smoke rings into the Swiss curtains.—Bangor Commercial.

A Competent Witness.

United States District Judge Williams, now holding court in Topeka, tells a funny story. Years ago he was a district judge in Arkansas. At a certain term of court a murder trial came before him, and the most important witness for the prosecution was a colored boy only ten years old. The lawyers for the defence set out to show that the boy was too young to understand the nature of an oath, and therefore was not competent as a witness.

"Boy," said one of them severely "do you know what would happen if you swore to a lie?"

"Yes, sah. Mammy would lick me."

"Would anything else happen?"

"Deed dey would, case de devil would git me."

At this point Judge Williams leaned over his desk and said with pretended sternness: "Don't you know, boy that I would get you, too?"

"Yes, sah. Dat's what I jus' said."—Kansas City Journal.

Two Points of View.

A farmer drifted into a hardware store at Mulhall and was asked by the manager. "Don't you want to buy a bicycle to ride around your farm on? They're cheap now. Can give you one for $35."

"I'd sooner put $35 into a cow," said the farmer.

"But think," said the manager, "how foolish you would look riding around town on a cow."

"Oh, I don't know" said the farmer; "no more foolish, perhaps, than I would milking a bicycle."

Out of the Ordinary.

The two old friends, as has been narrated before met again, after years of separation.

"By the way, Gagster," said Throggins, "do you remember that snub-nosed, cross-eyed little Tilbury girl, with a face on her that would ditch an express train? She used to live somewhere in your neighborhood, I thing."

"Oh, yes, I remember her perfectly," replied Gagster.

"What ever became of her?"

"I am sorry to disappoint you, Throggins"—here is where the variation comes in—"but I have not the slightest idea. I didn't marry her."

Wonderfully Made.

Sister—When you called to see Jeorge was he wearing those slippers I made him for Christmas?

Brother—No. He was using one of them as a laundry bag.

WELL.

"I had female trouble for eight years," writes Mrs. L. J. Dennis, of 838 East College St., Jacksonville, Ills. "Words cannot express what I suffered. I sought relief among the medical profession and found none. Friends urged me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. When I commenced taking this medicine I weighed ninety-five pounds. Now I weigh one hundred and fifty-six pounds—more than I ever weighed before. I was so bad I would lie from day to day and long for death to come and relieve my suffering. I had internal inflammation, a disagreeable drain, bearing down pain, and such distress every month but now I never have a pain—do all my own work and am a strong and healthy woman."

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. Correspondence private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

BRAVEST HEARTS.

"None but idiots and lovers delight in constant repetition of the same thing."

A tiny imp of curious mien,
Arrayed in crimson slashed with green
Came dancing o'er the hill at morn,
To where I wandered all forlorn.

And though I knew him—knew him well,
I laughed to hear each tiny bell
That tinkled on his tasseled cap,
And fondled him upon my lap.

Oh, folly wise! oh, folly sweet!
A thousand times to me repeat,
The message that she sends by you;
A thousand times it will be new.
—Arthur Henry.

MAN OF ACTION.

John Desmond awoke at 2 in the morning and tossed about in his bed. Within his a fierce struggle between the brain and the heart was in progress. He employed every scheme that he was aware of to court or compel sleep without success.

Suddenly the truth dawned upon him, like a flood of soft warm light. He was in love. The love of his life, compared with which all his past loves were mere idle fancies. The battle was over. John Desmond, thirty, lawyer, athlete, man of the world, was conquered.

Being a man of action, Desmond no sooner acknowledged to himself that he really was in love with Kate Evanston than he resolved to marry her at the earliest possible day.

Kate Evanston was seated at the piano in the drawing room of Mrs. Saulsbury's beautiful home, where she was employed as companion to the lady of the house. The rich light of a middle May evening pervaded the place.

Her fingers wer softly bringing back memories of "Erminie" and other Casino delights as her thoughts traveled back over the past.

After a time she arose from the piano and picking up a number of photographs of John Desmond's friends that lay upon the table, seated herself upon a sofa with her back to the door and proceeded to contemplate each of them.

Desmond returning home early that evening let himself into his aunt's house very quietly with his latchkey, hoping to catch Kate at the piano in the middle of one of the sweet airs he had grown of late to love.

He approached the great drawing room doors and took a peep through the crevice which separated them. In an instant his heart seemed to cease beating with almost electrical suddenness, for the sight which his maddened brain encountered filled him with rage and jealousy.

With a heart of ice and lead he was about to turn to leave the house as noiselessly as he had entered when the sinking sun shot a ray of light through the room and revealed something which made the blood course faster through his body than it had ever coursed before. Then he turned away, and, closing the door very softly behind him, descended the front steps of the house and passed down the street.

Mrs. Salisbury and Miss Evanston were at their dessert that evening before John appeared. He had left word in the morning that he might be detained until a late hour, and so they had not waited dinner for him.

Mrs. Salisbury noticed that her nephew seemed to be laboring under considerable restraint and bluntly asked him the cause; but the good lady's solicitude met only with evasion and she presently gave up all attempts to draw anything from him and retired early to her room, leaving John and Kate together.

No sooner had Mrs. Saulsbury quitted the dining room than Desmond turned to Kate and said:

"Miss Evanston, I'm going to ask you to do me a favor."

Kate looked at him inquisitively.

"I want you," he continued, "to accompany me on a bit of a shopping tour, I've got a peculiar mission to execute and I want your help. Will you do it?"

"To be sure. I shall be most happy, Mr. Desmond," Kate answered, "and if you'll excuse me I'll be prepared in a very few minutes."

The streets were dark by the time they left the house for the shopping quarter of the town, and Kate took Desmond's arm. They had walked for a few moments in silence when Desmond said:

"I want to explain this errand to you and no doubt you, too, will think it peculiar. As a matter of fact, I've been commissioned to arrange for the wedding of two very dear friends."

"Two couples," Kate asked,, quietly.

"Why, no! only one couple; a man and a women," John answered, somewhat puzzled at the question.

"And was she a very dear friend?" the girl on his arm asked.

"Yes; the dearest friend I ever had among women; in fact, the only woman I ever really cared for."

In a moment John was half sorry, half glad he had said this, for he felt the little hand of his companion withdraw until only the tips of the fingers rested upon his arm. "That's a good sign," he mused.

For a moment nothing was said; then Miss Evanston broke the silence.

"And didn't she care for you?" she asked.

"Yes," he replied. "She loved me and she still loves me."

Presently Kate's curiosity got the better of her judgment and she asked: "And the man—you say he's a dear friend, too?"

"Yes," replied Desmond, "the only one I ever trusted absolutely."

"And does he know that you love her and that she loves you?"

"He knows absolutely that I love her and he is mighty certain that she loves me."

Kate was now thoroughly mystified.

"And which of them asked you to arrange for the wedding?" she asked.

"He did," replied John curtly.

Kate could only say: "Well, this mission, as you term it, certainly is inexplicable."

"Oh, no, it isn't," said John. "It will all seem quite simple when the explanation comes, if any is needed. In fact, I think it will explain itself. Just you keep those eyes of your open and you'll see it all very shortly."

Presently John touched his companion slightly on the arm and drew her into the shop of the village jeweler.

"Now, I want you to pick out the kind of a wedding ring you think the bride should get," he said.

When he had paid and pocketed the plain gold band they resumed their walk down the village street and stopped at the local office of a great metropolitan daily and Desmond, leaving Kate at one side, went up to the desk and wrote out a brief notice and was about leaving with her when the advertising clerk called after him and said that he had not told him when he wished the notice inserted.

"Why, to-morrow, of course," Desmond replied.

"Now, then," said John, as they turned into a side street, "we'll go and make arrangements for the parson to tie the knot and then we will have finished our mission."

They turned into the gravel walk leading to the Rev. John Barclay's house and had just reached the vine-clad porch when Desmond stopped suddenly, as if he had but that moment thought of an important thing and, turning to Kate, who was standing close to him, almost whispered: "I want to ask another favor of you," bending his face close to hers, "I want you to let me kiss you before we go in there." And it was done in a moment.

Before Kate could recover from the perfect amazement into which John's action had thrown her he had dexterously drawn her arm through his and, leading her up the steps, had rung the door bell.

The Rev. Mr. Barclay answered the metallic summons in person and gave John a most cordial welcome, which surprised Kate, for she had supposed John an agnostic and didn't think that he numbered members of the clergy among his intimates.

"Mr. Barclay," began John, when they had entered the snug parlor, where the good gentleman's wife was seated doing some fancy work, "I've come over to-night to arrange for a wedding and I want you to perform the ceremony."

"When is it to come off?" asked the clergyman, consulting a small date book which he drew from his waistcoat pocket.

"Immediately," said John.

The Rev. Mr. Barclay cast a quiet glance at Kate.

"And who are the parties to be married?" he asked.

John took Kate's hand in his own and answered firmly: "This lady, Miss Kate Evanston, and myself."

Kate could not believe her ears. She stared at John in amazement. He hastened to reassure her.

"You're excited, my dear Kate. Calm yourself."

The whole truth had come to her. The explanation of the mysterious errand was solved. She looked into John's eyes and read love unspeakable and her own answered in kind. She went through the ceremony like one in a dream and feared it was a dream and hoped if it were she would never awaken.

The parson tied the knot and John slipped the ring which Kate had selected upon her finger and then the parson insisted upon his osculatory perquisite, and then they started for home, both supremely happy. All the way back Kate clung strongly to John's arm.

Before they had quitted the Barclay garden Kate said to Desmond: "Why did you want to kiss me before we went into the house?"

"I'll tell you," returned John, promptly. "You see, Barclay and I were classmates. I know his propensities, and I didn't want to suffer the reflection in after years that he had kissed my wife first."

When the happy couple reached their home Kate said:

"You are the most audacious man I ever met. You bought the ring and even inserted a notice of our marriage before you asked me to marry you. Tell me why you did not ask me first? How did you know I'd not refuse to marry you and make a scene in the minister's house?"

And Desmond answered: "When a man of action sees a girl kissing his picture he knows that the time for action, not words, has come, and he carries her off to the parson."

Kate blushed furiously, and pressing her face against his shoulder, whispered ever so low: "I love an audacious man."—Chicago Daily News.

Stomach to Fit.

During Sherman's "March to the Sea" rations were often scarce. One day an officer found a soldier eating a persimmon, and said to him, "Don't eat that, it's not good for you." "I'm not eatin' it because it's good," he said, "I'm trying to pucker up my stomach so as to fit the rations uncle Billy Sherman's a-given us."

The Pug—"Say, but dat new feller don't do a thing but put 'em to sleep quick."

The Mug—"No wonder! He was a preacher before he took to prize fightin'."

Eating and Sleeping.

Food supplies the substance for repairing the wastes of the body, and gives strength. Sleep affords the opportunity for these repairs to be made. Both are necessary to health. If you can't eat and sleep, take Hood's Sarsaparilla. It creates a good appetite and tones the digestive organs, and it gives the sweet, restful sleep of childhood. Be sure to get Hood's.

All liver ills are cured by Hood's Pills. 25 cents.

The Time to Advertise.

Any time or all the time is the time to advertise. When Sir John Macdonald had an important statement to publish he chose the Monday morning newspaper as least likely to contain striking news to share public interests with his article. On the other hand experienced advertisers prefer to have their extraordinary [illegible] in an issue which is to have great news, as an unusual circulation is thereby insured. Advertisers gain the best results, however, by publishing their announcements daily. Everybody reads the Times.

This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the Sunshine, located two miles east of Salida at Cleora Station, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, also on the Arkansas river, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Wanted.

A good general servant wanted at once. Apply at Weller & Walton Sts.

A "Whopper."

An evening sheet tells its readers that an Indian hooked a 51 pound maskinonge near Buckhorn on Monday last. This is a whopper—we mean of course the 'lunge.

The Times' Megaphone.

The very thing for Stony Lake cottagers and campers. It will carry the voice half a mile to a mile and a half. Made in two sizes. Price $1.25 and $1.50. Every cottager should have one.

A Snap.

Photographs, mounted on a heart shaped velvet pad, with easel, of all the Generals serving in the South African war—the nicest novelty out for 20 cents each. Also a large colored picture 18 x 24 for ten cents. Times Bookstore.

A Large Business.

To give an idea of the amount of fruit sold in Peterborough, we might mention that on Saturday Messrs Mason & Co., had four delivery rigs out all day, and half the night, and had 12 clerks employed in the store selling. Other fruit men are also very busy.

The Times at Summer Resorts.

The Morning Times is sent to summer resorts and residences, addressed to individuals at thirty cents a month. Persons visiting the lakes and other places may have the Times addressed to them for as short a period as one week.

A New Mica Mine.

A new mica mine is to be opened up at the Blue Mountains. The mine is owned by an American syndicate, and the vein is said to be very rich in mica and corundum. The mine is situated north of Lake Koshabogamog. The company intends commencing operations at once.

County Maps.

There are still a few copies of the new maps of the County of Peterborough, left. Order one before it is too late. Price, Mounted on roller, $2; paper 50c. Times Bookstore.

For the Lumber Camps.

Mr. T. Cavanagh, the popular lumberman's agent, is doing a hustling business in hiring men for the lumber camps. On Saturday he sent 20 to Playfair's Camp, Muskoka, and will forward another gang on Thursday. Wages run from $22 to $26 per month.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other goods offered for sale in our store.

Monument Unveiled.

A lasting tribute to the memory of their departed brother is the monument which was unveiled yesterday by the members of Sherwood Forest Camp, No. 50, Woodmen of the World, over the grave of the late Harry E. Sherwood, at Little Lake cemetery. The monument, which is the production of the Moore Monumental Co., is of red Swede granite, and is fashioned after what is known as the cottage style. The entire height is 3 ft. 6 in., and the inscription will include the emblem of the order encircled by the legend, "C.O.W.O.W., Sherwood Forest Camp, No. 50." A special enactment of the Order of Woodmen provides that $100 be alloted to the construction of a monument over the grave of each deceased brother, or added to the amount of his insurance, according to preference. The provision does not, however, debar relatives of deceased from adding to the value of the monument. The unveiling ceremonies, which are always of a very impressive nature, were conducted by the officers of the the camp, and were witnessed by a large number of citizens.

MINERS HAVE STRUCK.

Trouble at the Cordova Gold Mines—Higher Wages Demanded.

The Marmora Herald publishes the following—At the time of the accident on Friday, County Constable Cochrane was sent for, who declared an inquest unnecessary. It seems the constable had no authority in such matters, and by some means or other an inquest has been ordered. The relatives of the deceased refused to have the bodies exhumed and a warrant was issued to take the bodies by force, which is being done to-day.

A number of the miners have struck and are creating a great deal of trouble at the mines. They demand higher wages, and a person to take entire charge of the blasting. As far as we can learn, no notice of dissatisfaction was given the management—the men simply quitting.

The miners are intimidating other workmen and in consequence the whole mine is shut down. From the awkward way the men have gone about it, it is doubtful if they will accomplish much. As a matter of fact the mill had to close to put in new machinery, etc. An English company like the Cordova, can easily import a whole force of practical miners, which would not be to the interests of the workmen here.

BUSINESS PROGRESSION.

Our business is one of progress and success. No need to enlarge on our dispensing facilities; this department is run on correct principles; promptness and accuracy are our mottoes. We are daily renewing and assorting our stock of Perfumes, Atomizers, Sponges, Brushes, Combs and Toilet goods; no old stock; prices always the lowest.

The People Say So.

The public verdict is still in favor of Paine's Celery Compound. It is the great family medicine of the present day and never fails to do what it promises. Paine's Celery Compound will banish and permanently cure kidney disease, liver complaint, ills resulting from impure blood, heart trouble and dyspepsia. Come to us for the genuine—the kind that cures. Ormond & Walsh, Druggists, Peterborough, Ont.

MATTHEWS' NEW STORE.

The Reconstructed Store a Thing of Beauty in the Town.

The George Matthews Company are occupying their handsome premises on George street, which was formerly occupied by them, and which had been magnificently refitted and modernized since the fire. The store has been rebuilt for their special use, and made suitable for their particular business. It is without doubt one of the finest stores of its kind in the Dominion.

The store is handsomely floored and finished in oak, with walls of glass set in like tile. The ceiling is of metal, of handsome design, and the whole store is bright and cheerful.

The Times wishes the Company continued success in their handsome home.

THE LIBERALS TO MEET.

A Convention Called For September 12th in Town.

The political pot is beginning to boil. The Liberals have at last decided to call a convention, and nominate a candidate to contest West Peterborough for the Dominion House. The convention will meet on Wednesday afternoon next, Sept 12th, in Stevenson's hall, Water street.

It is said that there will be a hot time at the convention, it being an open secret that there is friction between the "machine" Liberals and those who are opposed to underhand deals.

The Tories will now no doubt get to work and follow suit.

A RAILWAY WRECK.

Bad Pitch in on the Trunk, near Blackwater Friday.

A collision occurred this morning about 8.20 near Blackwater Junction, which luckily was not attended with loss of life, says the Lindsay Post of Tuesday. Details are somewhat meagre, but the facts appear to be about as follows A special train of empty passenger coaches left Lindsay yard about 3.00 this morning from Toronto, in charge of Conductor Gall and Driver D. Clarke. The orders were to pass the regular east-bound express at Blackwater Junction, and as the special was nearing that station, and running at a high rate of speed, a ballast train, in charge of Conductor Akott and Driver Frame, backed down towards the siding.

The crews saw that a collision was inevitable and jumped in time to escape the mix-up. The trains came together with terrific force, and for a couple of minutes the extent of the disaster was hidden by the great cloud of sand and dust thrown into the air. When it had settled it was seen that eight or ten of the gravel cars had been derailed, and that the two engines were lying in the ditch in a badly wrecked condition. A message was at once wired to Uxbridge—the next station west—to hold the east-bound express and another was sent to this town for the auxiliary train to clear away the wreck. Locomotive Foreman Price and men made a fast run to the scene, arriving about 10 o'clock, and two hours later the track was cleared. The express due here at 10.40 pulled in at 1.45.

There are various theories afloat as to the cause of the accident, but nothing definite can be learned from the local railway authorities. There will no doubt be a searching investigation held.

FLY TO PIECES.

The Effect of Coffee on Highly Organized People.

"I have been a coffee user for years, and about two years ago got into a very serious condition of dyspepsia and indigestion. It seemed to me I would fly to pieces. I was so nervous that at the least noise I was distressed, and many times could not straighten myself up because of the pain.

"My physician told me I must not eat any heavy or strong food and ordered a diet, giving me some medicine. I followed directions carefully, but kept on using coffee and did not get any better. Last winter husband, who was away on business, had Postum Food Coffee served to him in the family where he boarded.

"He liked it so well that when he came home he brought some with him. We began using it and I found it most excellent. While I drank it my stomach never bothered me in the least, and I got over my nervous troubles. When the Postum was all gone we returned to coffee, then my stomach began to hurt me as before and the nervous conditions came on again.

"That showed me exactly what was the cause of the whole trouble, so I quit drinking coffee altogether and kept on using Postum Food Coffee. The old troubles left again and I have never had any trouble since." Anna Coen, Mt. Ephraim, Ohio.

THE TRENT WATERWAY.

The Additional Sections placed under Contract.

The Dominion Government is evidently determined to complete the Trent Valley with as little delay as possible.

The contract has also been awarded for No. 3 section of the Balsam Lake Division, to Messrs. Brown & Aylmer, the same firm which in conjunction with Mr. Love had the contract for the Lakefield section of the Canal from Lakefield to Nassau. This contract, with the exception of a little rock dredging at Lakefield is completed, and in less than six weeks this section, as well as the northern end of Messrs. Corry & Laverdure's section, will be ready for navigation, as far as flotation is concerned, so that craft will be able to come south from Balsam Lake to the suburbs of Peterborough.

Sections Nos. 2 and 3, Balsam Lake, are together 13 1-2 miles in length, and extend from a point north of Kirkfield to Lake Simcoe. On the two sections there will be five ordinary locks (on No. 2 section, which is all earth excavation) and on hydraulic lift lock, equivalent to five ordinary locks, on No 3 section which has considerable rock excavation. Practically there are ten locks on these two sections to overcome the 123 feet difference between Balsam Lake and Lake Simcoe. When these two sections and the Nassau-Little Lake contract are completed there will be direct navigation from Barrie, Washago and Orillia to Healey's Falls, a distance of 160 miles.

The work on the two new sections, the cost of which will be $750,000—No. 2, $250,000 and No. 3, $500,000—will be begun at once, making a very decided forward movement in the direction of the completion of the Trent Valley Waterway from Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario.

Rheumatism—"I was badly afflicted with sciatic rheumatism. Consulted doctors without relief. Was persuaded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and five bottles gave me relief and enabled me to go to work." WILLIAM R. ROACH, Margaretville, N.S.

HEIR TO SIR FRANCIS DRAKE.

Wisconsin Lawyer Goes to England to Press Claim for Estate.

La Grosse, Wis., Sept 10.—John H. Daniels, a lawyer of this city, is about to start for England to press his claims to an estate of $150,000,000 His unclaimed accumulations from the wealth left years ago by Sir Francis Drake, discoverer and privateersman, of whom Mr. Daniels avers he is an heir. The millions of the Drake estate, according to the claimant, have been lying in the English court of Chancery until they reached their present enormous proportions. The riches left by the noted English sailor were the results of a trip to the West Indies during the war with Spain. At the head of a small squadron he captured and sacked the town of Nombra de Dios.

Mr. Daniels has been busily engaged for many months in gathering the evidence he will carry to England. His mother was a Drake, who lived in Orange county, New York. The exact line of descent by which the lawyer expects to prove his claim is a secret which Mr. Daniels is guarding lest publicity defeat his plans.

Bell Pianos

At Toronto Fair.

The attention of all music lovers and piano buyers is directed to the exhibit of Bell Pianos and Organs in the Musical Pavilion at Toronto Exhibition. The pianos shown are not specially prepared for exhibition, but are samples taken from the company's regular stock, and for touch, tone, and finish, cannot be duplicated anywhere. We invite a critical inspection and comparison of our instruments, each one being guaranteed for ten years ensuring to the purchaser a lasting satisfaction.

We have also obtained the sole right for Canada for the manufacture of the wonderful "Apollo," a new and wonderful automatic piano-playing instrument, which will be shown for the first time at the Company's exhibit The "Apollo" is built on the experience of earlier inventions. It is in no sense a mechanical instrument. It can be attached to any piano, and the player can at all times control the volume and expression, and renders the most difficult pieces of music in a truly masterly way. Whoever owns a piano should have an "Apollo."

At the city warerooms, 70 King Street West, can be seen an exact duplicate of the stock shown at the exhibition, and a great array of second-hand pianos and organs of nearly every make, which we are clearing out at low prices, the terms being made to suit the purchaser. If you are thinking of purchasing an instrument, don't fail to inspect this stock at Bell Piano Warerooms, 70 King Street West, TORONTO.

1500 PEOPLE DROWNED DAMAGE TEN MILLION

Not a Building in Galveston That Was Not Damaged by the Hurricane.

MANY TERRIBLE SCENES AMONG THE RUINS.

Seven Hundred Injured People at the City Hall—Pleasure Resort Annihilated—Bodies Buried Under Debris—Company of Soldiers Destroyed—National Aid Asked For.

Galveston, Texas, Sept. 10.—Six hundred to one thousand persons killed; a city almost in ruins; the wharf front entirely gone; every ocean steamer stranded; death and destruction on every hand, and a moneoy loss that cannot yet be estimated, are the results of the appalling calamity that has befallen Galveston. The great storm has left her helpless sand, her stricken people are compelled to appeat to the outside world for aid.

An accurate count of the dead is impossible now and the real number killed in the storm will probably never be known. No one attempts to estimate the damage to business and residence property. The fine steamer Alamo lies upon the top of the Mallory wharf, and a big cotten-laden English steamer was driven ashore at Texas City. Other vessels are agroung in different parts of the bay, some hopelessly wrecked.

RELIEF NEEDED

Yesterday morning a boat was chartered to run to Texas City, and on this The Houston Post correspondent had to leave hurriedly. But from what he saw and heard from some of the leading business men he can assure the pbulic the the people of Galveston need immediate relief. The object in sending to Texas City was to get in touch with the outside world, and let it know that a stricken city was in misfortune and ask the people of the country to send food, clothing and water.

The waterworks are in ruins and the cisterns all blown away or filled with salt water, so tha tthe lack of water is one of the most serious of the present troubles. Ruin is everywhere. Electric light and telegraph poles are nearly all prostrated and the streets are littered with timbers, plate, glass and every conceivable character of debris. There is hardly a habitable house in the city, and nearly every business house is badly damaged. The school buildings were unroofed and badly wrecked. Fine churches are in ruins. Elevators and warehouses are unfit for use, and the electric light plant and the cotton factory have collapsed. From Tremount to P street and thence to the Beach not a vestige of a residence is to be seen. In the business section of the city the water was from three to ten feet deep in storees. Stocks of all kinds, including foodstuffs, are total losses.

THE STTORM

The storm commenced raging between 9 and 10 o'clock Saturday morning and by noon the waters from the gulf had inundated the island, as far inland as Twelfth street in Galveston. From there the waters gradually encrouched further inland, rising about 15 inches an hour. At 6 p.m. there was 36 inches of water in the lobbies of the Tremont Hotel, the highest point in the city. At 9 o'clock the water Market street was level with the seats of the streetcars. After that it gradually receded, but the wind was cyclonic in its force. It reached a celocity of 84 miles an hoour, and then the instruments in the Government observatory were wrecked.

As soon as daylight came and the fury of the wind had abated the work of rescue and searching for the dead commenced. In one room the reporter counted seven dead bodies. The Tremont Hotel was made a rendezvous for the living.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED DROUNDED.

Dallas, Texas, Sept. 10.—A special to The News from Houston says. Additional particulars of the storm at Galveston show that about 1,500 persons were downed, and $10,000,000 worth of property destroyed. There is not a building in the city that was not damaged to some extent. All the bath houses on the beach were destroyed and their attendants drowned. The Sealy Hospital was destroyed and most of the patients drowned. The grain elevators were destroyed, one of them containing 1,000,000 bushels of wheat. The Ball High school, and the Rosenberg school buildings were destroyed and many persons who had taken refuge in them killed. Eight big steamships in port were all wrecked. All three railroad bridges and the country bridge across the mainland at Virginia Point were swept away, and the bridge tenders and their families drowned. The loss of life and property is simply appalling. The entire island was submerged and water was eight feet deep on Tremont avenue, probably the highest point in the city.

RESORT ANNIHILATTED.

The beach resort of Pat O'Keefe, known to every visitor to Galveston, was annihilated, not aestige of the building remaining. Mrs. O'Keefe was drowned. The great bathing pavilion, known as the Pagoda, the big pleasure resort, known as the Olympia, and Murdoch's bath houses were all swept away into the Gulf. There were few bodies on the beach. They had been swept into the Gulf or driven up into rubbish by the waves. Only half a dozen of them were in sight from where the workers were.

All the residences which escaped destruction and the leading hotels have been turned into hospitals. There is scarcely a house left standing which does not contain one or more of the dead and many injured.

Information from the extreme eastern and the extreme western portions of the city were difficult to obtain, but the reports received indicate that those two sections had suffered fully as much as the rest of the city. Fifteen men, constituting all that remained of a company of regular soldiers stationed at the Beach barracks, which were discovered, were marched down Market street. The loss of life among the soldiers at the barracks must have been fully a hundred.

PLAGUE STILL EXISTS.

Two Additional Bubonic Cases Found in Glasgow.

Glascow, Sept. 8.—An official bulletin, issued to-day, says two additional bubonic plague cases have been admitted to the hospital, and the nine additional persons have been placed under observation.

TO APPEAL G.T.R. CASE

So Decided the Town Council Last Night.

John Montgomery Retained and Walter Parnell Engaged, as Town Teamsters—Town vs. The Dickson Co. in the Matter of Broken Stone—General Business.

Town Council met in regular session last night, when there were present Mayor Kendry in the Chair, and Aldermen Weir, Sawers, Rogers, Davidson, Clinkscale and Denne.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From W. T. Laplante, complaining that he has several times asked Council to have that part of his property at the corner of Hunter and Aylmer streets drained, graveled or fixed in such a way that the mud hole which is formed, and found there for weeks after a rain fall will not be the nuisance it is. Also threatening to resort to law if the town does not do its duty in this respect.—Board of Works.

From Town Solicitor Edwards, saying that he wrote the General Manager of the G.T.R., calling his attention to complaints made of cars being left standing on Bethune street, and enclosing a copy of his reply, promising that the matter should be enquired into at once, and such instructions given as will avoid further cause for complaint.—Board of Works.

From Chief Roszel, asking for new winter uniforms for the police force.—Referred to Supervision of Police Committee.

From Department Public Works, Ottawa, transmitting cheque for $150 in favor of the Corporation of the Town of Peterborough to defray expenses incurred in connection with sending to Ottawa on April 26th, a detachment of the Fire Brigade, also tendering best thanks for valuable assistance so readily and generously given on that occasion.—Received.

From Pousette & McWilliams, on behalf of the estate of the late Thomas George Hazlitt, asking that the taxes paid upon his income for 1900 be remitted on the ground that Mr. Hazlitt died in October last.—Court of Revision.

From Town Solicitor Edwards, re Peterborough vs. G.T.R., asking instructions as to appealing the case or otherwise.—Received.

From Town Solicitor, suggesting that the time for making the award in the case of Morrow vs. Peterborough arbitration be extended beyond one month.—Received.

From E. B. Edwards, re Roszel vs. Sutherland, a case which came up before the Police Magistrate for a violation of the bread by-law, and dismissed on the ground that while the bread in question contained but three pounds to the loaf, instead of four pounds, as provided by By-law, a label was put on it to that effect, so that there was no deception. The Solicitor pointed out that the effect of this decision is practically to override the By-law and to determine that it is invalid in forcing the weight of loaves.—The By-law in reference to selling of bread was referred to Legal Committee.

From N. Nelson, asking for position as town teamster.—Fire, Water & Light Committee.

From Wm. Breckenridge, objecting to sidewalks being constructed outside the trees.—Board of Works.

From R. Hartley, re taxes on her George street store.—Court of Revision.

From F. H. Gosselin, asking for refund on butchers' license.—License Committee.

From J. W. Carey, asking remission of dog tax.—Court of Revision.

From the Wm. English Canoe Company, protesting against paying taxes on granolithic sidewalks, as the walk in front of their property was poorly constructed, being all out of level, and getting worse every day.—Board of Works.

From John McGrath, complaining that the Town sidewalk crosses the eastern portion of his lot, east of Water street and north of Antrim, and requesting that the town discontinue using his lot or else compensate him for his probable loss.—Board of Works.

From Boiler Inspector, reporting the boiler and pump of Fire Engine to be all clean, in good order and well kept.—Received.

From a number of ratepayers, asking for fire protection on Manning and Aberdeen avenues, and Aylmer and Benzon streets.—Fire, Water & Light Committee to report.

From ratepayers on Albert and Alfred streets asking for water service.—Fire, Water & Light.

From Minicola Bros., asking for a rebate of $20 on their pedlers' license of $30,—Granted on motion of Ald. Dawson.

From Nicholas Williams, asking for remission of dog tax.—Court of Revision.

From W. H. Moore, calling attention to the dangerous condition of crib work adjoining the Peterborough creek, where it crosses Lot No. 5, south of Hunter and west of George.—Board of Works.

Ald. Dawson thought the Council should thank the Mayor for the very satisfactory manner in which he has secured compensation from the C.P.R. in payment of Mr. John Green's claim as embodied in the above report. The Mayor accordingly received the Council's thanks, and suitably replied thereto.

LEGAL COMMITTEE REPORT.

Ald. Dawson presented the following in the absence of Chairman Robertson—

Gentlemen,—Your Legal Committee beg leave to report that they instructed the Town Solicitor not to enter an appeal in the case of Peterborough vs. The Grand Trunk Railway regarding the Smith street bridge.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Ald. Dawson moved the adoption of the report which Ald. Roger took exception to on the ground that there was a good chance of winning on appeal of the case, as the evidence submitted was strongly in favor of the Town.

It would only cost $120 to carry the matter before another judge, he urged, and it would be a pity to miss an opportunity of winning the case from fear of risking so small a bill of costs.

The Mayor and Ald. Denne and Weir supported Ald. Rogers, who moved, seconded by Ald. Denne,—That the Town Solicitor be authorized to appeal the case against the Grand Trunk Railway.—Carried.

THAT BORROWED STONE.

Ald. Sawers moved, seconded by Ald. Weir,—That the account against the Dickson Company for stone borrowed from the Town, be referred to the Town Solicitor to take legal action in the matter.

Ald. Roger suggested that the matter be referred to the Solicitor to report to the Council.

The Mayor supported Ald. Roger's suggestion, and the resolution after being amended on these lines was carried.

BOARD OF WORKS REPORT.

Ald. Rogers presented the following.

Gentlemen.—Your Board of Works beg leave to report and recommend as follows.—

1. That the Town Engineer be instructed to put in a fifteen inch overflow pipe in the George Street sewer at Townsend Street and take steps to ventilate the sewer below that point.

2. That the Town Sollicitor be authorized to consent on behalf of the Town to an extension of the time for making the awards in the arbitrations with Mr. Morrow and Mr. Bradburn.

LICENSE BY-LAW.

A By-law, to amend the By-law respecting municipal licenses passed its several readings. The By-law fixes a license fee of $10 for shooting galleries, and regulates the hours for such concerns, bowling alleys, etc.

TOWN TEAMSTERS.

Ald. Dawson moved, seconded by Ald. Rogers,—That John Montgomery be retained as town teamster and that Walter Parnell be engaged in like position at a salary of $375 a year, dating from September first.

At Park Street Last Night.

Mr. A. G. Baker, B. A., missionary-elect to Bolivia, South America, addressed the Young People's Meeting at the Park street Baptist church last night. Baker is one of a party that is being sent out by the Baptists to South America, and his address was exceedingly interesting.

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

Have Now Been Entered Upon Between the Powers and China.

London, Sept 10.

The Chinese Minister in London, Sir Chih Chen Lo Feng Luh, is understood to have received from Li Hung Chang a copy of the credentials emanating from the Imperial Household, appointing the plenepotentaries to conduct the negotiations for peace and laying down the conditions in relation there. It is intimated that similar documents have been transmitted to the Chinese Ministers at other capitals, and that the credentials are such as will satisfy the American and European Governments. The Chinese Minister here had a conference with the Foreign Office officials this afternoon when, it is understood, he handed in the credentials referred to.

Sir. Chih Chen Lu Feng Luh informed a representative of the Associated Press that he had received a decree similar to the one Wu Ting Fang handed to the State Department at Washington, and added that he personally transmitted the decree to the Foreign Office this afternoon.

THE PLAGUE.

Glasgow, Sept 10.

An official bulletin issued to-day shows an additional case of Bubonic plague has been reported. The total to-day is sixteen cases and 112 persons under observation.

It will probably occupy more than a year, and will involve the expenditure of thousands of dollars.

—The steam yacht Janemac, built by the Peterborough Canoe Co., has been sold to a party in Smith's Falls.

—Why don't you go in? said a knight of the roads, to his companion as they stood in front of Mr. C. B. McAllister's residence, in Ashburnham. "He's all right. Don't you see 'em a-waggin' his tail?" "Yes I do," was the thoughtful reply; "an' don't you see 'em a-growlin'? I don't known which end to believe." And the weary Willie's passed on.

COL. SAM. HUGHES.

Lindsay Preparing to Give Him a Hearty Welcome.

At a meeting of the Town Council of Lindsay, held a few days ago, a deputation of military men, representing the 45th Regiment, of which Col. Hughes is commanding officer, a request for a grant of money was made in order to tender the gallant Colonel a reception on his return from South Africa.

The reception will probably take the form of a military parade of the Regiment, and a procession from the station to the drill shed, where addresses will be delivered.

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Two Ladies Seriously Injured in a Runaway Last Night.

Yesterday evening, about six o'clock, as Mrs. George Graham, of the Oriental Hotel, accompanied by her aunt, Mrs. Robt. Reid, of Port Hope, and little Miss Madge Graham, were driving in a cart down the hill on the Ashburnham side of the Smith Street bridge, the hold-back broke in some way, causing the horse to run away, throwing the occupants of the rig out on the railway crossing.

The ladies were picked up by some of the employees of the Auburn Woolen Co., who were returning from work, and a hack telephoned for, when they were driven home. Mrs. Reid was found to have sustained serious injuries, having had three ribs broken, and otherwise bruised. Mrs. Graham, fortunately, escaped with slight injuries, while Madge was unhurt.

BOERS DRIVEN FROM MOUNTAIN STRONGHOLD

Cavaly Brigades Under Dundonald and Brocklehurst Capture Lydenberg.

BOTHA'S ARMY SEPARATED INTO TWO BODIES.

One of These Flies to Krugersport with the Guns, Ammunition and Supplies, While the Other Moves Eastward—Methuen Advances into Western Transvaal.

Pretoria, Sept. 10.—Gen. Baden Powell has been appointed Chief of the Transvaal police.

London, Sept. 10.—After an admirably conceived and skilfully carried out series of operations, lasting over a week, the Boers have been routed from their hill citadel at Lydenberg, and the bulk of their force has fallen back into the desolate and slightly populated district to the north. Some of them have gone to the east in the direction of Spitzhop, perhaps with the intention of taking another road which runs from that place to the north. The first-named body has, however, carried off the guns, ammunition and supplies, so that it is probable that further resistance will be waged.

There is no doubt, however, that Botha's army, which is the only formidable Boer force now in the field, is on the point of being dispersed, after which the war will degenerate into a purely guerilla conflict on the Boer part, and into a series of hunting parties on the side of the British. It must be born in mind that the western part of the Transvaal between Pretoria and Mafeking is still in possession of roaming bands of Boers, who must be suppressed. The announcement that Lord Methuen is moving from Mafeking upon Lichtenburg, is in all likelihood the first step of the British to dispose of these parties, and conquer for the second time the distance which Generals Hunter and Baden-Powell thought they had pacified, but which was reoccupied by the enemy.

London, Sept. 10.—Telegraphing to the War Office under date of Belfast, Sept. 7, Lord Roberts says.

"Gens. Dundonald and Brocklehurst occupied Lydenburg yesterday. The forces of Gens. Buller and Hamilton were then within five miles of the place. Their casulaties were four wounded.

"Gen. Hart has been engaging the enemy at Krugersdrop for the last few days, with a view of driving them from the railway.

"The Boers left four dead on the field, one of whom is thought to be Gen. Theron. No one has yet recognized the body as his, but the pockets of the deceased contained letters to Theron from Gen. De Wet, conveying official information of British movements.

"Gen. Buller reports from Lydenburg that the Boer force has been divided, some of the troops having started for the north, and the others toward Spitz kop. Most of their guns, stores, and ammunition have been sent to Krugers post.

"Major White commanded at Ladybrand with a company of the Worcestershires and the Wiltshire Yeomanry whose officers behaved most gallantly. The credit for their relief is due to Gen. Bruce Hamilton, who marched eighty miles in four and a half days."

A GREAT FUTURE FOR THIS DISTRICT

The Trent Valley Canal Will do the Trick.

And Make This Locality a Second Minneapolis—Cheap Freights, Power and Labor the Three Important Factors.

That the Trent Valley Canal will do much for the country through which it passes, we think is a foregone conclusion. But we think we have hardly estimated correctly the advantages which are sure to follow the completion of the waterway. Mr. J. W. Kilbourn, the President of the Lakefield Cement Company, in discussing this matter a few days ago, spoke of the development of industries which is sure to follow the completion of the Canal. He said that this section should speedily become a second Minneapolis. With direct water communication from the great wheat-producing west, cheap mill sites and abundance of power now running to waste, the entire distance between Peterborough and Lakefield is sure to become a veritable hive of industry. With the waterway finished, there is no better sites for large flourishing mills than on the banks of the Canal. Wheat would be brought in barges and when turned into flour, sent on by waterway to the seaboard.

Therefore, while it is pleasing to note that two additional sections have been placed under contract, it is most important that a united effort be made to complete the whole work. The Canal as it stands, is practically worthless, and its early completion can only be secured by constant and persistent agitation.

The Times would suggest that something definite be obtained from the Government as well as from the Opposition to the effect that a sufficient sum will be placed in the estimates at the next session of Parliament to complete the work. Let the Canal Association see that both parties are committed to this before the election.

OTTAWA'S BIG EXHIBITION.

The Capital's Great Fair to Open on Monday Next.

All the arrangements have been completed for the big fair to be given at Ottawa commencing on Sept. 14 and ending Sept. 22, by the Central Canada Exhibition Association. Entries have simply poured in until the display is assured of being far in advance of that of other years. Nearly all the available exhibition spaces have been engaged and the applications have come from all over the world.

The buildings and grounds are now in first class shape for the fair and the scenery for the mammoth spectacular. The Battle of Paardeburg and the surrender of Gen. Cronje, an attraction secured at a great expense, is now ready. The management having undertaken the task of making the last of the big fall fairs the best may now congratulate themselves on having succeeded in their undertaking.

The programme of special attractions is excellent in every respect. The very best specialties which money could procure have been engaged and from the immense grand stand seating 15,000 people will be witnessed a series of special attractions which could only be selected by careful study and long experience.

Space will not permit a description of the thrilling balloon ascents with parachute drops, the wonderful exhibitions of horses and horsemanship in the most marellous high jumping and other feats, ever shown, the daring feats of acrobats and athletes and the comic features which go to make every exhibition a success but of one thing the public may rest assured and that is that any person visiting the Ottawa Exhibition with the expectation of receiving amusement and instruction will not be disappointed.

HUGH JOHN COMING.

Premier of Manitoba to Open Peterborough Central Fair.

The directors of the Peterborough Central Exhibition are in luck. Hon. Hugh John Macdonald, Premier of Manitoba, will open the Fair on Wednesday, 19th instant. He will arrive on the noon train, and leave at 4.40, C.P.R., same day, for Toronto, where he is to address a public meeting in the evening.

A Special Train.

Arrangements have been completed for a special train service to enable those desiring to go to Cobourg or Port Hope and hear the three distinguished statesmen, Sir Charles Tupper, Hon. Geo. E. Foster and Hon. Hugh John Macdonald, who address meetings at these two places on Saturday next.

The Cobourg meeting is in the afternoon and the Port Hope meeting in the evening. A fare and a third can be secured and a special train will leave Port Hope for Peterborough after the night meeting. A large number from town will no doubt take advantage of the inducements offered to hear the Conservative leaders.

SEPTEMBER ADVERTISING.

Business men differ as to when "ads" are the most productive of results. One heavy advertiser makes a special effort to attract custom in September, when so many people return from the sea shore, mountains and country with new energy, ready to take up neglected enterprises; when the children are to be got ready for school, and when preparations are to be made for winter occupations and pleasures. His purpose is to induce people to get into the habit of dealing with him. Everybody reads the Times.

Lumbering Operations.

Large gangs of men are now on their way to the lumber camps. In our own district the Dickson Company and the McDonald Lumber Company are starting their camps. There will be a busy season in the woods this winter.

After Pot Hunters.

Married at Tweed.

A very interesting event occurred yesterday at Tweed, when Capt. E. B. Clegg, of the firm of Clegg & Co., furniture dealers, George street, was married to Miss Hattie White, youngest daughter of the late Mr. Samuel White. The wedding was celebrated at the residence of the bride's cousin, Mrs. Frank Garett, and was witnessed by only the immediate relatives. The happy couple proceeded through town this afternoon on the west bound train on a honeymoon trip to western points. They will receive the heartiest congratulations and well wishes of their hosts of friends when they return to Peterborough.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 11 1900.

THE DOMINION ELECTIONS.

Unless all signs fail, the Laurier administration will shortly dissolve the Dominion Parliament and appeal to the country for a verdict on their conduct of affairs in office since 1896. Doubts have been expressed in various quarters as to the date when the elections would take place, some contending that a short session would be held next February, and then the dissolution. Doubtless this course would be in harmony with the wishes of many House of Commons representatives, particularly in the Province of Quebec, to whom an additional sessional allowance of $1,000 next spring would be matter of financial importance. However, this may be, the Liberal party leaders are of a different opinion. They have consulted the political augurs, who, it is evident, have declared the present time propitious. The duty of the augur in ancient times was to prognosticate from, or as from, signs and omens. What signs and omens are present to-day?

The Conservatives claim that the influence of the Liberal party on their own supporters and on the electorate is on the move,, and cannot longer be maintained. This appears to be true to some extent, at least. The Liberal party have many sins to answer for, that will take them all their time to satisfactorily explain.

The elevation of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to power sprang principally from the desire of the French-Canadians to place one of their own nationality and creed at the head of affairs. Since Confederation, in 1867, no Frenchman had been made Premier, and the pride of the Lower Canadians was hurt. So when Sir Wilfrid—then plain Mr. Wilfrid Laurier—was adopted at the Liberal conventions as their acknowledged choice, the French heart was stirred to its depths. To a great extent party politics in Quebec Province were laid aside; the Roman Catholic Church declined to interfere; and so with a great hurrah Mr. Laurier was carried on the shoulders of his compatriots and co-religionists into power. Out of 65 seats in Quebec Province Mr. Laurier secured about 50, thus givin ghim a majority of about 35 in that Province. With such a backing, and with majorities from other Provinces, Sir Wilfrid has been able to depend upon a majority of at least 50 on a test vote.

The Times desires to be fair, but common candour and honesty compels us to speak plainly and fearlessly.

That the Laurier administration has disappointed many of the old Liberal adherents in the Provinces outside of Quebec is not a subject for doubt. Can any fair-minded politician claim that the professions of Liberalism as enunciated by the party platforms and in the speeches of the Liberal leaders and press prior to 1896 have been fulfilled? First, the extravagance of the Conservative administrations in the conduct of affairs was denounced and economy promised result, a large increase in the public debt and a lavish increase in the yearly expenditure. Secondly, free trade or a fiscal policy as nearly approaching it as possible was likewise advocated; result, the old Conservative tariff was adopted with slight modifications. Economy in every Department of Government was heralded in advance; result, corruption of a flagrant character has disgusted and disappointed the Liberal rank and file.

It has been said that the Liberals have not kept a single promise made while in opposition. There is, to our mind, at least, some reason, grounds for this assection. That the "growing time" which the country has enjoyed for the past few years a proper excuse for increased expenditure, is at least open for argument. The Liberals claim that circumstances have changed, and that the increased expenditure is justified in order to keep place with the requirements of the country. Just how far this will go with the people remain to be seen.

BISMARCK COULD DRINK.

And Yet He Lived to a Ripe Old Age and Always Enjoyed His Pipe.

Count Andrassy's story of an interview he had with Bismarck is as follows:

"Bismarck had two immense mugs of beer brought to us. He took one of them and shoved the other over to me. I remarked that I drank only water. He looked at me in silence, curiously and almost suspiciously for a minute and then proceeded with the subject under discussion. The more interested he became in our conversation the more frequently and copiously he drank. After finishing his own mug he appropriated mine without a word and put down its contents in three or four tremendous drafts. Then he had a servant fetch and fill two enormous pipes. When he offered me one of them, I explained that I never smoked.

"'What!' he cried, 'neither drink nor smoke? What kind of a supernatural man are you anyway?'

"It was a mercy to both of us, however, that I did not accept the pipe, for Bismarck smoked so incessantly that within fifteen minutes the air in the room was dense. When I rose at the end of the evening from the table at which we were sitting, the smoke was so thick that I could hardly see the chancellor's face."

Drink Plenty of Water and Be Healthy.

There is no doubt that we do not drink enough. Our bodies consist largely of water, and the average man needs to drink from four to six pints of water daily in order to maintain health. This is the amount of water eliminated from the body by means of the kidneys, the skin and lungs. It is evident that a fresh supply is constantly needed to replenish this lost aid in the process of digestion and carry away matter.

If the amount of water imbibed is not sufficient for all this the health must suffer. Air, water and food are the essentials of life in the order given.

As a usual thing, women are the ones who suffer the most from an insufficiency of water. Mothers should see to it that their children have plenty of water to drink.

There is no doubt that hot water quenches thirst in most instances better than cold. Taken regularly at the rate of one glassful half an hour before meals it promotes digestion, and in catarrhal conditions of the stomach is recommended by physicians. It has also been tried as a remedy for insomnia.

Many nervous troubles would be greatly benefited by increasing the amount of water consumed, and constipation is largely the result of an inadequate supply of water.

One of the reasons people thrive at mineral springs is that outside of any medicinal properties the springs possess they drink much more water than at home.

Generally speaking, the theory advocated by the best phsicians now-a-days is to drink often and much. It cleans the system, increases circulation and helps to make a clear complexion. Therefore, ye men and women, especially the latter, drink. Take clear, pure, sterilized water, and be thankful so simple a remedy of nature is near at hand.—Katherine Louise Smith, in Table Talk.

The Famous Monitor.

Two dismantled hulks, the remnants of two of the old monitors which did such effective service during the civil war, lie on the shore of the Delaware river at Pennsgrove, on the New Jersey side. They are all that is left of the Passaic and the Ajax, both of which had proud records during the days of '61.

The Ajax cost $750,000 to build in 1862, the Passaic $600,000. Both were sold for $50,000 to Henry A. Hitner's Sons, contractors, who bought them for the old iron in them. It is proposed to sell this old iron for the purpose of making steel, and the metal may be a part, in the future, of some new terror of the sea.

Both the vessels were at one time convoys of the Monitor, and it was a curious coincidence that the Passaic, which was bought at the Pensacola navy yard in Florida, came within an ace of sinking when off Cape Hatteras, where the old Monitor was lost in a gale.

So far only the crowbar and the sledge hammer have been used in dismantling the famous old-timers, but now the contractors expect to be compelled to use dynamite on the vessels. During the war the Passaic took part in many engagements and was put out of commission at Philadelphia June 16, 1865. Her most noted contest was in Charleston Harbor, off Fort Sumter, in 1862, when she was struck thirty-six times. Her turret turned and had to go out of

After Marriage

They are going to be together just as much as before; going to ride the wheel, take little pleasure jaunts, etc., enjoying everything together. Isn't that what many a young couple promise each other? And yet, how very soon the wife begins to say "No, I don't think I care to go. You go alone, dear." Young women don't reckon on the great physical changes which follow marriage. How can they when they are allowed to grow up in entire ignorance of vital physiological facts? They feel languid, weak and nervous. Sometimes there is headache and backache. The pulse no more leaps in answer to the thought of a spin on the wheel. Women who have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, know how promptly the languor, headache, backache, nervousness and weakness are cured by this medicine. Many husbands write in gratitude to Dr. Pierce for the medicine which gives them back the wife's companionship, as it gives her back her health.

"All praise is due to you for your wonderful 'Favorite Prescription,'" writes Mr. John W. Coffman, of Ellisberg, Casey Co., Ky. "My wife suffered with female irregularity; was confined to bed every three weeks. After using two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription she was cured, and has not suffered any derangement since. Your 'Favorite Prescription' is a boon to delicate women."

There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription," and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine and all other narcotics.

OUR GRIME--HOW IT ENDED.

"Old man, I want your advice."

Debenham broke a piece of silence that had lasted some ten minutes or so.

"It's rather a curious affair," he began, diffidently. "It happened last night. I wanted to go out to Bayswater to see my old nurse, who lives there. I took the 'bus at Oxford circus. As I dare say, you remember it was a nasty night, wet and foggy, and the vehicle was soon full; in fact, by the time we reached Westbourne Grove there was only room for another. Here we picked up our last passenger. She was a young lady."

"And of course you contrived that she should sit by you," I said.

"You would have done the same yourself," Debenham retorted. "Any man would, for she had the sweetest face. It's haunted me all night—it has, really. I dare say she was about eighteen, or perhaps twenty—not more. She had brown eyes, very brown eyes—you know the kind that seem to speak almost—and they were shaded by long lashes. She had brown hair, too—the kind of hair that twists itself into a lot of little curls—natural curls, you know. I wonder why all girls don't wear their hair that way. Then her mouth—her mouth—"

"Never mind her mouth," I interposed, hastily, seeing that he was about to indulge in an extravagant flood of rhapsody. "It was an ideal mouth, I haven't a doubt."

"She sat down next to me," he went on. "There wasn't much room, and she thanked me when I moved. She had the sweetest voice."

"Well, there's nothing curious about that. I believe you said—"

"I'm coming to it if you'll only give me time," he returned, in an aggrieved tone. "You've no patience. It was when the conductor came round for fares. Then she felt for her purse; she found it was missing. At first she thought she must have dropped it, and I searched the floor and under the seat. However, it wasn't there. Poor girl! I never saw any one so distressed in my life. It seemed she had £5 in it, and it was evidently quite a fortune to her. Well, I paid her fare for her, and we got out together."

"I don't thing you need tell me any more," I said, drily.

Debenham stared.

"Why not?"

"Because I know the rest."

"How the—"

"Yes, I do. You lent her the £5, of course. My dear fellow, you've been 'had.'"

"I didn't do anything of the kind!" Debenham retorted hotly. "She would not let me. That's what I came to ask your advice about. I thought that as you were a lawyer you might be able to suggest something, but I wish I'd never mentioned it to you."

Of course I hastened to soothe his ruffled plumes, and in a little while he went on with his tale. It appeared that he had seen her home, and that he had learned her name. It was Charnley—Kate Charnley. She was a dressmaker and lived with her sister.

"And you want to help them, eh?" I said, after a time.

"Yes, but it'll be a difficult matter. They're a clergyman's daughters, and very proud. I don't see what I can do. It's awfully riling, you know, Kennion, to have a pile of money and not be able to do a little good with it once in a while. It's a shame that this girl should have to slave at a sewing machine all day while a great strong beggar like me lounges around killing time."

"I suppose you want to refund this £5?"

"Yes; I can't do more, but I don't even see how I can do that."

"Well, you might order a gown of some sort from them."

"Don't be an ass; men don't buy gowns."

"You could say it was for your sister."

"But I haven't got a sister, and if I had she'd never let me choose her gowns for her; besides, she'd have to be fitted on and all that, you know."

I was obliged to admit the force of these arguments, and a fresh period of silence intervened. Debenham had risen and was pacing the floor in a state of perplexity.

"How would it be if I enclosed the money in an envelope and sent it anonymously?" he said at length.

"You might do that, certainly," I replied, after a little consideration.

"But she'd be sure to know who sent it."

"Well, that doesn't matter, as you are not likely to see her again."

Debenham stopped and turned his eyes full upon me.

"What's that? Not see her again! But I must see he again. I—I feel that my fate is—er—linked with that girl Kennion."

"Oh, very well; then that squashes the idea entirely, unless— Look here why not assume the character of the thief yourself, and send her a letter saying you have repented and return the money?"

"But I don't want her to think that I'm a bad lot."

"Well, she needn't know that you sent it. You can pretend to be an ordinary pickpocket."

"So I can. I never thought of that. By jove, it's a capital idea! Where's the pen and ink? What shall I say? Give us a bit of a lift, old chap. You're a dab hand at this sort of thing."

I took up my pen, and after a little thought dashed off the following letter:

"Dere miss: This is from me, the bloke wot tuk yer purse I sens the muny bak bekause yer father wos once very kind ter me when I wos down on mi luck, an I noas yer needs it a sight more than I does, yer humble servant.
BILL NOKES."

"How will that do?" I said, as I tossed it across the table.

"Splendidly—splendidly!" he cried as he ran his eyes over it. "It's worthy of Bill Sykes himself. I'll send it off this very minute." And he trust it in an envelope with a £5 note.

"You'll let me know how it answers?" I said, as he took his hat.

"Oh, yes." And then, with a hasty good night he went flying down the stairs to catch the post.

The following morning it happened that a matter of business took me in the vicinity of Debenham's chambers and having half an hour to spare I determined to call and see if he had heard anything in connection with his plot.

As I was about to enter his sitting room, however, I heard the sound of voices, and a hasty glance showed me that he was engaged. A young lady was standing by the table, facing Debenham, who looked as guilty as a schoolboy caught in an orchard.

"I got it back this morning," said the girl. "A man who is employed on the railway picked it up as he was on his way to his work."

"I—I am very glad," Debenham murmured, nervously. "He must have been an honest fellow."

"Yes," she said. "But the strange part of it is that by this morning's post there came a letter from a—a thief, enclosing a £5 note. You can read it if you like."

And she handed him the precious missive I had concocted.

He read it in feigned astonishment.

"I never heard of such a curious thing," he murmured. "It's positively—isn't it, you know?"

Of course this childlike attempt at deception didn't deceive the girl.

"Mr. Debenham," she said, "you wrote this letter—you sent this note."

"I? Really, miss—"

"Oh, yes, you did. It's no use denying it. No one else knew of our loss."

There was a pause. Debenham stood looking very red and foolish.

"Come, you'd better confess," she said, at length.

He rumpled his hair in a reckless fashion.

"It seems impossible for a fellow to do a good action in this world," he cried. "He's sure to be found out."

"Then you did send it?"

"Ye-es. You see, you wouldn't let me help you, and so—so it struck me that it would be a capital idea to pretend that I was a thief" (the humbug! his idea, indeed!) "I never thought for a moment that you'd see your purse again, and if you hadn't done so, my little dodge would never have come to light."

"No, I don't think it would," she answered; "for that was a most realistic letter you wrote."

Debenham groaned.

"You can't think what an effort it cost me," he said.

"What an effort, indeed!"

"I do hope you will let me keep it as a memento?"

"Yes—if you will promise to forgive me."

"Oh, there is nothing to forgive! It was very good of you."

At this very moment I caught a glimpse of her face, and I was forced to admit that Debenham had some reason for his extravagant praise.

"And you will not think the worse of me for—for trying to deceive you?" he went on. Really, he was getting positively absurd; from his voice one would have supposed that he was a prisoner suing for his life.

"Oh, I think better of you!" she cried. "I shall never forget your kindness." And as she gave him her hand she blushed in a ridiculous fashion.

Then Debenham made an ass of himself. Instead of simply shaking hands and saying good morning, he held her fingers and said nothing, but just stared at her in a moonstruck kind of way that was quite idiotic, and she drooped her head like a little silly and went the color of a peony; then—. But at this point I could stand it no longer and I quietly withdrew.

Of course I was not in the least astonished when Debenham rushed into my chambers the same afternoon and with a good deal of stammering confessed that he was engaged. He seemed amazed when I betrayed no surprise, but I didn't tell him that I had been a witness of his folly.

I was presented to the future Mrs. Debenham and her sister a few days later. When Debenham asked me what I thought of her, I told him she was one of the nicest girls I had ever met, but, as a matter of fact, she is much inferior to her sister, who, I don't mind admitting, indeed, is the nicest girl I have ever met, and I shouldn't wonder—

But there, that's "another story."—London Answers.

Off the Track

This means disaster and death when applied to a fast express train. It is equally serious when it refers to people whose blood is disordered and who consequently have pimples and sores, bad stomachs, deranged kidneys, weak nerves and that tired feeling. Hood's Sarsaparilla puts the wheels back on the track by making pure, rich blood and curing these troubles.

Constipation is cured by Hood's Pills. 25 cents.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other goods offered for sale in our shop.

This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the Sunshine, located two miles east of Salida at Cleora Station, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, also on the Arkansas river, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

The very thing for Stony Lake cottagers and campers. It will carry the voice half a mile to a mile and a half. Made in two sizes. Price $1.25 and $1.00. Every cottager should have one.

The Toronto Fair.

Those who have visited the Toronto Fair say that it is not as great a success this year as the people of that city would make people believe it to be. This fair should not be extended over one week, for it injures fairs in other places. But it will be hard to overcome the greed of the people of Hog Town.

A Snap.

Photographs, mounted on a heart shaped velvet pad, with easel, of all the Generals serving in the South African war—the nicest novelty out for 20 cents each. Also a large colored picture 18 x 24 for ten cents. Times Bookstore.

A Big Meeting.

The Liberal convention to-morrow is likely to be largely attended, on account of the publicity given the event by the Times, and for which we did not charge a cent. The Provincial Secretary has promised to be down from Toronto, and will deliver an oration to the faithful. The aspiring candidates will also be there, to take a hand in the proceedings.

County Maps.

There are still a few copies of the new maps of the County of Peterborough, left. Order one before it is too late. Price, Mounted on roller, $2; paper 50c. Times Bookstore.

South African Relics.

Sergt. Hall brought with him from South Africa a bandolier, taken from a dead Boer at Brandford on May 3rd, also a revolver taken from Cronje's tent at Paardeburg. These relics are on exhibition at Billy Morgan's barber shop, and are being viewed by many.

The Times at Summer Resorts.

The Morning Times is sent to summer resorts and residences, addressed to individuals at thirty cents a month. Persons visiting the lakes and other places may have the Times addressed to them for as short a period as one week.

Not Our Percy.

A statement appeared in these columns to the effect that Percy Price is invalided home. Sergt. A. J. Hall says that this is not Corporal P. R. Price, of Peterborough. He says that there are two whose number is 172, but they are in different battalions. He says that he is in a position to know that this is not Price but Bradley who is referred to in this particular case.

A Coming Event.

It will be pleasing news to many to learn that Mrs. W. J. Morrow, after earnest solicitation, has consented to give a musicale in the Opera House at an early date. Her ability as a musician is too well known that no words of praise are needed from us. During her residence in the South her voice has greatly improved, and hundreds of music-loving citizens will be delighted to have an opportunity to hear her once more.

What do you Think, Aldermen?

The following taken from the Kingston News, may set some of our local aldermen thinking: In the city of Montreal every Chinaman who keeps a laundry must pay a city tax of $50 In Kingston there is nothing to prevent any Chink that cares to do so, embarking in the business in competition with residents and white labor. The more Celestials engaged in running a laundry, the less trade for the white residents who pay taxes and spend money for the necessaries of life. A Chinaman lives generally on very little food outside of rice and the very cheapest food. As being of value to local merchants owing to the quantity of food he buys he might just as well be in China as here. He seeks to live as cheaply as he can and to accumulate money. This is a question which the council might well consider. If a tax was imposed it would be a protection to the Kingston white laundrymen.

SLEEPLESSNESS

MOST COMMON AMONGST WOMEN.

The Trouble is Easily Controlled.

Paine's Celery Compound

PRODUCES PROMPT AND PERMANENT CURES

When women are afflicted with sleeplessness and the many ills arising therefrom, they should be aware of the fact that they can, by their own efforts, control and banish all troubles.

By the use of Paine's Celery Compound the impure blood that undermines the stomach and the nervous system can be purified and enriched and the number of red corpuscles increased. Sleeplessness that causes much of the nervous prostration among women is a trouble that Paine's Celery Compound never fails to cure.

Paine's Celery Compound by its well known nourishing powers enables the nerves to get back their control over the circulation, so that the blood supply becomes greatest where it is most needed, as in the stomach after eating, and least where its presence can only do harm, as in the brain when sleep is needful.

If wearied, worried, weak and nervous women desire full health and a happy life, we urge them to give Paine's Celery Compound a fair and honest trial. Paine's Celery Compound has a marvellous record of rapid and permanent cures that embraces every city, town and village in our broad Dominion. No other medicine is so frequently prescribed by our best physicians; no other can so surely meet the ailments of afflicted women.

NOT A GAME OF CHANCE.

Important Ruling Which will Make Poker Playing Legal.

An important decision has been rendered by Police Magistrate Jelfs, of Hamilton, which will interest Peterborough poker players.

At the police court in Hamilton a man was charged with keeping "a common gaming house." It was proven that poker was played in the place and that the proprietor received a "rake-off." The police magistrate, however, held that it had not been proved that the game of poker played was not purely a game of chance, and that he could not, therefore, send the accused up for trial. The case was dismissed. This decision by the magistrate means that any and every man may run a poker game without fear of punishment, and it goes without saying that the permission will be taken advantage of.

THE STANLEY PIANO.

What Western Ontario Thinks of This Fine Instrument.

The London News Says.—The way in which the Stanley Piano has sprung into prominence and become the favorite instrument of the lovers of music in Toronto is a record breaker. It would be astonishing, but for the fact that it is based on merit, worth and printer's ink, a hard combination to beat. The firm's exhibit at Toronto was one of the most conspicuous in the music pavilion, and the entire exhibit was sold out twice over before the middle of the week.

Although the Stanley has only been introduced in London a short time, it has found a ready sale.

Those who have purchased express themselves as delighted with their instruments, and are always ready to testify to the merits of the Stanley.

The company manufacturing this piano is one of the strongest in the business in Canada, and contains amongst others Senator G. A. Cox, of Toronto, one of the wealthiest and shrewdest financiers in the Dominion. A great future is before the Stanley.

Pte. Vanderwater in Town

Private Maurice Vanderwater, of the Queen's Own Rifles, Toronto, who was wounded at Paardeberg, was in town over Sunday, a guest of his cousin, Mr. Fred Vanderwater, at Thos. Barrie's. He attracted considerable attention in his khaki service uniform and his soldierly bearing. Private Vanderwater lost a finger in the Paardeberg engagement and subsequently was taken down with fever.

MARRIAGES OF MEN

CURIOUS COURTSHIPS AND PROPOSALS.

Some Entertaining Scraps of Family History—A Romantic Element is Mixed Up With Most Love Affairs—Interest Never Flags in the Subject.

Marriage has always been one of the world's greatest themes. Interest never flags in the subject. Men have tired of their own matrimonial experiences sometimes, but of other people's never.

The great thing, as a wise philosopher said, is to get the right girl. There is no stereotyped way of getting her. Just as men have found different ways of proposing, so there have been endless ways in which men have met their fates. A romantic element is mixed up with most love affairs.

Horace Greeley and Mary Young Cheney were married the first day they met. They had corresponded for some time, a mutual friend, who was something of a matchmaker, having brought this about. She was young and beautiful and all his fancy painted her, but she was much disappointed in his appearance, so much so that when he appeared before her, having proposed and been accepted by letter and the marriage day fixed, she frankly told him that although she married him, she was not in love with him. Their married life was long and happy and the loss of his wife was a blow which he did not long survive.

The second time that Bismarck met Fraulein Johanna Putthammer he kissed her soundly in the presence of a number of guests. The immediate effect of this embarrassing and shocking behavior was the prompt announcement of the betrothal, which was soon followed by the marriage.

The first time Mary Todd met Lincoln she said to her sister: "That man will be President one of these days. He will make a husband to be proud of." About that time Lincoln's chances of becoming President seemed as remote as possible, and Mary's sister laughed the idea to scorn. A few months afterward Mary Todd was married to "Ugly Abe," and in fourteen years the prediction was fulfilled As a child the future Mrs. Lincoln had prophesied that she would become the wife of a President of the United States.

The first August Belmont's marriage to Commodore Perry's daughter grew out of a duel. At his first meeting with the lady, a blooming Baltimore belle, at the theatre, he challenged a man who made some remark reflecting on the virtue of women generally. When the smoke of the simultaneous fire of the two pistols cleared away it was found that the bully had a bullet through his heart and Belmont a ball in the leg. He became a hero of the hour; proposed to the beautiful Miss Perry and was accepted. He said it was her noble face that nerved him to resent the imputation on her sex.

With Henry Stanley the explorer, it was "love my daughter, love me." Mrs. Tennant persistently refused to consent to her daughter marrying "Dolly is all that I have left, and I can not, shall not, part with her. But to entreaties she finally yielded. "I want your daughter for my wife," Stanley said, "give her to me, and do you at the same time become my mother, father, brother and sister." "She is yours," replied mamma, "and so am I." That, in brief, is the story of Stanley's wooing, and Mrs. Tennant is his as irreparably and indissolubly as her daughter is, and Mr. Stanley is said to be a model husband and a tractable and obedient son.

It was through his novel, "The Scalp Hunters," that Capt. Mayne Reid won a bride. He was thirty years old when he met a damsel of thirteen, with whom he at once fell in love. The child, of course, took no notice of him, but he gave her the story to read, as effective a manner of courting in this nineteenth century as ever was Othello's in an earlier one. Two years later the young lady was at a public meeting where Capt Reid spoke on behalf of the Polish refugees. "An electric thrill seemed to pass through me as he entered the room," she afterward said, and when the meeting was over she went up to speak to him. "I leave for London on the next train," he said, hurriedly "Please send me your address."

"I do not know where," she replied with some embarrassment. He instantly handed out his card and was gone. A formal little note followed: "Dear Capt. Reid—A you asked me to send you my address, I do so." By return of post came the answer: Only say that you love me and I will be with you at once," and then the reply, "I think I do love you." Needless to say that there is nothing as good as this in the lovers' novels.

That Admiral Porter was not afraid to brave the fire of an unpropitious parent doubtless raised him in the esteem of his lady love. When a midshipman on board the flagship of Commodore Porter, who was accompanied by his family, which included a young and lovely daughter, young Porter allowed no parental commands to frighten him. The orderly was told not to allow the midshipman to enter the cabin without special permission. Young Porter, however, managed to continue his visits to his fair one. One bright moonlight night the Commodore, rousing up from an after-dinner nap, discovered young Porter and his sweetheart behind one of the windows of the stern ports.

"Young man," thundered the Commodore, "how did you enter this cabin?" The midshipman replied. "The orderly is not to blame. I came over the mizzen chains and through the quarter galley window." Midshipman Porter, through the balance of the cruise was regularly admitted to visit the cabin and on the ship's arrival home the marriage took place.

A Heavy Suit.

The New York Herald publishes an article saying that Dr. Coulter, formerly of Lindsay, and at one time a resident of Peterborough, will sue Dr. Oronhyatekha, Chief Ranger of the Forresters, for $100,000 damages because the latter did not push the sale of Dr. Coulter's patented atomizer for the treatment of throat and nose troubles. Defendant is reported as saying to the Herald that Dr. Coulter has no claim at all against him as he was under no obligation to forward the sales of the instrument in question.

Wireless Telephony.

Brandford, England, September 10.—At to-day's session of the physical science section of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, now in annual session here, Sir William Henry Preece, made the interesting announcement that as a result of his experiments with wireless telegraphy he has found it quite possible to convey audible speech six to eight miles across the sea without wires. He added that it was a practical commercial system and might be extended to communication between ships and between ships and the shore.

Sir William Henry Preece is the consulting engineer to the British Post Office and the colonies, and was president of the Institution of Civil Engineers, 1898-99. He was born in Wales in 1834 and has been connected with the electrical service of the British Post Office since 1870. Previous to that he had for some twenty years been connected with telegraph companies. Up to the year 1899 Sir William Preece was engineer in chief and electrician of the British General Post Office. He is the author or joint author of several works on telegraphy and electricity.

GREAT MOVEMENT ON PORTUGUESE BORDER

British Army Is Concentrating Upon the Railway Base of the Boers.

FRONT COVERS AN EXTENT OF FORTY MILES.

An Estimate Says That the British Force Numbers 70,000—Boers Make an Ineffectual Attempt to Oppose General Buller—Latest From Lord Roberts.

London, Sept. 11.—Generals Buller and French are engaged in the task of delivering the stunning blow at the Boers which Lord Roberts has been leading up to for so long. The British advance is now only about 100 miles from the point on the Portuguese border where the Delagoa Bay railway crosses into the Transvaal, and the most important step which the British can take is to press forward to the border and occupy the railway in such a way that the further further passage of supplies into the Transvaal is impossible, at the same time seizing the immense accumulation of rolling stock. To accomplish this task General French has been quietly but rapidly withdrawn from the Lydenberg district, where only a few days ago he was to be seen acting with signal ability against the Boers, and sent southward to operate against Barberton, which guards the left flank of the railway almost due south of Lydenberg. Making a wide detour and covering almost a hundred miles, the great cavalry leader on Sunday last had reached Carolina, where he moved in a northeasterly direction upon Barberton, the center of the De Kaap gold fields, whence a branch line runs towards the Delagoa Bay line, which it joins near Kaapuniden, forty or fifty miles from the border. From Barberton a direct road runs to Komatipoort almost parallel with the railway, and along this it is evidently the object of General French to advance. General Buller is now in the Lydenburg district, and about as far from the railway as French will be at Barberton. He is also moving towards Komatipoort by a road which runs from Lydenburg past Spitzkop, where the Boers unsuccessfully attempted to bar his progress, and curves southerly towards the Portuguese border. The position of affairs is therefore approximately as follows—General Buller is twenty miles north of the railway, moving eastward, while General French is an equal distance to the south, moving in the same direction and with the same object. Behind French is Clery, who, advancing from Standerton, along the Grimelo road towards Barberton, will serve to guard the rear and act in support of French's cavalry brigade. General Hamilton is following Buller in the same manner, while Pole-Carew, preceded by Hutton and Henry's mounted infantry, is moving along the railway slightly in the rear. A great converging movement, in which fully 70,000 men must be engaged, is in progress towards the Portuguese frontier, and it cannot be long before the Boers are entirely cut off from their base, it being impossible for them to resist the overwhelming force acting against them on a front of fully forty miles.

BULLER CROSSES THE HILLS.

London, Sept. 10.—A despatch from Lord Roberts to the War Office, dated Sept. 9, says—"General French, who left Carolina (Natal) this morning, met with opposition throughout his march. He drove the enemy from three successive positions, one of which was taken with much gallantry by the Suffolks, who being skilfully led sustained few losses. The enemy left some dead on the field. General French will continue his march toward Barberton to-morrow.

General Hutton with Henry's Mounted Infantry has engaged the enemy successfully near Weltivreden.

"General Knox, who is moving about Kroonstad, reports the capture of two of De Wet's despatch riders, who were carrying interesting letters from De Wet.

"General Buller yesterday morning attacked the enemy's position, which was on a precipitous ridge, 1,500 feet high, of a horseshoe shape. The position was carried. The enemy retreated over a narrow causeway after losing a great many. We had thirteen killed and twenty-five wounded."

Another despatch from Lord Roberts to the War Office, dated Belfast, Sept. 9, says — "General Clery moved from Standerton yesterday with a small force with a view to attacking the enemy.

"General Methuen moved from Mafeking yesterday, encountering slight resistance. He is going to Lichenburg.

"General Buller crossed the mountains in Mauchberg to-day. His guns can be heard from Lydenburg and Lyttleton.

"General Ian Hamilton attacked the Boers between Lydenburg and Spitzkop yesterday. He sends no details."

HOW THE BOERS GET FOOD.

Johannesburg, Sept 10.—A railway culvert south of the Klip River was destroyed by the Boers last night. The burghers captured a train that came along after the culvert had been blown up, killing a railway pioneer. They took the arms off the others aboard the train and then allowed them to go free.

General Hart is engaging scattered bodies of the Boers along the Potchesfstroom road.

One of the men belonging to the North Staffordshire Regiment who was captured in a fight three days ago has made his escape and returned to his regiment. He stated that the Boers get supplies from farm houses everywhere. They have plenty of food, and also arms and ammunition. Much of the ammunition is concealed in various convenient places where the British have little chance of ever finding. The soldier adds that while he was a prisoner he saw women in farm houses bring out two boxes of ammunition and fill the bandoliers of the men belonging to the troop he was with.

Messrs. Kruger and Steyn are now at Pilgrim's Rest.

The rolling stock of the Netherlands Railway, consisting of thousands of tracks and engines, is massed at Selati.

SURPRISED THERON'S SCOUTS.

Johannesburg, Sept. 10.—A force sent down the railway line to-day surrounded a party of twenty of Theron's scouts who were drunk from champagne taken from a captured train. Nine of them were killed or wounded and the rest were made prisoners.

Theron's whole party numbered 70, and was composed mainly of Italians and other foreigners. Fifty escaped.

Their attack on the train was dastardly. They fired upon unarmed men after they had surrendered.

The fireman had a narrow escape. He hid in the coal bunker, which was blown up when the locomotive was dynamited, but he was not seriously injured.

The trucks, with their loads of supplies, were burned, the enemy declaring that they had plenty of food, but that they wanted liquors and coffee.

WILL RESERVE ALL RIGHTS.

London, Sept. 10.—The Colonial Office says that the British Government issued a notice in South Africa Saturday, Sept. 8, to the effect that every concession granted by the late Government of the Transvaal Republic, will be considered by her Majesty's Government on its merits, the British Government reserving the right to decline to recognize or to modify any concession. The commission having the matter in charge will begin its sittings October 1.

After Seventy-four Years

There passed away in Ashburnham an old and highly respected resident, in the person of Mrs. Maniece, relict of the late John Manice, in the 74th year of her age. The deceased came to this country from County Fermanagh, Ireland, her maiden name being Jane Baxter. The family settled in Otonabee, taking up land in 1832. In 1853 she married Mr. John Maniece, carriage builder, and took up residence in Ashburnham, where she resided until her death. The family consisted of Messrs. Wm. Robert, John and Thos. B., and one daughter, now Mrs. E. A. Sedgwick. Mrs. Maniece was most highly respected and esteemed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. The funeral takes place from the residence of her son, William Maniece, corner of Mark and James streets, Ashburnham, this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

Club House Sold.

The old Club boat house at Chemong Park has been sold, and is now the property of a Toronto gentleman, who will convert it into an up-to-date summer cottage. The building originally cost in the neighborhood of $2,000, and was sold, together with the island on which it stands, for $400.

Mr. W. H. Gordon has entered into partnership with Mr. D. H. Kernaghan, the well known grocer. The business in future will be conducted by the firm, under the name and style of Kernaghan & Gordon.

FIRST SPEECH BY PREMIER LAURIER

Sir Wilfred is To Open the Campaign in Quebec.

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—The Liberal campaign in Quebec province will be opened by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Montreal on the 20th inst. That will likely be the first political speech from the Premier.

It will be the occasion of a great political demonstration, and other Ministers will take part.

A MEAN PIECE OF BUSINESS.

Is The Council's Quarrel with the Dickson Company.

At the last meeting of the Council a resolution was passed referring to the alleged claim against the Dickson Company for "borrowed" stone, to the Town Solicitor. The public who read Council proceedings as published will hardly understand the matter. The Company, who have probably put more money into circulation here than any other local industry, required a new bridge over the raceway on London street. The old bridge, for which we understand the Town was responsible, was so rotten that it was no longer safe.

In vain the Company applied to the town for a new bridge, in self-protection they proceeded to build it themselves, and a substantial job they made of it.

In the fall, when the cold weather was approaching it was found that more broken stone, than was on hand was urgently required to complete the concrete work before the frost set in, and at this juncture the late Mr. Hazlitt secured from the town a quantity of stone, on the understanding, we are informed, that the Council would subsequently pass a resolution giving it outright to the Company, in view of the fact that it was used as above.

Now that Mr. Hazlitt is no more, it appears that this arrangement is denied, and an attempt is being made to recover the value of the stone.

We hope the Council will pause before they bring on a lawsuit under the circumstances.

THE MOMENTOUS DAY

On Which the Liberals Will Meet in Conclave to Select a Candidate.

This afternoon the Liberals of West Peterborough will meet in solemn conclave, for the purpose of selecting a candidate for the House of Commons at the forthcoming elections.

There is a good deal of suppressed excitement as to what the result of the meeting will be. Yesterday a prominent Liberal assured the Times that Senator Cox was to be the man, and in fact had already given his consent. Another Liberal, who is equally well posted, said that there was nothing definite as yet, and that Mr. Cox was seriously considering the matter and would give his answer in person at the convention.

The feeling prevails—and not without reason—that Mr. Cox is the only man who could carry the riding. In case of his refusal to become a candidate, it will, it is said, be extremely difficult to secure a man. A few days ago there were a number of aspirants, but now it appears there are none willing to face what is generally conceded to be almost certain defeat.

UNDELIVERED LETTERS.

Returned From South Africa—Must Wait For News From Home

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—The Militia Department this morning received a huge bundle of letters addressed to members of the Canadian contingents which it has been found impossible to deliver, and which have been returned from South Africa. The letters have been sorted out into the military districts of Canada, and will be sent to the D. O. C.'s for distribution to the senders.

The committee of the Patriotic Fund are prepared to receive and deal with applications on behalf of Canadian volunteers who have returned to Canada, and it is suggested that officers commanding corps in Canada and the several branches of the Soldiers' Wives' League will be good enough to communicate at once with the secretary of the Patriotic Fund, Ottawa, Canada.

Thanked the Mayor.

At the Council meeting on Wednesday night Ald. Dawson very appropriately called attention to the very satisfactory manner in which the Mayor had secured compensation from the C. P. R. in payment of the John Green's claim in connection with the Wolfe street matter. The Mayor's efforts no doubt brought about a settlement of this long disputed matter.

THE HURRICANE IN TEXAS.

Hauston, Texas, Sept. 10. The Tug-Boat Brunswick which arrived here last night from Galveston brought additional details. The horrors of Sunday, were nothing compared with Monday. An attempt was made to bury the dead but the groung was full of water, and it was impossible to dig trenches. During the storm and afterwards a great deal of looting was done, many stores had been closed, their owners leaving to look after their families. The wind forced in the windows and left the goods a prey for the maranders. They stripped dead bodies of jewelry and articles of value. Captain Rafferty, commanding United States troops here, was applied to for help and he sent in 70 of the remenant of the battery of artillery to do police duty. They are patrolling the streets, under direction of the chief of police. A. Hamlin, a travelling salesman who arrived on the tug boat says that only one house is left standing at Seabrook. The land is strewn with dead bodies.

COLLIDED IN A TUNNEL.

Locomotive Runs Into a Freight and Does Some Damage

There was a collision in the tunnel on the Canadian Pacific at Hamilton yesterday, and although there were no fatalities, half a dozen men received injuries.

A freight stopped in the tunnel, and the engine which brings the passenger train to Toronto backed into the frieght, wrecking the van, scattering a car of lumber, and blocking the tunnel. It took a hundred men a couple of hours to clear the tracks, and passengers did not reach Toronto until noon.

Conductor Oldfield and Brakeman Van Ziegel, of the freight train, received the worst injuries, and Engineer Flood, of the passenger engine, was also severely bruised.

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs.—Winds increasing to strong breezes and moderate gales; southeasterly, gradually veering to westerly and north-westerly; fair intervals, but general showers and thunderstorms. To-day—Clearing and a little cooler.

The conditions are favorable for fine weather in the Territories and Manitoba, but the outlook is decidedly unsettled for Ontario and Quebec, and on the lakes the winds are likely to increase to strong breezes and moderate gales.

LORD MINTO AT THE MINES.

Rossland Bedecks Itself in Gala Attire and Receives the Governor-General

Rossland, B. C., Sept. 11.—Lord Minto and party arrived here last evening and were escorted through the streets, which were in gala day attire, to the residence of ex-Gov. McIntosh. Later a reception was held, which was attended by hundreds of enthusiastic citizens. To-day the party visited the leading mines, and banquet will be given at the Kootenay Hotel.

RED-HOT GOLD IS STOLEN.

Thieves Take Metal in Retort from Assay Office.

Helena, Mont., Sept. 11.—Thieves to-day stole $5,000 worth of gold from the assay office of the Jay Gould cyanide plant. The gold was in a retort, and represented a two weeks' clean-up of R. A. Harsh's cyandie mill. The amalgam was red-hot when taken from the office, having just came off the furnace. There is no clew to the thieves.

Obituary

The Times is exceedingly sorry to have to chronicle the death of Mrs. Macpherson, mother of Mr. W. A. Macpherson, of the Collegiate Institute staff, which sad event occurred at 340 Rubidge street yesterday morning. The deceased lady suffered an attack of pneumonia some months ago, from which she never fully recovered. She came from Toronto to reside with her son in December last. The Times extends its sympathy to the sorrowing relatives.

Two Years Instead of Six Days.

Barrie, Ont., Sept. 10.—A young man named Chapman, wh owas serving a three months' term for theft, committed in Collingwood, escaped from the county jail here on Thursday, having previously stolen Turnkry Caldwell's revolver. He was recaptured in Collingwood by Chief Maider, and brought back. On Saturday he was sentenced to two years in Kingston penitentiary. Though quite young, Chapman is a confirmed criminal. It is only a few weeks ago since he made an unsuccessful attempt to escape with Younge Kenny, who is now in the Central. Chapman had only six days more to serve.

There was no loss on the British side.

FRANCE WILL WITHDRAW TROOPS FROM PEKIN

Division Becoming More Apparent in the Camp of the Allies.

LI HUNG CHANG HAS ASKED TO GO TO PEKIN

Edict Summons Him to Act With Prince Ching as Plenipotentiary and He Asks Safe Conduct from the European Generals—Latest News from China.

London, Sept 12, 4.30 a.m. No news has been received that the Po Tung Fu expedition has actually started. An undated despatch from Tien Tsin reports that it was delayed by bad weather. Shanghai correspondents confirm the assertion of Dr. Morrison, the Pekin correspondent of the Times, that the military parade through the Imperial palace was a Russian triumph. Dr. Morrison's account comes as a timely reinforcement of the opinion beginning to be expressed in London papers to the effect that, in spite of all her talk about the evacuation of Pekin, Russia had made no sign of withdrawing, but on the contrary, is continually shipping fresh troops from Odessa to China.

The Shanghai correspondent of the Morning Post says it is considered certain that Earl Li has bribed Russia and Germany to evacuate Pekin. The former will get Manchuria. It is not known what terms have been offered to Germany. A special despatch from Shanghai, gives a report that the Americans and French nearly came into conflict in Pekin, because former had insisted upon entering the palace before formal entrance of the international troops.

London, Sept. 11.—The most significant news regarding the Chinese crisis is the announcement that France has fallen in with the views of Russia and will consent to withdraw her troops from Pekin. It is evident that the great powers are gradually dividing themselves into two camps, and interesting developments may be expected in the near future. It remains to be seen whether the strong course taken by Great Britain and Germany will be modified by the fact that Russia and France have come to an agreement which could only have been expected when the terms of the Franco-Russian alliance are borne in mind. Should Britain modify her previously declared intention, it will only be to gain time and postpone the final settlement of affairs in China until the South African war is over, when she will be able to take a firm stand, seeing that she will have an army of veterans ready to transport to the scene of action. In any event the result of this new phase of the Franco-Russian agreement will be watched with interest, for it may initiate a series of wrangles among the European powers which may transcend even the Chinese troubles. At present some of the powers appear to have forgotten their declared mission in China, and to be acting in a manner which is likely to prolong instead of shorten the duration of the disturbances.

FRANCE WILL WITHDRAW.

London, Sept. 11.—France has formally adhered to the Russian proposal to withdraw from Pekin to Tien Tsin. A representative of the Associated Press learns on unquestionable authority that telegraphic instructions were sent yesterday from Paris and St. Petersburg to M. Pichon and M. De Giers respectively, the Minister of France and Russia at Pekin, directing both Ministers in conjunction with Generals Frey and Linowitch to take measures to withdraw the legations and military contingents of both countries to Tien Tsin immediately upon circumstances permitting.

Diplomatic circles in London are inclined to believe that this step will lead to similar action on the part of the United States and Japan, and that while Germany may hold out until Field Marshal Count Von Waldersee arrives in China she will ultimately acquiesce, leaving Great Britain little choice but to follow suit.

LI HUNG'S REQUEST.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Minister Wu has received a cable despatch from Earl Li Hung Chang giving an imperial edict signed by the Emperor and directing the Earl to proceed immediately to Pekin, and there co-operate with Prince Ching toward peace negotiations, and a settlement of all war difficulties. The edict is dated August 27. Accordingly Li Hung Chang asks that the powers co-operate in affording him personal protection and facilitating his journey. He will probably leave Shanghai at once.

Sir Robert Hart, Imperial Minister of Customs, has been asked to procure steamer accomodations for the trip. Minister Wu will probably ask that a United States gunboat be designated for Earl Li's use.

MORE CHINESE DELAY.

London, Sept. 11.—The officials of the Chinese Legation decline to make public the text of the Imperial decree commanding the opening of peace negotiations. But the legations say the document appoints Prince Ching, head of the Tsung Li Yamen, a plenipotentiary as well as Li Hung Chang. It was added that it had been suggested that Liu Kun Yi, the Viceroy of Nankin, and Chang Chi Tung, the Viceroy of Hankow, would also be appointed, but the decree does not mention them.

The information obtained at the Chinese Legation in London regarding the Imperial edict on the subject of peace negotiations differs materially from the news on the same subject obtained in Washington, where the announcement is made that the decree appoints as plenipotentiary to negotiate for peace Li Hung Chang only.

WHAT ITALY WILL DO.

London, Sept. 11.—A special despatch from Rome says the Italian Cabinet has decided to initiate immediately peace negotiations with China. Italy will formulate demands for an indemnity, and if they are accepted Italian intervention will be considered terminated and no proposal tending to further warfare in China will be considered.

ANOTHER FAKE STORY.

London, Sept. 11.—A despatch to a news news agency from Nagasaki, Japan, says it is reported there that the Dowager Empress of China has been captured by the Russians at Johol (?).

EXPEDITION TO PAO TING FU.

Chefoo, Sept. 8, via Shanghai, Sept. 10.—The Pao Ting Fu expedition leaving to-day numbers 4,000 men. The expedition to Pao Ting Fu will leave on Friday. It is made up as follows—

British, two regiments of cavalry, a battery of horse artillery, and 300 infantry; Italians, 1,000; Japanese 300; Russian, 300; and American. 500.

THOUGHT RATHER STRANGE.

London, Sept. 11.—Considerable importance is attached to the announcement from Taku regarding the expedition to Pao Ting Fu. It is thought strange that no German troops are mentioned as participating in the expedition. Apart from the belief that the Chinese Emperor's latest edicts emanated from Pao Ting Fu, it is said that Gen. Yung Lu, who is one of those held responsible for the outrages at Pekin, also is there.

A BED OF GOLD.

Shanghai, Sept. 10.—The Taku steamer which has arrived here brings repots of the latest events in Pekin. These advices are to the effect that the greatest harmony prevails among the officers of the allies, who treat each other with extreme courtesy, and that the soldiers are living as though members of one army. Late arrivals say that if any clash occurrs during the occupation of PKekin it will be brought on by the diplomats of Europe, and not by the soldiers in the field.

The march through the palace was a historic event. Every army was represented. The Russians led and the troops of other nationalities followed in the order previously reported by cable. A Russian band and the Sikhs bagpipes played national airs while the troops filed through the grounds and buildings. There were many enuchs attached to the palace remaining, and they stood by looking as though they were attending a funeral. They were evidently deeply humiliated.

After the procession, which began to move at 8 o'clock in the morning and was an hour and a half in passing through the grounds, a party of civilians, including the legation ladies and some prominent missionaries, were admitted. Tea was served to them and the palace was inspected. The most remarkable features of the buildings are said to be the gilded interior stair cases, carves from single stone, with dragons, lions and other ornaments. The Empress' bed is trimmed with solid gold. After the inspection the palace gates were again closed, and no one was permitted to enter the grounds.

$70 FOR EVERY CHRISTIAN.

Tsung Li Yamen's Offer to Boxers—Empress' List of Slain Found.

Berlin, Sept. 10.—The Pekin correspondent of the Loki Anzeiger says that four Boxers who were convicted of murdering Christians have been shot in the German jurisdiction. A number of reports that were made daily to the Empress Dowager have been found in the Imperial palace, precisely enumerating the murders of Christians, and also a proclamation issued by Chung-Li, a member of the Tsung-li-Yamen, in July, offering fifty taels ($70) for every male Christian, forty for every female, and thirty for every child killed.

HOW THE OCEAN RECORD IS MADE.

At intervals there is printed in the daily press a report from the log of the transatlantic steamships giving their time of passage, the rate per hour and the fastest runs in days. From these we learn, in a general way what ships compose the "gray hound fleet," and that one is faster than another, flying the same house flag, but we are not able to say which of the crack vessels has supremacy over all others, although popular report assigns the record to a particular ship, and her shorter passage seems to entitle her to the distinction.

As these runs are now estimated, it is a matter of greater interest than importance, the practical value of a fast ship being the quick time from dock to dock where passengers and mails are embarked and disembarked. But this is not the way the records are made. A ship takes her "departue" after she leaves port and arrives before she gets into harbor, and in the case of the ships touching at Queenstown cuts off in her report the fifteen hours in the Irish Channel between that port and Liverpool. This departue is a technical term, defining a starting place for purposes of navigation, and is for example entered in the log thus. "Took departue 4.10 P. M. Fastnet light N. N. W. one-half N. distance 10 miles." The ship is then 31 miles from Queenstown, a run of an hour and a half or more, but her report starts at the time and place. For Southampton, the point of arrival and departure is the Needles or Hurst Castle, 18 miles from the pier; in New York it is Sandy Hook, 20 odd miles; at Havre, the Harfleur light, and at Cherbourg, the gauge beacon, 10 miles outside the breakwater. Thus it can be seen that the reports are for distances more or less at the selection of the captain, effecting small periods of time, it is true, but sufficient to disturb the "record," so that while a master may have a fast ship, if he is good at figures it will aid him materially.

There are also the factors of winds, currents, seas and even of temperature to be taken into account, for the latter effects the steering, and as these are always changing, and no tow ships in different latitudes can have them the same, there is no test of supremacy to be had unless they race side by side. What travelers and the merchantile world are really concerned is how long it takes a ship from pier to pier, at what hour the mail bag is closed and what time its contents will be put on shore. This would be worth while, but the exceptionally fast runs for the whole passage, or for a day, do not really amount to anything of value. Neither do the reports upon them signify, for they are not assuredly accurate in detail, nor do they apply to a permanent distance.

GREELEY'S MANNERS WERE BAD.

But They were Forgiven for the Fine Speech He Made Afterwards.

Horace Greeley stories being in order, in view of the unveiling of his statue recently, I will tell one that I heard in New Orleans. The genial old philanthropist went there after the South had taken him to her heart in grateful recognition of his action in going on the Jeff Davis bail bond, and the people were anxious to show him every attention in their power.

A dinner seemed to be the proper thing, and the markets of New Orleans, than which there are few better in the world, were ransacked to make the occasion as notable for its viands as for the distinction of the guest and the diners. Judge Walker, the veteran editor of the Picayune presided; he was a great gourmand, and, after the manner of gourmands, wished none of the fine points of the dinner to be lost to the guest for lack of commentary.

"Mr. Greeley," said he, "these oysters are the best that come to our market, and we think they vie with those of Norfolk. I observe that you are not eating them."

"Well, no," replied Greeley; "the truth is, I never could abide shell fish," and he passed.

Then came some delicious green turtle soup, which Judge Walker explained was prepared from the finest fat turtle the Florida bays could afford.

"No doubt, no doubt," was the reply in Greeley's peculiar whine, "but cold-blooded animals are an abomination to me."

The pompano, imperial fish that it is, and fresh from the Gulf, was open to the same objection, despite Judge Walker's eulogy, and that, too, was passed. Mr. Greeley barely tasted the accompanying Parisian dainty, and shook his head ruefully at the idea that anybody would impair his digestion by eating cucumbers. Shrimp salad, another New Orleans delicacy, proved no more tempting; shrimps, he said, looked so much like worms that they always gave him the creeps.

"Ah, here is something you will like—a homely dish in name," said Judge Walker, "but fit for the gods. It is a Galicia ham." And then he went on to tell how the hogs from which these hams were obtained were fed only on chestnuts, making the flesh luscious and delicious.

"Perhaps so; very interesting indeed," observed Greeley; "but do you know, Judge, that there is so much talk of trichinae now-a-days that I wouldn't dare taste a bit of pork."

The Judge gave up in despair. The only things in all of the array of dainties which had been provided which Mr. Greeley would eat were bread, potatoes and cauliflower, and he feared that he might be overloading his stomach at that. But when it came to the speaking, although he had drunk nothing but cold water, he spoke as one inspired, and with a fervor, eloquence and tenderness that nobody at the table could ever forget.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The Stay-Abed Club.

Of the many curious features in New Orleans life there is none other more interesting than the Stay-Abed Club, an organization composed of bedridden people. The qualifications for membership are confirmed invalidism and the ability to communicate with other members of the club by letter. The idea and plan of this singularly pathetic organization originated with a lady who for fifteen years has been a bedridden sufferer. She conceived the scheme of writing down each day her experiences, impressions and thoughts, and this essay or letter she exchanged with an invalid friend, receiving in return a similar epistle. Presently the circle of correspondents grew larger, and last winter there were fourteen invalids enjoying the curious benefits of the club. Each member writes his or her letter each day, and this communication is passed around in routine to the others, so each member has thirteen letters every day.

Lizzie Borden Snubbed.

Lizzie A. Borden, of Fall River, whose father and mother were murdered in 1892, is the subject of much comment. By the death of her parents she became heir to the Andrew J. Borden building at the corner of Anawan and South Main streets. One of the rooms in the building was occupied by the local branch of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of which Miss Borden was, before the tragedy, an active member. While Miss Borden was in Taunton jail the society joined with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in passing resolutions of sympathy. Since then her case has been rigidly excluded from society debate, and several of the members have snubbed her. She felt that she should not put up with insults from her tenants, and accordingly the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union has been compelled to seek quarters elsewhere.—Springfield Republican.

Windsor Infested With Cut-throats.

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 10.—Rev James Livingstone, of the Windsor avenue Methodist church, gave horse racing, liquor selling, gambling and other evils a severe scorching last night. He said Windsor was infected with the worst gang of thieves and cut-throats that ever came into Canada. Windsor was the only place on the continent that allowed a race meeting to run so long. The fault lay with the politicians. What could be expected when members of Parliament owned stock in race track associations and drew large dividends? He advised the Reformers to get after these men and place men in Parliament who would give a law prohibiting racing for money.

A Bantam Rooster Living on a Grave.

It is by no means an uncommon occurrence to see glass cases on the graves of children in the cemeteries of the country containing toys and other articles that were the especial favorite of the dead child, but James Austin, a fruit tree man, tells of an instance of this nature that is out of the ordinary. He was making a delivery in the southern part of Tipton county this week when he noticed a coop sitting on a grave in a little churchyard. The sight was so unusual that he got out of his buggy and went for a closer view. In the cage was a red bantam rooster, which was quite tame and allowed itself to be petted. There was no stone to indicate whose grave it was on, but inquiry at a house disclosed the fact that the fowl had been a pet of the little girl of John Stover, and when she died the parents placed it in a wire cage on the grave, and they make daily trips, three-quarters of a mile to take it food and water.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A SORRY SIGHT

It is, to see a strong man shaken like a reed by a paroxysm of coughing, which leaves him gasping for breath. People have suffered with bronchial affections for years, with obstinate, stubborn cough, and growing weakness. They have tried doctors and medicines in vain. At last they have been induced to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, with the general result experienced by all who put this wonderful medicine to the test—help at once, and a speedy cure.

For coughs, bronchial affections, weak lungs, spitting of blood, and other diseases of the organs of respiration, "Golden Medical Discovery" is practically a specific. It always helps; it almost always cures.

"I had been troubled with bronchitis and catarrh of the head for eight years; had severe cough, and at times great difficulty in breathing," writes J. W. Howerton, Esq., of Bigfall, Hancock Co., Tenn. "A portion of the time my appetite was poor and part of the time I was unable to do anything. I had been treated by our best country physicians for several years but with little benefit. I had been reading about your medicine for a long time but hadn't much faith in it. Last spring concluded I would try it, and before I had taken one-third of a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I began to mend. I continued taking it until I had taken several bottles. Took Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets also. Now I feel like a new man, and can do as hard a day's work as any one."

AMERICAN NERVE

TWO AMERICANS BLUFF THEIR WAY INTO THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

Dr. Frederick L. Forker and Ralph D. Smith Witness the Workings of the Most Dignified and August Body in the World.

It is believed that the first Americans who ever succeeded in bluffing their way into the House of Lords are Dr. Frederick L. Forker and Ralph D. Smith of Binghamton, who has just returned from a European trip. The tourists visited the vacant chambers in Parliament Building when they first went to Europe two months ago, but at that time neither House was in session. When they returned to London week before last and learned that both Houses were in session they determined to try to witness the working of the most dignified and august body in the world, the House of Lords.

Inquiring at their hotel they learned that no tickets are issued for admittance to that House, in fact that there are no admittances, except to friends, who are taken in by members. They learned that the American Embassy has two tickets each day for admission to the House of Commons, and that it is also much easier to get admitted to that body through some member.

They visited the Embassy, but learned that all tickets were spoken for weeks in advance. The attaches of the Embassy could suggest no way in which they could secure admittance unless they knew some member. After a day's unsuccessful effort to place a Member of Parliament on their acquaintance list, they visited the Cunard agent who had shown them courtesies when they first landed. He could suggest nothing, until he remembered that he knew a member of the lower house. He promised to see what he could do for the tourists.

That night he came to their hotel bringing them two tickets from his Member acquaintance which would admit them to the House of Commons When they suggested their desire to visit the House of Lords to several Englishmen, the Britishers simply gaped in wonder at the men whose nerve would prompt them to think of such a thing.

On July 19 the tourists were admitted to the gallery of the House of Commons, where they listened for some time to the weighty discussion on the advisability of permitting the Irish language to be taught in the schools of Ireland. This debate soon became too tame for the Americans, and they left the House in quest of larger game.

They started down the long hall leading to the assembly chamber of the upper house. Soon they were stopped by the uplifted hand of a guard. "S-s-t. You mustn't come here. The House of Lords is in session."

The Americans were not to be stopped by such trifles. They engaged the guard in conversation, and soon they had secured his graces. Then they explained the situation and asked him to help them get into the House.

"Don't you know some Lord?" inquired the good-natured fellow.

The Americans admitted that they had no lords on their calling list. The guard scratched his head in perplexity. Finally he suggested:

"Well, I'll tell you. Just bide a bit, han' per'aps some lord will come out."

The tourists "bided several bits," but none came. More scratching of his head brought another idea to the guard, who suggested:

"Now, don't tell no one that I told you, but go down to the door there and inquire for Lord Aberdeen, and see if you can make it."

The Americans believed that this was good advice, as it put them one guard nearer the goal. They presented themselves to the stiff officials, who stood at the outer door of the House, and Mr. Smith said:

"We would like to see Lord Aberdeen."

"The guards were inclined to argue the question, but the Americans stood their ground, emphasized their demands, and convinced the guards that they were important dignitaries. Their cards were carried in to the former Governor-General of Canada.

"Does His Lordship expect you?" inquired one of the guards.

"I don't know as he expects us today," replied Mr. Smith.

But the waiting time, my brothers, was the hardest time of all," explains Dr. Forker, in describing the incident. While we stood debating what we should do next, the guard loudly announced: 'Lord Aberdeen.' Turning, we saw behind us a pleasant looking, but very dignified, well-dressed man of middle age, and then we knew we had got to see the game to the end.

Putting on his best brand of bluff Mr. Smith stepped up to his Lordship and began:

"Mr. Aberdeen, we owe you an apology, but we wish to get into the House of Lords, and we were referred to you to take us in."

"Mr" Aberdeen was too much surprised to speak at first, so the young attorney explained:

"We have just come from the House of Commons."

"How did you get into the House of Commons?" inquired Lord Aberdeen.

"On tickets from a member."

"What member?"

"Why it was—ah—it was—what member was it, Doc?"

"I never thought to look at the ticket," said the physician,

"Well really, Mr. Aberdeen, we've forgottn the member's name," explained Mr. Smith.

A very wise adventure, gentlemen," suggested his Lordship with a trace of sarcasm. But his twinkling eyes showed that he appreciated the humor of the situation. "Come with me," and he led the way through the anterooms, opening into the assembly chamber.

WILD FOWL ATTACK A LIGHT

Keepers of Hog Island Light Kill Geese and Ducks by the Hundred.

One of the keepers of the Hog Island light on the Virginia coast relates a remarkable experience with wild fowls at that light on a recent night.

Between 7 and 8:30 P. M. the watch on duty was aroused by the "honking" of wild geese and brant, accompanied by the crash of breaking glass. He hastily summoned the other keepers, who responded with shotguns. They opened fire on the bewildered birds with every gun. The battle lasted for an hour and a half. The guns got so hot that it was dangerous to use them and the shoulders of the men became sore from the recoil.

The supply of ammunition gave out and the fight ended. In the morning there were sixty-eight dead brant, geese and ducks at the foot of the tower. On the following morning the tower was again attacked by the birds. There being no stock of cartridges on the island, the guns were useless, but the keepers fought with sticks and captured 150 fowls, when a flock, apparently containing thousands, rushed upon them. They were compelled to seek shelter within the tower. So powerful was the flight of the frightened geese that the wire screens were penetrated, the light in the watchroom extinguished and the panes in three windows destroyed. These fowl had taken wing because of the severe weather prevailing upon their feeding grounds and were blinded by the intense glare of the powerful light in the top of the tower.

Hog island light marks one of the most dangerous shoals on the Virginia coast. It is an iron tower and stands 180 feet above mean high water. It is a first-class light and can be seen from the bridge of a steamer a distance of about twenty-five miles.

The Irish-American German.

"I came across a colored man who spoke with a German accent the other day," said a prominent stock broker "I dropped into a restaurant not far from the city hall for lunch, and the waiter who took my order, although unmistakably a colored man, spoke as though he had just come from some Pennsylvania Dutch settlement up the State. The thing was so pronounced that I spoke to the proprietor about it, and found that my suspicions were correct. The man was a full-blooded negro, but he had been born and raised in a small town near Reading, and had always associated with the whites, who spoke Pennsylvania Dutch. Queer, isn't it?" "Oh, I don't know," said one of the party, whose business takes him through the West. "A short time ago I came across a German who spoke English with a decided Irish brogue. He was an educated young fellow, a graduate of a German university, and he was very anxious to learn English. He drifted out to Chicago, and from there to a lumber camp up in Wisconsin. Here, he thought, would be an excellent chance to learn the language. But all the men in the camp were Irishmen. Of course, the young German didn't know this, and he fell readily into their mode of speech. At the end of a year he returned to Chicago, very proud of having mastered our tongue, and was greatly surprised to discover that he had a brogue. That was several years ago, but he has never lost it. It clings to him as closely as though he had been born in County Antrim."—Philadelphia Record.

Grip Microbes at Home.

Dr. L. Caze contributes an article on influenza to one of the current French reviews.

The modus operandi of the influenza microbe is peculiar. It is not the microbe itself that does the harm, but a poisonous liquid it excretes. A measure of consolation is afforded by the fact that this poison is even more deleterious to the microbe than to the human being in whom it is deposited, for the microbes end by being destroyed by their own exhalations, whereas their victim has many chances of recovery.

The microbe is an egg-shaped thing, but gifted, in spite of its roundness and smoothness, with an extraordinary capacity both of adhering to any conceivable surface and for passing from one resting place to another. Its goal is a human nose or mouth, and once in the vicinity of these organs its future is assured, for the mere act of breathing is sufficient to draw it into the system.

Arrived there it propagates itself with amazing rapidity. It lengthens out, and after twenty minutes of this process, it breaks in twain, and there are two fully fledged microbes in the place of one. In twenty-four hours the original invader will, in this way, be surrounded by a progeny of over 16,000,000 of his poison-producing kindred.

In short, the doctors know almost everything about the influenza microbe except an effective method of exterminating it.

A Wonderful Cave.

Some persons who have just returned from the neighborhood of Huasteca Potosina, where they were in search of coal, report the discovery of a very wonderful cave in the mountainous regions of that country. It is decorated inside in a very elaborate manner and is evidently the temple of an aboriginal god. In fact, there is now in the cave a huge stone image of an Indian idol. From indications it is evident that the idol is still receiving the worship of the natives. It is thought that this worship may have been going on for many years in the same place, and that the natives, when they found that they could not carry on their heathen worship openly, took the idol to the cave and there fitted up for it the best and most elaborate temple their facilities afforded.—Mexican Herald.

Onions Good for Sleeplessness.

One of he best and simplest cures for insomnia is said to be the odor of raw onions. They should be mashed to a pulp in order to free all the juice. Smell this substance for ten minutes after retiring. It is said to quiet the most nervous person and relax the most overwrought nerves.

Onions contain a form of opium This gives them soporific qualities. The smell after a little while ceases to be obnoxious. People who are exceedingly sensitive to ordor will feel no unpleasant effects. It will not induce headaches or nausea as might be supposed. A gentle lethargy steals over the person heroic enough to try this means of wooing slumber. The senses become dull, the nerves weakened and restful sleep follows.

The medical properties of onions are well known. One eaten raw every night just before retiring for a month in the spring is recommended to produce a clear, fresh complexion.

An onion plaster will relieve hoarseness and inflamation. Raw onions mashed and applied as a poultice to the throat will relieve sore throat. The same poultice on the chest is effective in cases of bronchitis and where there is soreness in the lungs. At least onions enthusiasts claim that all these things are true.

Salutes.

Originally, a town or a warship fired off its guns on the approach of friendly strangers, to show that they had such faith in the visitors' peaceful intentions they didn't think it necessary to keep their guns loaded.

The Health Problem

is much simpler than is sometimes supposed. Health depends chiefly upon perfect digestion and pure blood, and the problem is solved very readily by Hood's Sarsaparilla. You may keep well by taking it promptly for any stomach or blood disorder. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, catarrh, dyspepsia, rheumatism and other diseases are numbered by this thousands.

The favorite family cathartic is Hood's Pills.

The Reason.

ONE of MANY WHO WERE CURED

Eight years ago I was taken sick with typhoid fever, after which I had pleurisy, with water in my side, and a bad cough—raising blood. This left me helpless, so that I could not work for two years. My case seemed to puzzle the best physicians. I became somewhat better, so that I could do some light work, but last winter I was taken with a severe attack of grip which left me unfit for work again. On the 5th of May, 1899, I began taking OUR NATIVE HERBS and in a fortnight I felt better. After taking it one month, my cough and blood raising stopped altogether. Now, I am able to do my own work and my recovery is due entirely to Our Native Herbs.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Historical Society.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Historical Society will be held in Committee room, Victoria Museum, on Thursday, 13th instant, at 4 p.m. Members are urged to attend this important meeting.

A Snap.

Photographs, mounted on a heart shaped velvet pad, with easel, of all the Generals serving in the South African war—the nicest novelty out for 30 cents each. Also a large colored picture 18 x 24 for ten cents. Times Bookstore.

County Maps.

There are still a few copies of the new maps of the County of Peterborough, left. Order one before it is too late. Price, Mounted on roller, $2; paper 50c. Times Bookstore.

Just Like Peterborough.

Belleville Intelligence.—A good story is told at the expense of a Peterborough angler, who recently spent several weeks in Muskoka. Having enjoyed an unusual measure of success one day, he wired his wife. "I've got one, weighs seven pounds, and is a beauty." In reply came the following signed by his wife; "So have I. weighs ten pounds, he isn't a beauty—looks like you.

The Times at Summer Resorts.

The Morning Times is sent to summer resorts and residences, addressed to individuals at thirty cents a month. Persons visiting the lakes and other places may have the Times addressed to them for as short a period as one week.

Armature Burned Out.

During yesterday morning's storm, the electric motor which drives the Times' presses was injured by lightening, and the result is that our paper was later than usual. Through the very great kindness of Mr. J. J. Howden, who loaned us his new motor, we are enabled to get our paper out to-day.

LARGEST LOT OF CRAWFORDS YET.

We have to-day, Sept. 12th, the largest lot of Crawford Peaches and Plums of the season. These are all personally selected goods. Therefore the stock is prime and the prices very low.

Accurate Time.

He who wishes to have accurate time should compare watches with railroad conductors and engineers. Every six months these men must hand in to their companies certificates of accredited jewelers that their watches are in perfect condition. Every three months the companies themselves have their official jeweler examine the timepieces of their men, and every day before starting out with a train, each conductor and each engineer must compare his watch with the company's standard time and hand in a signed form to the effect that he has done this. On every 100 miles of the company's standard time and hand railway there are three standard clocks, guaranteed by the companies to be accurate.

A Good Idea.

A newspaper correspondent in Kingston wants the military men of that city to make an effort to get the Government to place a shooting gallery in the Drill Shed there. At first sight, says the Belleville Intelligencer, this looks like a good idea, and might well be imitated in Belleville. Plenty of people would like to indulge in target practice who cannot spare the time to visit the ranges on the Kingston road. If such an improvement were made in the local Drill hall it is altogether likely that many would join the volunteer force who now hold aloof, with the result that a corps of sharpshooters would soon be organized. Why not interrogate the Government re that matter? There could be no better time to do so than the present.

REPORTERS' ROUNDS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

—Everybody reads the Times.

—The afternoon boat service at Stony Lake ceased yesterday.

—The stock baths on the market are still flooded with water.

—The Ashburnham School Board met last night. Report to-morrow.

—A new and stringent bread by-law is proposed by one of the Aldermen.

—People are objecting to having sidewalks built outside the trees on the streets.

—Mr. T. Cavanagh will ship another gang of men to-morrow to the Muskoka lumber camps.

—The members of Harmony Lodge were at home to their friends last night in their hall, George street.

—The Grand Trunk Railway carried more than 52,000 passengers to the Toronto Fair this year.

—Victoria County cheese board met Monday morning, when 1525 boxes were offered. All sold at 11 1-8c.

Your best friend can give you no better advice than this—"For impure blood, bad stomach and weak nerves take Hood's Sarsaparilla."

—At the Central School—Teacher Smith —"Why didn't you ask your father how this sum was done?" Johnnie—"'Cause I didn't want to be sent to bed."

—A social and entertainment under the auspices of Park street Baptist church Dorcas Society was held last night at the residence of Mr. T. J. Gillespie, Lock street.

—Yesterday evening about 7 o'clock the death occurred of Mr. John Spence, Bonaccord street, after a lingering illness. Particulars regarding the funeral will be given to-morrow.

—The Wm. English Canoe Company object to paying taxes on the granolithic walk in front of their premises, on the rgoung that the work is poorly constructed, and is getting worse every day.

—It might be strange, and at the same time not unnatural if our farmer friends who will visit the Wild and Wooly West Show in connection with the Central Fair, were to utilize the occasion to sow some wild oats.

—Owing to the lack of rain many cows in this vicinity have gone dry; cheese factories are closing up and the outlook is not so good as it might be. It will thus be seen that there is quite a close connection between milk and water after all.

—The Toronto Exhibition is coming in for a good deal of roasting from the Toronto papers, but, like good patriotic journals, they didn't say a word till the Fair was over and the good people of outside places had handed out their shekels to see it.

LOCAL NEWS-LETTERS.

OMEMEE.

The church opening at Boate's Settlement, East Emily, promises to attract large crowds on Sunday and Monday next. Rev. Wilson McCann and Mrs. McCann will be present; they have been absent for the last two years, and all will again welcome them.

The Emily township and Omemee citizens were delighted with the manner in which Capt. Crandell carried on the excursion to Sturgeon Point and Bobcaygeon. It will be repeated another season.

The Omemee Citizens' band are decidedly strict in admitting members; no matter what ability they possess, if intemperate or otherwise not respectable they will not be admitted.

Many visitors will attend the Lindsay Fair this season from this section, being tired of the crowd at Toronto Industrial.

MILLBROOK.

Mr. T. G. Kells arrived home from Souris on Tuesday week.

Mrs. John Steele has been visiting Peterborough friends.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Winter, of Montreal, are spending this week with Mrs. J. Cochrane, Mrs. Walsh, and other friends in town.

Miss Laura Scott, of Arken, Minnesota, left town Tuesday after a few days' visit with Miss Lottie Cochrane.

Mr H. A. Maddock left town this week for Guelph, where he has secured a good position with a dry goods firm.

Misses Nellie and Stella Dyer, of Lindsay, went home this week, after having enjoyed two months' holidays here.

NEW USE FOR BUTTER.

Prevents Boiling Over

The effect of coffee frequently produces biliousness and all of the accompanying distress, such as loss of appetite, dyspepsia, bowel troubles, etc. A lady from North Evanston, Ill., Mrs. Eliza J. Stuart, 2823 Hartzell Ave., says—"I had used coffee many years, and though I took great care in making it, felt its ill effects very seriously. It made me bilious and robbed me of my appetite for breakfast.

"I always had trouble with dyspepsia while I used it. I was told by physicians that I had catarrh of the stomach, and came to believe there was no help for me. Two years ago I quit the use of coffee and began to use Postum Food Coffee. At first I missed the stimulant, although the taste of the food coffee was delicious

"In a few days I forgot all about my coffee, in the satisfaction I derived from Postum, and soon found that my appetite returned, the bilious condition and dyspepsia disappeared, so that now I am proud to say that at the age of seventy-five years I enjoy my food as well as when young and all my dyspeptic symptoms and trouble of the stomach have gone.

"These troubles had been with me for most of my life and it is really remarkable that I am now so perfectly well. To say that I am grateful does not express it. Once in a while I find a person that does not like Postum, but I always find it is because it has not been properly prepared. There is but one way to make good Postum, and that is to make it exactly according to directions, allowing it to boil full fifteen minutes, not after it is placed on the stove, but after the real bubbling begins. Use a small piece of butter, about the size of two peas, to prevent boiling over."

"Want of Watchfulness Makes a Thief."

Many cases of poor health come from want of watchfulness. But if you keep your blood pure no thief can steal your health.

The one effective natural blood purifier is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It never disappoints.

Impure Blood—"My wife suffered with pain and distress from an affection of the throat caused by impure blood. She was almost in despair when she turned to Hood's Sarsaparilla. Six bottles of this medicine completely cured her." JOHN WECKMAR, Galt, Ont.

Scrofula—"Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured me of scrofula. I was weak and debilitated but it made me strong and well. After a severe cold had catarrhal fever. Again resorted to this medicine and it cured me." SARAH E. DEROY, Annapolis, N. S.

BRITONS EYESIGHT

An Optician Says the Strong Sunlight Her Hurts the Eyes.

"There are more people with defective eyesight in the cities of this country than you will find in Great Britain or Ireland," said the naturalized New Yorker who served in the British army when he was a very young man and who is now an optician. "I do not judge by the number of people who wear glasses here, as in American cities glasses are worn if there is the slightest trace of nearsightedness, while few persons wear glasses for this cause in the old country unless they are so nearsighted that the wearing of glasses is a positive necessity. But, taking it on the whole, there are more people here whose eyesight begins to fail at a comparatively early age than in England, Ireland or Scotland, and fewer people who have exceptionally keen eyesight.

"In the British army you will find a dozen men with exceptionally good eyesight for one you will find in the American army, and I know a good many soldiers in this country. I once knew a private of the First Leicester regiment who has since been killed in the fighting near Ladysmith. This man had such keen sight that he could tell the time by a church clock at a distance of several miles, yet, strange to relate, he could not read very small print in a book. I also knew a man in one of the Lancer patrols who had wonderful eyesight. In the Transvaal long ago what appeared to his watchful chums one day as a mass of veldt heather, dim and blurred in the distance, was seen by him as an ambuscade cunningly concealed and bristling with Boer riflemen. His splendid sight on that occasion saved him and his comrades an unpleasant surprise.

"I have heard of American soldiers who are sharp sighted, but, as I said before, their number is much smaller in proportion than in the British army. One of these Americans is a man named Cullen, who can see objects clearly at a distance of twelve miles. During the Spanish-American war, Cullen, who is an artilleryman, aided his battery very materially in sighting the guns for long ranges and always by his unaided vision.

"I account for the standard of eyesight being better in the old country than here principally because of the gray skies there. There are so few sunny days in Great Britain and Ireland that the eyes are not subjected to the same strain as in this country where there is a far greater proportion of sunny days, and the sun's rays are more vertical than in more northerly countries. The glare has undoubtedly much to do with bringing about the decay of the eyesight at an early age. Another reason is the nervous temperament of Americans. The optic nerve is very delicate and responds quickly to any strain on the nervous system." —New York Sun.

The Country Editor.

The country editor of a quarter of a century ago, says Congressman Landis, was not a college-bred man, but he could "chop logic" with the best products of the universities, quote poetry aptly, and, at an hour's notice, deliver a political speech or address a Sunday school convention. From the standpoint of the useful citizen, he was an all-around finished product.

The country editor of to-day is a different person. He is a good business man. He can "set type," but is seldom found at the "case." He employs compositors, or has ornamented his office with a type-setting machine. The young woman you see bending over the ledger is also a stenographer and typewriter. The country editor now dictates his editorials and employs a bright young man to write local news. His newspaper is printed on an improved press, the power is furnished by a gas engine or electric motor, and the paper is folded by machinery. He owns his own home, keeps his own horse and carriage, and has credit at the bank. A pleasant trip of a month is likely to be offered at any time, and he takes it gladly; while the young woman who keeps the books and the bright young man who writes local news keep the paper in a straight line.—Success.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT IN THE FALLS.

Several People From Buffalo were Hurt.

Niagara Falls, Sept. 10.—Tonight a West Shore passenger train crashed into the rear end of the Pan-American express in the Central yards. The following-named Buffalonians were slightly hurt. Julia Smith, No. 22 Gay Street, right side bruised; William Whymer, No. 66 Clark Street, injured about the ribs and abdomen; Charles H. Hallenbeck, a trainmen, left arm hurt; Andre Dittman, an infant, No. 111 Seneca Street, thrown out of his mother's arms and injured on the head and body.

It is said the West Shore train was an hour late and ran into the yards without regard to the signals. The injured were taken to Buffalo.

At the Central School

A schoolmaster gave his pupils a talk on patriotism at the Central School the other day. He pointed out that the high motives which moved the volunteers to leave their homes and fight for their country. The schoolmaster noticed that one boy did not pay attention to the illustration, and as a test question he asked, him:—"What motives took the volunteers to the war?" The boy was puzzled for a moment; then, remembering the public "send off" to the local reserves and volunteers at the railway station, he replied—"Locomotives, sir."

—The Sons of England Band will play in the Park this evening.

—"The Hamilton House," is a new descriptive fantasea, the music of which was purchased by Mr. Gliddon, while in New York, for the 57th Band.

KRUGER FLEES TO PORTUGUESE TERRILORY

Report that the Ex-Boer President Has Reached Lorenzo Marquez.

MADE HIS ESCAPE TO AVOID BEING TAKEN.

Movement of French and Buller Placed Him in Such Jeopardy That He Fled Across the Border—Buller Occupies Another Boer Position.

London, Sept. 12.—President Kruger has fled. The curtain is about to ring for the last action of the drama in South Africa. Having resisted the inevitable for almost a year, having seen his commandos driven back from town to town, from kopje to kopje by a series of military operations unparalleled for skill in military annals, the aged Boer President has thrown up the sponge, and, according to a despatch from Lorenzo Marques, on the seacoast of Portugues East Africa, has already reached that place on his way to Europe or to America. This is the most deadly blow which could have been struck at the Boer cause. When the most determined and obstinate race takes flight it is evident that the debacle is near at hand, and that save a series of ineffectual and gradually weakening struggles, the conflict is at end. The immediate cause of the precipitate flight of the ex-Boer President is still to be explained. In all probability the rapid advance of Buller to the north of the Delagoa-Pretoria line and French to the south threatened to cut off the retreat of the President by the seizure of Komatipoort and he was compelled to fly. Whether he will be allowed by the Portuguese to cross the sea or whether he will be surrendered to the British remains to be seen. The latter course seems probable Should it not be followed, and should Oom Paul embark on some vessel, he will have to run the gauntlet of the British cruisers which lie off Delagoa, and which will doubtless capture him.

MAUCHBERG OCCUPIED.

London, Sept. 12.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts, dated Pretoria, September 10. "Yesterday Buller occupied Manchberg after considerable resistance. He says the road is too bad for description. He is now moving on Spitzkop. Hildyard reached Griedhorsts yesterday. He met with slight opposition."

IN A TIGHT CORNER.

Johannesburg, Sept. 12.—Col. Dalgetty's third cavalry brigade arrived here from Zeerust, after some sharp fighting for a week. They got into a tight corner at Quaggerfontein, where Zthe Boers captured their ambulance train. The British had twelve killed and thirty wounded. The Boers had five killed and nine wounded. Gen. Little was among those wounded on the British side.

Ottawa, Sept. 12.—The following is a correct list of the men of the Second Battalion, C.M.R., who were reported missing. They were captured by the Boers at Pan Station, and and now reported by cable to have been released. Sergts. Hayne and McCulloch; 83, Pte. Duxbury, Pincher Creek; 69, Pte. B. W. Clendennan, N. W. M. P.; 318, Pte. Abner Shuna, N. W. M. P.; 346, Harold Strong, N. W. M. P.

IN THEIR NEW HOME.

The Canada Life occupy their Handsome New Office

The Times was yesterday shewn through the handsome new offices of the Canada Life Association, which are situated in the Bank of Commerce Building, Hunter street. The offices consist of four apartments, in addition to the spacious entrance. In the front is the private office of Mr. James Vix, the District Manager, and next to which is the cashier's box and general office. Next to this is the office of the accountant, Mr. Ed. Cox. In the rear, and next to the accountant's office, is a spacious apartment, which is being fitted up most elaborately for the President of the Canada Life, Hon. Senator Cox, while in town. The apartments are divided by bevel plate glass partitions, and are very handsome.

The whole fittings are of quartered oak, highly polished, and are the product of the Peterborough Canoe Company, whose reputation for first class work is well known.

The furniture is on a par with the other fittings. Elegant and costly Brussel carpets cover the floors of the offices, while the desks, chairs, &c., are of the very best that can be procured.

The heating will be by steam, the radiating system being used, and the lighting by electricity. A new vault has been put in, and in fact all is new and superb—the best that money can buy. In fact there is nothing to be desired, everything being in keeping with the high standing of this great Canadian Company.

The new district of which Peterborough is the headquarters, extends from Peterborough to Napanee, including Prince Edward county.

WEATHER NOTES.

CHINESE PIRATES.

British Consul at Canton Gives an Interesting Account of Their Methods.

London, Sept. 12.—The Forien Office has issued Consul Scott's report on the trade of Canton for the year 1899. That trade then reached its hitherto highest point as regards both bulk and value of imports and exports alike. The most interesting portion of the report is, however, that dealing with the so-called "piracy" in the Canton waters and on the West river. The usual modus operandi is as follows. A Chinese passenger boat capable of holding some 200 passengers and their personal effects starts on her trip in tow of a steam launch. Either at the point of departure or at some calling station en route a gang of men armed with revolvers go on board of the guise of passengers. If they suspect any supervision is kept or that any examination for arms will be made, they conceal their revolvers in sealed jars supposed to contain pickles or preserved fruits, sometimes addressed to an official or some prominent person further up or down the river, or in some other innocent package, and then, when they arrive at some place where they have arranged to by met by confederates, they simply "hold up" all the passengers. TThe launch temporarily clears out, and the highwaymen "go through" the boat, taking all money, jewellery and valuables, not as w rule goods, and then take their departure—the launch returns to the boat and continues her voyage.

When it is the launch itself which carries passengers the same course is pursued, but the gang then take possession of the launch, compelling the engineers to continue to attend to the engines and either run the launch up some creek, where their confederates are waiting for them, or use he rto make other robberies on launches or passenger boats or junks. But they never hold a launch for more than a few hours, and never dream of making off with her as a prize. She would be utterly useless to them, and would lead to their certain arrest and decapitation. Dick Turpin might as well have stolen a stage coach. There men if pursued and pressed will fire on their pursuers, as has happened more than once, espically in the case of pursuit by the stream pinnace of her Majesty's ship Tweed when one of her crew was wounded—in that case, however, it was the robber's confederates on shore who fired on the pinnace. When the gang have finished with a launch the men usually take a polite farewell of the master and crew, and sometimes even, if they have given no trouble, give them a few dollars.

HACKS FOR PATIENTS

An Ambulance Badly Needed for Hospital Use

Complaints have been made to the Times in regard to the necessity that exists for an ambulance in connection with the local hospitals.

As we understand it, patients suffering from such diseases as typhoid fever, diptheria, &c., are taken to the hospital in hacks, the same hacks being used immediately after by the general public. An instance occurred a short time ago, which was told us by a driver. He was employed to take a child to the hospital, who was suffering with virulent diptheria. On his return he immediately drove a family of a mother and five little ones to the C.P.R. station.

We hope our efficient Medical Health Officer will take the necessary steps to protect the public in this regard.

A SAIL WITH A MANIAC.

Robert Weiskittel, of Cincinnati Has a Thrilling Experience

Mackinaw City, Mich, Sept. 11.—Robert Weiskittel, of Cincinnati, general agent of the New York Life Insurance company, who has been staying on Les Cheneaux Islands, had a thrilling experience, which nearly cost him his life. Mr. Weiskittel made many friends at the hotel where he was stopping, among them being a physician from Flint. One day the doctor extended an invitation to the insurance man to accompany him in a sail on the lake. The only occupants of the vessel were Weiskittel, his host and the sailor who managed it.

When the boat was out in the lake the doctor suddenly jumped from his seat. In each hand he held a revolver and in his eye there was the unmistakable glare of the maniac. He declared he was going to kill the other two men. The sailor, unnoticed by the maniac, turned the boat toward land the prow touched the sand while the doctor was still talking and flourishing his weapons. Then Weiskittel and the sailor jumped out and ran for life.

Four Thousand Men Will Act Against the Boxers.

ATTACK OF DR. MORRISON

He Shows how the Blood of Missionaries C ies for Vengeance While Allies Remain Inactive.

London, Sept. 13, 3.15 a.m.

All the correspondents in China are sending terrible stories of the wholesale massacre of missionaries and native Christians. It is asserted that during July between fifteen and twenty thousand converts were massacred in the north provinces. Large numbers of missionaries are still unaccounted for and small hope is entertained of their escape. Native reports are subjected to the most careful scrutiny, the result being that although there may be some exageration, it is impossible to doubt that in the main they are correct. The horror is intensified by confirmation of the reports that the women are subjected to unspeakable barbarities, being stripped and slowly clubbed to death. This was one of the mildest methods. The Boxers wreaked fiendish vengeance. The newspapers are calling for swift punishment. Fears are expressed lest the Russian Government, which does not encourage missionary propaganda, should prove luke warm in this matter. As the allies were leaving the Forbidden City, August 28, bands of Russians and other civilians with soldiers overran the Imperial apartments, forced drawers and looted everything portable. The British officers compelled seven civilians to disgorge.

London, Sept. 12.—The most sensational feature of the Chinese news is the exposure of Dr. Morrison. The Times' correspondent at Pekin, of the criminal inactivity of the powers and the growing strength of Russia in the Chinese capital. The correspondent strikes a proper note when he points out that the terrible and brutal massacres of harmless people by the Chinese still go unpunished, while the allies halt aimlessly and pander with those responsible for their murders. He also gives valuable information when he points out that Russia, while negotiatin gfor the withdrawal of all the other troops from Pekin, is pushing forward every available man to that place, and will soon have an army there which will outnumber the combined froces of her rivals. From this latter statement there is only one conclusion to be drawn—that Russia's desire for withdrawal is not sincere, and has merely been expressed in order to secure further time to bring up more troops, and that France is aiding her in this intrigue, both of them hoping to be in a position to profit by the presence of a majority of Russian troops when useless and cunning negotiations are concluded and the business which took the allies to China is resumed. The prsent state of affairs in China shows admirably the virtues of a coalition composed of so many members as the one which is now proving so useless and impotent. Everybody who knows anything of Eastern affairs is convinced that the whole business is a farce, which can only be terminated by strong and determined action—first to punish Chinese murderers, and second to compel the Chinese Government, under pain of condign punishment, to prevent a recurrence of such murders. To accomplish these objects demands something more than negotiation; in fact, it demands little short of the conquest of China.

AWFUL SCENES AT PAO-TING-FU

London, Sept. 12.—The Times publishes this morning additional advices from its Pekin correspondent, Dr. Morrison, under date of Aug. 31.

"The censorship, which is under Sir Alfred Gaselee's control, makes it difficult," says the correspondent, "to convey a true picture of the present situation in Pekin. To-day the foreign community was thrilled with horror at the news of the massacre of missionaries at Pao Ting Fu, who were under the protection of Imperial troops. Children were butchered before the eyes of their parents, while women were ravished and carried into captivity. Parents were tortured and murdered.'

'Massacres by red Indians never call in vain for vengeance. Yet the troops remain here inactive.

"Their one thought and wish is to be given work or t obe recalled from Pekin. Surely the civilized world will not suffer this cruel massacre to remain unavenged and make no effort to ascertain the fact of the poor mortyred Christians and white women.

"Since relief of the legation one feature stands conspicuous, the predomi-n ance of Russia and the overmasterin gposition she is now asserting here. The pageant in the Forbidden City on Aug. 28 was a triumphant entry of Russia, followed by the other powers. Russia did the honors, greatly to the chagrin of the other Ministers.

"Russian troops are pouring into Pekin daily. Nineteen hundred came yesterday and 2,800 the day before. Already the Russians outnumber the Japanese, and they will soon outnumber the combined forces. Their stay is assuming every character of permanency. Cossacks daily raid the country and drive the Chinese peasants and laborers in herds through the deserted and dismantled city. setting them to work to build their military camp.

MARCHING AGAINST BOXERS.

Tien Tsin, Sept. 8. via Shanghai, Sept 11.—A body of 4,000 allied troops marched to-day against the cities of Sheng Hae Sien and Tilie, where the presence of Boxers threatens the Tien Tsin region. The advance was made in two columns for the purpose of flanking towns. Gen. Dorward personally commanded the expedition. The Japanese siege guns were taken with the expedition, which included a large force of cavalery.

One regiment of German cavalry, and one British battery have arrived.

PREPARING FOR THE PLAGUE.

New York Board of Health Will Build an Airtight Laboratory for Investigation.

New York, Sept 12.—Bubonic plague germs are t obe cultured here. Fearing that the scourge may some day reach New York, the Board of Health has prepader plans for a bacteriological laboratory in which to study the disease. The structure will be built at a cost of $25,000.

Virulent in their nature, the bubonic germs must be cultured with the greatest care. The necessary bacteriological laboratory will resemble from the outside a "bomb proof" more than anything else. It will be constructed of steel, with solid asphalt walls. There will be no chimney or windows. The lighting will be by electricity.

The building outside and in will be impervious to water and vermin. Not a mouse or fly will be able to enter the germ filled rooms. The walls, being of concrete, will be abel to receive daily disinfection and a washing. There will be a process of disinfection for all drainage. Every precaution will be taken to safeguard the workers in the laboratory.

Several death have occurrde from plague among the laboratory workers in Lisbon and Vienna during the last two years. Having these fatalties in mind the Board of Health did not regard any bacteriological work in relation to the plague as safe in the general laboratories throughout the city.

TO MURDER KINGS.

Foul Anarchist Plot Discovered of wholesale Assassination

Paris, Sept. 13.—There is great activity among the French secret police and certain notorious anarchists are being closely watched.

Emissaries of Malatesta have arrived here from London, and a number of Italians from Paterson, N.J., are also here and in conference.

The government believes that a plot is on foot to kill every crowned head in Europe.

Secret service men have evidence that ten anarchists have been assigned to assassinate each potentate to lessen the chances of escape.

A special effort will be made to murder King Victor Emmanuel III of Italy for the sake of the moral effect this would have following so closely on Humbert's death.

A despatch from Berlin says the Kaiser wears a shirt of mail now and his sleep is troubled by nightmares, due to the fear of assassination.

King Leopold of Belgium it is reported is likely to abdicate owing to his terror of anarchists. He is being tracked by assassins.

King George of Greece is one of the monarchs marked for death.

The Late John Spence.

In yesterday's issue we published a brief notice of the death of Mr. John Spence. Deceased was 83 years of age. He was born in Scotland, and prior to his departure for Canada 32 years ago had held a position as manager of one of the largest spinning mills in the United Kingdom, situated at Glasgow, Scotland. Here he went into partnership with Mr. Robert Brodie in the construction and operation of the first Auburn Woollen Mills, they selling out at the end of a couple of years tothe present company. Mr. Spence then retired and has never taken any part in public affairs. He was known as an upright and conscientious man, careful and straightforward in all his actions, abhorring anything he came in contrast with that was the reverse. For some ten years he has not enjoyed what might be called robust health, and his vatality declined with the lapse of years. He is survived by a wife, one daughter, Mrs. J. L. Brown, resident in the Indian Territory, U. S. A. and three sons, John, of Erie, Pa.; William, of Chicago, Ill., and D. Spence, engaged in mining on the west coast of Africa.

The funeral will leave the family resi dence, Bonacord-st., this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, to Little Lake cemetery.

Died Very Suddenly.

Death came with great suddenness yesterday to George Wright, an aged resident of the town, while at work at the corner of George and Barnardo-sts. Wright was engaged in shovelling out a drain at the west side of Baranardo-st., when he was seen to suddenly fall forward. The men gathered aroung and found their fellow-workman unconscious, in fact his life was ebbing slowly away. In response to an immediate summons Drs. McGrath and Eastwood appeared, but Wright was dead. For some days lately the deceased had complained of a pain in the vicinity of his heart. He did not cease work, being generally employed with the Electric Light & Power Co., but for a few days had been engaged upon the corporation. The cause of death was pronounced by the physicians to be heart failure. Deceased was about 65 years of age, was twice married, and leaves a wife and grown up family.

How Two Men Travelled on a Ticket for a Man and His Wife.

"It was a slick trick, and it worked," said a well-known conductor who runs in here, in telling of an incident of his last trip down to this place.

"Just before we left Dallas," said he, "I noticed a young lady and two young men get on the train and when I came through a little later to colect the tickets, found them sitting together in a double seat. When I stopped at their seat the man sitting next to the aisle handed me two tickets, one for a man and wife and a single ticket to Galveston. I took them, thinking nothing of it, but on passing back and forth through the car several times after that I noticed that the man and wife did not seem to be getting along very well together; in fact, their actions toward each other would lead one to believe they were perfect strangers, and during the day their actions became more and more noticeable until my suspicions began to be aroused, but I held my peace until almost here, when, finding the one who had handed me the tickets alone in the smoking compartment. I asked him if something was not wrong, whereupon he 'fessed up' and frankly told me the whole story.

"He said he and the young man sitting opposite to his when he handed me the tickets were from Kansas City, who having lost their positions in that city, had started to come south to see if they could find something to do down here in Texas, and that they had gotten as far as Dallas when their money gave out, and having been assured of getting positions in Galveston, wanted to come on here. One of them by getting in a day and a half's work, had made $3. but as that would not bring them here they were in as bad a plight as before. The next day however, they happened to drop into a ticket broker's office, but the only thing he had in the way of tickets to Galveston was one for a man and wife. After consulting with each other they hit upon a plan and decided to take the ticket, paying their $3 for it. They then went to the depot and hung around the ticket window until they saw a young woman buy a ticket for Galveston, and followed, boarded the train with and deliberately sat down beside her, so when I came through the man sitting beside her politely took the ticket from her hand and passed it over to me, thus giving the impression that she was his wife, and in this manner the two adventurers came here.—Galveston Daily News.

Yearly Cost of Soldiers.

The yearly cost to the state of the American soldier is about $1,875. This individual sum is largely in excess of the cost of European troops. Great Britain, which has the smallest army of all the great powers, expends, roughly, $465 on each of her soldiers; Austria, with a war footing of over a million men, expends $225 per man, and Germany and France, the two military powers of Europe with the biggest armies, are equal with an individual outlay of $215. Italy, with the second smallest army, spends $190 on every soldier, she maintains; and Russia's cost is estimated at $185. In 1886 each soldier cost the United States $1,200, so that the lapse of fourteen years exhibits no small difference in national cost per man.

WIVES OF PRESIDENTS.

Personal Appearance of the Women Who Have Ruled in White House.

Of mistresses of the White House one of the most popular was Mrs. James K. Polk. Like Mrs. Cleveland, she was a brunette, and of fine presence; it was often remarked that not a crowned head in Europe could queen it more royally than the wife of the republican President. Poets penned verses in her honor, and on the last Sunday of her stay in Washington a clergyman addressed her from the pulpit. She was treated with great distinction, and after leaving the White House was visited every New Year's by the Legislature in a body.

Mrs. George Washington also had dark hazel eyes and brown hair. She was not a beauty, but she had a good form, rather below middle weight, and her manners were frank and engaging. She dressed plainly and at a ball given in her honor she wore a simple russet gown and white handkerchief about her neck. One of her dresses which she herself manufactured was of cotton striped with silk, which she obtained from ravelings of brown silk stockings and old crimson chair covers.

Mrs. Monroe was considered a beauty. She was tall and gracefully formed, polished and attractive in society. Mrs. John Adams was never beautiful, but she was of imposing appearance and very intellectual.

Mrs. John Quincy Adams was famed for her charming manners, and Mrs. Andrew Jackson for her amiable temper and kind heart. Mrs. Martin Van Buren, who died before her husband became President, was a pretty woman with modest, unassuming manners and gentle disposition.

The first Mrs. Tyler was one of the belles of eastern Virginia, and was most attractive in her striking loveliness of person and character. The second Mrs. Tyler was the first woman to marry a President. Before her marriage she was, for the one season she spent there, the belle of Washington.

A sparkling brunette was Mrs. William Henry Harrison. She was very handsome, with a face full of animation, and her health, which was robust, added a glow to her features, which increased her charms. "Upon her countenance," it is recorded, "nature had been profusely liberal."

Mrs. Thomas Jefferson was remarkable for her beauty. Her complexion was brilliant; her large, expressive eyes of "the richest tinge of auburn." A little above medium weight, she was slightly and delicately formed. She danced, sang, played the spinnet and harpsichord and rode with great skill.

Mrs. James Madison was a pretty, buxom woman, with a smile and a pleasant word for every one. She had regular features and sparkling eyes.

Mrs. Zachary Taylor was a quiet woman, but had great strength of character and the true spirit of the American heroine, enduring patiently privation incident to life on the frontier, where her husband, as Major Taylor, was stationed. She had no ambition beyond making her home happy.

A blonde of rare beauty was Mrs. Millard Fillmore, with a skin of dazzling whiteness and auburn hair. She was quite tall with a fine figure and of commanding presence. She is ranked with the wives of the two Adamses as a learned woman, and it was through her that her husband asked for and obtained an appropriation of Congress to buy books for the White House. Up to that time there had been a Bible there, and little more.

Another woman of rare beauty was Mrs. Franklin Pierce. She also had many accomplishments. She was very refined and quiet, shunning society.

Mrs. Abraham Lincoln as a girl was very attractive, and she had many suitors. When she became the mistress of the White House she was "fair and forty." That she was the successor of the popular and accomplished Miss Lane was not a point in her favor. At the first levee she appeared in pink silk, decollete, short-sleeved dress and a floral headdress, which ran down to her waist, and destroyed what comeliness simplicity might have given her.

Mrs. Andrew Jackson possessed the beauty of face and form which rendered her mother one of the most beautiful of women. Mrs. Grant was a blonde, of delicate figure, rather below middle stature. Mrs. Hayes was of very attractive appearance. Mrs. Garfield was noted for her tact, and her husband one said that he never had to explain away any words of his wife.

Mrs. Arthur, who died before her husband became President, was known as "the beautiful Miss Herndon with the marvellous voice" before her marriage.

Mrs. Harrison was fair as a girl and possessed a blonde style of beauty, which also belongs to Mrs. McKinley.

How Congress Spring Was Named.

When John Taylor Gilman, a member of Congress, visited the log houses which chiefly constituted Saratoga in its early history, he was accompanied one day on a hunting ramble by a young son of the woodsman with whom he boarded. When they returned to the cabin the boy enthusiastically shouted, "Oh, ma, we've found a new spring!" "Who found it?" he was asked. Turning to the distinguished lawmaker the little fellow admiringly exclaimed: "Why, the Congress!" And to this day the name has clung to one of the most celebrated of the springs which made the place a sanitary resort long before it became the seat of summer fashion.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Early Promise.

"I'm going to be proud of that small boy of mine one of these days," he exclaimed, earnestly.

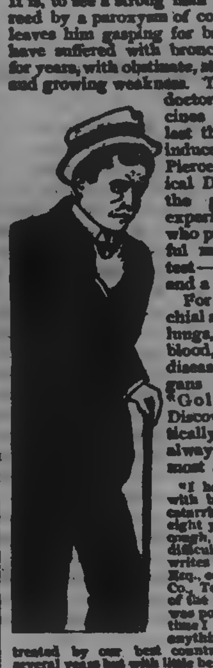
"Is he talented?"

"No. He's going to be a business man. I told him last week if he'd be a good boy I'd take him to the circus. Instead of taking me right up, he thought the proposition over for a minute, and then asked me if I thought it was a good circus."—Washington Star.

At the Central School

A schoolmaster gave his pupils a talk on patriotism at the Central School the other day. He pointed out that the high motives which moved the volunteers to leave their homes and fight for their country. The schoolmaster noticed that one boy did not pay attention to the illustration, and as a test question he asked him:—"What motives took the volunteers to the war?" The boy was puzzled for a moment; then, remembering the public "send off" to the local reserves and volunteers at the railway station, he replied—"Locomotives, sir."

A SORRY SIGHT



It is, to see a strong man shaken like a reed by a paroxysm of coughing, which leaves him gasping for breath. People have suffered with bronchial affections for years, with obstinate, stubborn cough, and growing weakness. They have tried doctors and medicines in vain. At last they have been induced to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, with the general result experienced by all who put this wonderful medicine to the test—help at once, and a speedy cure.

For coughs, bronchial affections, weak lungs, spitting of blood, and other diseases of the organs of respiration, "Golden Medical Discovery" is practically a specific. It always helps; it almost always cures.

"I had been troubled with bronchitis and catarrh of the head for eight years; had severe cough, and at times great difficulty in breathing," writes J. W. Howerton, Esq., of Bigfall, Hancock Co., Tenn. "A portion of the time my appetite was poor and part of the time I was unable to do anything. I had been treated by our best country physicians for several years but with little benefit. I had been reading about your medicine for a long time but hadn't much faith in it. Last spring concluded I would try it, and before I had taken one-third of a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I began to mend. I continued taking it until I had taken several bottles. Took Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets also. Now I feel like a new man, and can do as hard a day's work as any one."

Took off His Arm Without Touching It.

A brief telegram the other day recited that one James McMullen had lost an arm in a wringing machine in a laundry at Hutchinson. Here is the remarkable story related about the accident by the Hutchinson News:

"McMullen stopped at the wringer and held his hands over it to dry them. He got one hand too low so that the air suction caught it, and his arm from the elbow down was taken off as by a miracle. The wringer is a large circular iron affair, with a smaller bowl inside it in which the clothes are placed. The smaller apartment is perforated with holes upon the sides, and the whole thing revolves at the rate of several thousand revolutions a minute. The effect is that the air currents within the wringer are as terrific in their power as the centre section of a Kansas cyclone. When a cyclone strikes a brick building and hurls it to atoms the force seems appalling and incomprehensible. The accident to Mr. McMullen was equally mystifying. The instant his arm came into contact with the current of air it was parted at the elbow. One part lay on the clothes that were in the machine and the other dangled from his shoulder. There was nothing about the machine to give him even a scratch.

"The nerve exhibited by McMullen was wonderful. 'It never touched me,' was the first thing he said. The girls in the room were screaming and McMullen calmly informed them that it was not his head that was taken off and told them to be still. He was taken to a hospital and his arm was amputated close to the shoulder."

Dan Rice's First Circus Tumble.

"Did you ever hear of the joke which got Dan Rice, the most famous of all the circus clowns, his first job under the canvas?" asked an old-timer.

"No—what was it?"

"Dan, while still in his teens, applied to a circus manager for a position.

"'What salary do you want?' asked the manager.

"'Eight hundred dollars a night,' replied Dan.

"'Tell you what I'll do,' said the manager.

"'Well, speak quick,' returned Dan, 'I'm losing time.'

"'I'll give you $4 a week.'

"'All right,' said Dan. 'It's a go."

No girl can afford, either for her own surest happiness or for the comfort of mind of him whom she marries, to wed a young man during the formative period of his life, which is between twenty and twenty-five. And she who withholds from a young man her consent to marriage until he has reached the first year of the beginning of wisdom is a mighty sensible little body, and acts in a manner which she will never have cause to regret as long as God gives her and her husband life.—Edward Bok, in the Ladies' Home Journal.

FAIR FANTINEKILL.

[S. E. Hampton.]

Fair Fantinekill, what boyhood scenes
Return again in Manhood's dreams?
Each pathway through the wooded dell
Some tale of youthful pleasures tell.
Here Nature's lavish hand is seen
In richest hues—in greenest green,
And ev'ry little rippling rill
Holdeth a power to charm and thrill
The after years we feed upon
When youth and all but hope is gone.
Sweet memory floods my heart at will Repeating o'er Fair Fantinekill.

Thou nestling valley gem, walled in
By mountains tall—by mountains grim,
Each frowning, hoary head is dearth
In praises fitting to thy worth.
Fantinekill, fairy queen of brooks,
Thy small cascades were ideal nooks
Before the vandal woodman tore
The leafy giants from your shore.
Grim solace now, no more attacks
Can come from desecrating axe—
Dispoiled yet murm'ring sweetly still,
And still I love thee, Fantinekill.

The hazy time of life's ne'er dim
If but we turn our eyes within,
For there we findeth no decay
Among the mem'ries laid away.
Beneath the dust and grime of years
More oft the sun creeps out than tears
More oft a deed of excellence
Stands side by side with recompense,
And spectral shadows fade and flee
When youth returns in memory—
Youth and hope and every thrill
That clustered 'round thee, Fantinekill.

The brooklet ages may defy
With voice attuned to song and sigh;
It's life must be as lives of men,
The past will ne'er return again.
Yet man, when in the twilight age
Turns dreamy eyes for inward gaze,
And feasting, finds that shadows lie
Too deep for retrospective eye.
'Tis sunkissed hours that mem'ry brings—
Like rose bereft of thorns and stings—
Thrice welcome ere to heart whose thrill
Responsive is to Fantinekill.

ROOM FOR TWO.

Mrs. Getty's coupe was at the curb in front of a florist's establishment on Fifth avenue, near Forty-third street. Her coachman held the coupe door open, for at the moment the lady was issuing from the shop. Across the way was an empty handsom cab waiting for patrons. There was rather more than the ordinary bustle of traffic in the famous thoroughfare. Automobiles rolled silently and swiftly, stages lumbered slowly and noisily, and all manner of private vehicles were on parade, making it a matter of no small difficulty for pedestrians to cross from one sidewalk to the other. The clock on the tower of the Grand Central station near by told all who cared to note that it was five minutes past 2.

Just as Mrs. Getty was stooping to enter her coupe a man came hurriedly up Forty-third street from the direction of the Grand Central, took in the scene on the avenue with a quick glance, jumped into the waiting hansom and pushed open the little trap in the top. There was a bill in his hand. The driver promptly possessed himself of the bill while he bent his head to hear his customer's orders.

"Go to No. 347 West Forty-fourth street as fast as you can," said the man; "there'll be somebody there to tell you where next. Don't let anything whatever delay you."

"All right, sir," answered the cabby, dropping the trap and jerking the reins.

The horse started at once, and at the same moment the passenger got out. Cabby saw him go, and wondered, but with the bill still crumpled in his hand, and with the passenger's struct injunction to let nothing delay him ringing in his ears, he drove on, and the jam of vehicles was so great that he could not even turn his head to see what became of the passenger.

"It's a good job, anyway," thought cabby, thinking of the bill, "and if the fellow at No. 347 is as generous as this one, I'll get that new coat I've needed so long."

The man who had left the cab so shortly after engaging it risked his neck by running in front of a stage, dodged an auto and darted across the avenue, making as straight as circumstances would permit for Mrs. Getty's coupe. She had nestled into a comfortable position and the coachman was climbing to his box when the man opened the coupe door, entered and pulled the door to quickly, but noiselessly.

"Say nothing, madam," he said sharply, "or I shall be compelled to resort to violence to quiet you."

Mrs. Getty shrank, terrified, against the side of the coupe, her cheeks blanched, her lips parted and her eyes distended. The man sank upon the seat beside her and breathed heavily. Then the coachman, all unmindful of what had taken place, spoke to his horse and the vehicle started.

The episode had attracted no attention from the sidewalks, for the pedestrians, intent on their own affairs could not see what went on in the roadway. It may be that a number of persons in passing conveyances saw a part of it, but they comprehended not and cared not. So when, a few seconds later, a number of men came rushing excitedly up from the Grand Central station, such information as they could gain by hurried inquiry sent them speeding, some on foot, some in cabs, down West Forty-fourth street.

So soon as the coupe was in motion, the man turned to Mrs. Getty with a deprecatory smile, in which there was a gleam of satisfaction, and said:

"I am truly sorry to intrude on you in this unmannerly way, madam, but there's room for two here, and you'll have to endure my company for a bit."

"I can easily attract the attention of my coachman," said Mrs. Getty, resolutely, "and have him put you out and into the hands of the police."

"As she finished speaking she raised a hand to rap on the window.

"Don't madam," exclaimed the man, appealingly, and he help up a hand too, not in threat, but as a gesture of entreaty.

At sight of it Mrs. Getty sank again into her corner and stared at him, once again, with speechless horror. Around the wrist he held up was a steel band, and from it depended a fragment of chain.

"I told you I should have to shock you again," he said quietly, "but you know the worst now. Yes, I am a convict. Ten minutes ago I was on my way to Sing Sing. You may not know that convicts are always taken up on the train that leaves the Grand Central at five minutes past two. The train has gone and I am here. With your assistance I shall be a free man within an hour."

"No! No!" she protested, faintly, "you shall not make me a party to your crime." And again she made as if she would rap on the glass.

"One moment, madam," he interposed, a little sternly, and as he displayed once more that steel band and the broken chain, her resolution gave way to helpless terror. "I have committed no crime," he continued, impressively. "My life has been venturesome, colored with many an episode that I regret, but before heaven I am innocent of the charge upon which I have been convicted and sentenced. I can prove my innocence if I can be free but a few days. To go to prison now would mean the destruction of my only hope of clearing my name, unless that might happen after I had rotted for years in a cell. You are listening, madam, and I will be brief, for time is pressing. Convict though I am in the eyes of the law, I have faithful friends who know my innocence. They have helped me thus far on my escape. One of them managed to supply me with a pair of super-hardened steel pincers. Another thrust money into my hand during the moment of confusion at the railroad station. I was manacled in the usual way to a deputy sheriff. When we were about to board the train I nipped the chain that bound me to my guard and broke away. My friends made a diversion that gave me a slight start, and here I am. Now you know everything except my plans for establishing my innocence. Those I have not time to tell you, and you might not understand them. Liberty I must have. You will not give me up. Pity me, madam, and save me from the unmerited degradation of a felon's life."

"What do you expect me to do?" she asked.

"Have your man drive to the Twenty-third street ferry," he replied coolly, "and cross the river. I shall then be not only in the Pennsylvania railroad station but in another State, and those facts together will give me all the time I need."

"I cannot do it," she said. "It is not right for me to interfere with the law. In a moment my man will stop. You may then go out, and I will not ask him to summon an officer. That is all I can do, and it is more than I ought."

Even then the coupe was driven to the curb preparatory to stopping.

"Madam," said the convict, hopelessly, "it shall be as you say, and within ten minutes from the time you leave me I shall again be a prisoner."

If he had used threats or shown desperation, the outcome might have been different. To this day Mrs. Getty is puzzled to explain her course to her own complete satisfaction. When the coachman opened the coupe door he started a little at sight of a stranger but, like a well-bred servant, said nothing.

"Wilson," said Mrs. Getty, with astonishing calmness, "my friend is in a hurry to catch a train at the Pennsylvania station. Go over by the Twenty-third street ferry as quickly as possible."

Wilson bowed and closed the door.

"You are an angel!" whispered the convict.

He said nothing more for a time, but busied himself in winding a handkerchief around his manacled wrist.

"Unfortunately," he remarked at length, "I lost my pincers in the scuffle and so can't get rid of this just at present. May I ask one more favor of you? Fasten this bandage with a pin, please, and it will then appear that I have injured my wrist and the sign of my disgrace will not be visible."

He held his hand toward her, and Mrs. Getty, wondering if she were under a hypnotic spell, complied with his request. He thanked her and remained silent until the coupe was driven from the ferryboat to the platform of the railroad station on the New Jersey side of the river.

"Thank you once again," he said then, as he alighted. "If I might know who has assisted——"

"No," she interrupted; "I never want to know more than this."

"You are probably quite right," he responded. "Good-bye," and lifting his hat he went rapidly toward the ticket office.

In the next day's papers Mrs. Getty read long accounts of the sensational escape of a noted forger on his way to Sing Sing prison. There was a lot of detail about the pursuit of an empty hansom cab, but not a word about the coupe in which there proved to be ample room for two.

A Feeling of Resentment.

"Did you do anything to celebrate Shakespeare's birthday this week?"

"I should say not," answered the man with the big diamond and the fierce mustache. "A man who wrote those box office frosts like 'Macbeth' and 'King Lear' ought to be glad he's livin' without askin' for any celebrations."—Washington Star.

The Reason.

"Say, Bill, yer right in style, ain't yer?"

"Yep, an' it's lucky it is de style ter have yer pants turned up—now I kin wear me fadder's widout me mudder cuttin' 'em down."

Something of a Hint.

"Stolen kisses are the sweetest," he said.

"How I dislike a man who doesn't practise what he preaches," she returned.

Many Peterborough citizens intend going down to hear them.

A Disgrace

The authorities of the town should be ashamed of themselves for the condition of the cattle pens on the market square. Yesterday cattle were compelled to stand for hours in several inches of dirty water. The floors of the pens were laid altogether too low, the result being that after every rain storm, there is a pool of water, which soon becomes stagnant, and fouls the atmosphere.

An Ashburnham Lawsuit

Ashburnham will probably be called on to defend an action for damages. It will be remembered that the bridge over the raceway on Elizabeth street, recently gave way, percipitating a man named John Irwin and his team of horses into the water below. Irwin was badly shaken up, and the horses and wagon were injured. The Council are now considering the matter, and no doubt will be able to effect a peaceful settlement.

A Left-Handed Compliment

A certain dentist was the recipient of a left-handed Scotch compliment a day or two ago which singularly well exhibits the Scotch character. The Scotchman called for the purpose of having a big double tooth pulled, and by way of preface said—"I would sooner be pounded wi' a club than have you tooth pulled." Why?" asked the dentist. "Because," said Scotty, "it'll hurt." The dentist said, "Man, I can give you gas and you'll not feel it." "Well, I'll take the gas." While the dentist was preparing to administer the anaesthetic, Scotty began to count his money. The dentist said, "Oh, you needn't pay till after." Scotty says "I'm no' that, I thocht I'd just count the cawsh before I went to sleep."

Crop Prospects

The estimate of the crops in Ontario for 1900, as prepared by the bureau of industries, is one of the most satisfactory nature. In all standard grains the yield per acre is reported to be above the average for the past eighteen years, and with the exception of peas, which, owing to the pea weevil, are not as largely cultivated as on the average for eighteen years, the average of the various crops has either increased or remained about the same as last year. Theyield of the various grains this year above the average per acre for eighteen years is as follows—Fall wheat, 1 bushel; spring wheat, 2 1-2; barley, 2.2; oats, 2; peas, 1. beans, 2.1 bushels.

Next Year's Council

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—As the time is rapidly approaching when a new Council will have to be chosen, I venture to ask you to publish a few words from a working man.

I think it is time for a change. Not a single man in the Council has had the backbone to stand up and move to do away with the present methods of street work. We have a high-priced engineer who is only ornamental, but not a man is there on the board to say let us dispense with his services.

I understand that several of the present members propose to offer themselves for re-election. I hope they will, so that they will have a chance to see what the working men, at least, think of them.

What we need in Peterborough is a clean, progressive Council, that will lop off the rotten branches that so retard the growth of the town and keep our taxes away up.

What I suggest is that we bring out nine men and a Mayor who will pledge themselves to radical changes in the direction of economy, and for the purpose I understand a document is to be prepared, setting forth the changes desired, and to which candidates will be asked to subscribe.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, &c.,

A WORKING MAN.

A Bread By-law

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I understand that a new bread by-law is to be passed by the Council. In this connection let me say a word. At the last meeting of the Council I noticed Aldermen Denne and Dawson were anxious to present the bakers' side of the argument, while the interests of the long-suffering people were not represented. As everybody knows, there is a combination amongst bakers to keep up the price of bread, and while bread is from 8 to 10 cents in many places, per four pound loaf, it is 12 cents in Peterborough. Notwithstanding this the bakers want to run the Council as well, so as to get a by-law that will suit them.

I hope, Mr. Editor, for the sake of the hundreds of poor people who are forced to contribute unduly to the bread combination, that the Council will make a stringent by-law, and that they will make it the duty of the police to make periodical visit to the bakeries of the town.

Thanking you Mr. Editor, I am, &c.,

A MECHANIC.

The Roadways

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I see that many people object to the granolithic walks being placed outside the trees. There are many reasons, Mr. Editor, why the walks should be kept close to the fences, and inside the trees.

In the first place our roadways are already narrow enough. The whole roadway is only 66 feet, and when the sidewalks next the fences are taken off, there is only about 40 feet left.

Then again, between the trees and the fences is the natural place for the walks. In summer there is shade, and in winter some protection from the fierce winds.

I notice on hot days, where the walks are outside the trees, many people take the grass, on account of the shade. This, of course, destroys the lawns, and is a source of constant annoyance.

There are other reasons, Mr. Editor, which I could give, but the above are, I am persuaded, sufficient. I hope we have seen the last of placing sidewalks outside the trees.

ONE INTERESTED.

—The Times is indebted to Mr. H. P. Kennedy, who placed a small motor at our disposal to tide us over while our own was being repaired.

—Contractor James Bogue was on a steam launch at Ragged Rapids, Orillia, a few days ago, when the vessel capsized. James reached shore safely along with the others.

ROSY TEACHERS

Look Better in the School Room Than the Sallow Sort.

Young folks naturally like comely objects, and a good looking, healthy teacher can do vastly more with pupils, everything else considered, than the skinny, dyspeptic teacher can. The instructor in Latin and mathematics in a young ladies' seminary at Macon, Ga., had an experience worthy the attention of any teacher.

She kept running down a little more each year until finally a genuine case of nervous postration set in and she was confined to her bed, for eight months, a perfect wreck, physically and mentally. She and her friends thought it was due to overwork, but she now knows it was due to improper food.

Of course the physicians were called in, but there is almost nothing that can be done in such cases, except to rely on well selected food and proper care. She was put upon Grape-Nuts, all medicines, also tea, coffee, and iced drinks were taken away. She had Postum Food Coffee once a day. The larger part of her food was Grape-Nuts, for this food is made with special reference to rebuilding the gray matter in the brain and nerve centres.

The lady says. "I had been reduced to 95 pounds in weight when I began using Grape-Nuts. The new food was so delicious and strengthening that I felt new life at once. I have now developed into a perfectly healthy, happy, stout woman, weighing 135 pounds, the greatest weight I ever attained, and have a wonderfully clear, fresh, rosy complexion, instead of the sallow, bilious hue of the past.

"I never now have a symptom of dyspepsia nor any other ache or ail. Am strong physically and I particularly notice the strength of mind. I never exerience the tired, weary feeling after a hard day's labor that used to appear. My brain seems as clear and active at night as it was in the morning and I am doing twice the amount of work I ever did. Don't use my name in public, please, but I will answer inquiries." THE RICHEST NATION

IF DIVIDED EQUALLY WHAT EACH ONE'S SHARE WOULD BE.

An American Family Would Own 155 Acres of Land and 12 1-2 Feet of Railroad—It Would Pay But $6.68 a Year in Taxation—Only 60 Cents for Our Navy.

If the Government of the United States be considered merely as a business firm, its stockholders just now are pretty well to do. Their wealth is very large, considering the number there are of them. The expenses of carrying on trade under the Stars and Stripes seems small when devided, and their debts are trifling indeed.

Not many years ago it was said that Uncle Sam had land enough to give every one a farm. In theory this is true to-day. If all Territories in the United States, not even including Alaska and our so-called new possessions, were to be divided, there would be a farm of thirty one acres for each one. Every man, woman and child in the country would own this much real estate.

Now, since the average American family consists of five people, there would be 155 acres to the family. In making these calculations the population is estimated at 70,000,000. The area of the United States is 3,600,000 square miles.

Not all of this land is good enough to "farm it" on, but most of it can be made good enough by Yankee ingenuity.

The value of all the real estate in America is $39,544,233,000. These figures fail to give any definite idea. They are too big. Let us suppose, however, that pure socialism prevailed and that this enormous wealth was equally divided. The share of every individual would be $564.50 The share of every average family would be $2,824.50. And this does not include personal property, which would greatly increase the sum. These figures are by far the highest to be found in any country in the world. In Great Britain, for instance, each man is a land owner owning to the extent of about $190. British house property would give a share of but about $300 to every man.

Practically, in Great Britain there are few small land-owners, or none. A laboring man who owns his cottage is a rarity; one who owns the land on which it stands almost an impossibility.

The taxes which the individual pays seem trifling. All the taxes last year were $471,365,140. The share of each individual was but $6.73. Britain's taxes during the same period amounted to £2 10s. each, or nearly twice that of America. It must also be considered that our rate was unusually high owing to the expenses of the war. A good deal of complaint is heard of the extravagance of the Government, but the share of the individual is small. The total expenses of the Government last year if divided would have placed a burden of $6.68 on the individual. This is a share of the sum of $487,303,000.

The individual contributions to the various departments also sound curious in view of the great things which have been accomplished. We are all proud of our navy, which during the past year has been larger and more expensive than ever before. But each individual was only required to contribute just sixty cents to maintain this department and our great fleets of warships. The total expense, to be sure, was $48,000,000. The maintenance of the army last year was one of the most expensive items the Government has ever called upon to meet. It cost us just $80,000,000. The war with the Philippines and the maintenance of an army in Cuba and Porto Rico, besides the regular expense of the department, could be met, however, if each individual contributed $1.14. The expense of running the entire Government cost each of us exactly $1.92.

The United States, as every one knows, is the richest nation in the world. Our bonded debt is $1,032,000,000. Each of us is in debt on this score just $14.74. Looked at in this way our national debt, large as it seems, is a trifling thing. The real estate holdings of the individual, according to this distribution, are alone worth more than forty times his indebtedness. It is no wonder that the world considers loaning money to America a good risk.

Our country is the land of railroads. As every one knows we have more railroads by far than any other country in the world. The mileage of the United States is 190,000. The share of the individual is 13½ feet of rail. Still another way to state our great wealth is to calculate the amount of gold and silver which would come to us if all were equally divided. Each of us would have $70 in silver bullion as his share and $13.50 in solid gold.

A Story From Gibraltar.

During the war stories in plenty have been current of the strategems and treachery which have imposed upon British officers charged with very serious responsibilities. Changing the venue, we have the following story from Gibraltar. Some time ago a consumptive German gentleman arrived there with introductions from influential people in England. The governor and other officials received him hospitably and every consideration possible was shown him on account of his health, but, of course, he could not be granted permission, as he requested, to go to the top of the rock for the sake of the purer air, as there is a regulation that "foreigners" are on no account to be permitted to walk about the top of the rock." Further acquaintance, however, with the German gentleman, through the medium of dinners and other social functions, resulted in a relaxation of the strict rule, and he was granted a pass. The result of the visit is now to be seen at the German war office, which is in possession of the most perfect plans from photos of all the works and defenses of Gibraltar.—Saturday Review.

SEPTEMBER ADVERTISING.

Business men differ as to which "ads" are the most productive of results. One heavy advertiser makes a special effort to attract custom in September, when so many people return from the sea shore, mountains and country with new energy, ready to take up neglected enterprises; when the children are to be got ready for school, and when preparations are to be made for winter occupations and pleasures. His purpose is to induce people to get into the habit of dealing with him. Everybody reads the Times.

MR. BUTCHER'S COMPLAINT.

Mr. J. Butcher addressed the Council, asking for information in regard to water by-laws. He had made application for permission to use water for lavatory in his house, and was informed that he could not do so unless he had a tap installed in his house for other domestic use. Mr. Butcher said he had no kick coming, save against the compulsory provision whereby he should first have to pay $9 in order to install a $6 privilege. He was willing to pay for and buy a metre. He considered it hard that while pipes were already laid for lawn services he should be soaked the full amount.

It was explained to Mr. Butcher that the Council could not change the cost in this case unless it agreed to pay the portion he objected to. The Reeve said he would interview the Water Co. in regard to the installation of a water metre in Mr. Butcher's house.

WILL FIGHT IT OUT.

Moved by Mr. Smith, seconded by Mr. Pollock, re John Irwin.—That the clerk be instructed to notify Messrs. Stratton & Hall that the corporation of Ashburnham does not consider they are liable on the ground that no gross negligence can be shown on their part, and that if a writ be issued the solicitor be instructed to defend the case.—Carried.

The Council adjourned.

MELDRUM'S MILL BURNED.

Fire in Paris, Ont., Destroys a Citizen's Property

Mr. W. H. Meldrum's flour mills and electric light station at Paris was destroyed by fire on Tuesday night. The fire originated in the flour mills, and on account of the gale, the flames soon spread, and in an incredibly short time the entire business portion of the town was in ashes.

Mr. Meldrum, who is a resident of Peterborough, purchased the Paris property soon after his Peterborough mills were burned, some four or five years ago. He had the mills remodelled and modernized, and was doing a good business. The loss is, we understand, covered by insurance.

Russians Cut a Party of Boxers to Pieces and Americans Defeat Imperial Troops.

POWERS WILL NOT WITHDRAW FROM PEKIN.

Boxers and Imperial Troops Are Still Under Arms and Missionaries are Being Murdered—Prince Ching Held by the Japanese—Murderer Arrested.

London, Sept. 14. According to the Daily Mail's St. Petersburg correspondent, who claims to be able to indicate the exact diplomatic situation, the attitude of the United States is so indefinte that there is no absolute certainity whether Washington will accept or reject the Russian proposal. Germany according to the same authority, was the first power to reply. She based the refusal principally upon the ground that withdrawal would lead to further trouble, and the massacre of thousands of other converts.

Russia and France, says the correspondent are finding their positon awkward and are not likely to hurry to quite Pekin en-masse. The Japanese General Gurviaguchi telegraphed to his Government from Pekin. Sept. 6th says that the Emperor's Chamberlain had just arrived. This probably means that some signs are on foot for the return of the Emperor. Other Japanese advices report that Pekin is returning to its normal condition and order is being restored. The Chinese refugees are coming back, and foreign resident are leaving to recuperate.

London, Sept 14, 4 a.m. No further light is thrown this morning upon Li Hung Chang's intended movements. The Times has an interesting despatch from Pekin, dated Sept. 4, which says in part, that Russia has decided to withdraw her legation from Pekin, leaving a purely military command. An official announcement of this is expected to-day. The other powers will also presumably withdraw their legations, leaving Pekin under the military control of the allies, during the winter at least. At a meeting of the generals, the Russian commander announced that Russia would maintain 15,000 troops during the winter. The German commander said that Germany would keep the same number, and the Japanese commander announced that Japan would have 22,000. The British general was not in a position to make an announcement.

ARRESTED THE ASSASIN.

Pekin, Sept. 9.—The Japanese have arrested the assassin of Baron Von Ketteler, the late German Minister to China, and handed him over to the Germans. He has confessed his guilt. He was arrested for trying to sell to a Japanese officer a watch with initials which he admitted taking from the body of Baron Von Ketteler.

He afterwards admitted the crime, saying that the Imperial Government ordered the commission of the act.

Vice-Admiral Alexieff arrived last night from a three days' visit and inspection.

KILLED TWO HUNDRED BOXERS.

Pekin, Sept. 9.—Some Boxers recently attacked two companies of Russians who were guarding a railway working party at the South Maapu station. Reinforcements succeeded in dispersing the attacking party. Two of the Russians were wounded. As this was not the first occasion when attacks of this nature have occurred a punitive force under Colonel Tretiekoff was sent with orders to burn the surrounding towns.

Colonel Tretiekoff's party yesterday engaged five hundred Boxers seven miles from Machipo. The Boxers were armed only with swords and spears. The Russian cavalry charged on them, killing many of them with sabres. The casualties among the Boxers are estimated at 200. A Russian officer was wounded and two Cossacks were killed.

SURPRISED THE IMPERIALISTS.

Pekin, Sept. 5., via Taku, Sept. 10.—A troop of American cavalry sent to act as a convoy for cattle, surprised three hundred Imperialists quartered at the Temple Shao. They killed thirty and captured 120 rifles. The enemy fled northward.

HUNDREDS MURDERED.

Yokohama, Sept. 12.—A Japanese officer at Chasong, Korea, reports that two Japanese and several hundred Chinese and Korean converts have been murdered on the frontier by the Chinese.

ANOTHER MISSIONARY KILLED.

Washington, Sept. 13.—Minister Conger cables to the State Department under date of September 6, as follows—

"Hodges killed. Pao Ting Fu."

Hodges was a Presbyterian missionary.

WHAT LI HUNG WILL DO.

London, Sept. 13.—A special despatch from Shanghai, dates yesterday, says—

"Li Hung Chang declares that he is will to netiate for the restoration of of Emperor Kwang Su, but not for the punishment of Prince Tuan, Yung Lu or Kang Yi (President of the Board of War)."

Prince Ching has informed Li Hung Chang that a certain power proposed four conditions to be accepted before agreeing to an armistice—the neutralization of Tien Tsin, the creation of Heh Lang Kiang as a buffer State, the placing by the powers of international garrisons at the treaty ports and the execution of the Boxer chiefs.

THEY HOLD PRINCE CHING.

Pekin, Aug. 26, via Taku, Sept 10 and Shanghai Sept. 11.—The Japanese found Prince Ching, leader of the conservative pro-foreign party, in, in the western hills twenty miles distant. They are holding him there with a view of confidence and in the hope that he may establish communication with the Dowager Empress.

CANNOT NEGOTIATE.

Pekin, Sept. 9.—Prince Ching, during the course of private interviews with the Ministers yesterday, informed them that while he had power to negotiate he could not act without Li Hung Chang. An urgent request has been telegraphed Li Hung Chang to come to Pekin. Marquis Tsiang states that nothing can be done until the arrival of the Emperor.

CHING REACHES PEKIN.

Pekin, Sept. 4, via Chefoo, Sept. 10.—Prince Ching arrived here at 3.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, escorted by Japanese and British troops. He is living in his residence in the northeastern part of the Tartar city. It is known that he has instructions from the Dowager Empress to treat with the powers for a settlement of all the questions arising from the recent troubles. Shortly after his arrival Prince Ching asked to meet the diplomatic corps. He was informed that the Ministers would meet him individually. He had an interview to-day with Sir Robert Hart, director of the Imperial Maritime Customs, regarding the situation.

$15,000 Bush Fire.

Bush fire in the north played havoc with three of James Playfair's lumber camps at Moon River last week, where many Peterborough men are at work. The camps, under the respective foremanship of Messrs. Moriarty, McConnell and Laughlan, were totally destroyed and the dams all burnt. The fire was so firce and swooped down so quickly that the men employed were unable to save any of their effects and just managed to escape with the clothes they were wearing at the time. Mr. A. W. Ambrose, well known in Orillia, and who was keeping the books at Laughlan's camp, was amongst the principal sufferers, all his clothes being lost except the suit he had on. At great risk all the horses were rescued, but a large number of rigs belongin to the company were burned. The dams will all have to be rebuilt at once in order to be ready for next winter's work. The loss is estimated to be at least $15,000.

Finger Purse Free.

In the September issue of "Ev'ry Month" just received, the publishers are making an offer which we consider worthy of special notices for the benefit of our readers. They are offering a beautiful, made leather, lined finger purse, with gilt inital, that would sell in the stores for $1 and a subscription to Ev'ry Month' for one year for $1, making the purse practically a free gift. This publication is an ideal home magazine and is not only full of best reading matter but gives four new, copyrighted pieces of catchy, bright, instrumental and vocal music in every issue. We rarely have the pleasure of noting so liberal an offer and we advise our subscribers to take advantage of same.

Has no Equal.

The following item was handed The Times for publication. It is said by somebody that the Grits have runners out all over the town, selling Court-plaster at five cents a package, and it is hoped that in this was funds enough can be raised to defray all legitimate expenses, which may be incurred by the party, during the approaching contest, in the West riding of the County of Peterborough. It is also stated with confidence, that the plaster has no equal in curing fresh wounds, and on that account it may be found useful after the compaign as well as before.

FEAT THAT WON FAME

Mounted Rifles Distinguish Themselves.

HUTTON PRAISES THEM.

A Small Detachment of These Men Took the Enemy by Su prise and Capture a Large Numb r.

Ottawa, Sept. 13.— Major-General Hutton has written to the Governor-General a letter, dated June 20th, enclosing a copy of a field report made to Lord Roberts, relating to operations in the neighborbood of Pretoria upon the 18th and 19th of June, in which a detachment of the 1st Battalion Canadian Mounted Rifles, bore so distinguished a part. The report says.—"I could not allow so exceptional a performance of so difficult, dangerous and dilicate duty to pass without bringing the whole detachment by name to your Excellency's notice. I would add tha tthe detachment was specially selected on account of the qualifications of the men and of the condition of their horses for this particular service." These men are mentioned in the despatch to Lord Roberts.—Lieut. F. V. Young. Manitoba Dragoons; Sergt. R. H. Ryan, King's Canadian Hussars; Sergt. E. Purdon, Duke of York's Own Hussars. General Hutton gives details of the affair.

OUTWITTED THE ENEMY.

A force of the enemy was reported to be in laager six miles away at Klip Kop, and, as the brigade had had a hard day and the advance was through a different country, he chose some of Rimington's scouts, and a small number from the C. M. R., to ascertain the position of the enemy, and, if possible, disarm some of the inhabitants. Lieut. F. V. Young, in charge of this squad, crossed the Klip River, so as to reach Klip Kop from the rear. To this cleverly-executed movement the General attributes the success which followed. The cluster of farms was thus taken on the reverse and surprise. Between 40 and 50 men were disarmed and after a search two guns were found placed in a position to defend the farms from a frontal attack. These guns were taken into camp by Lieut. Young.

A DOUBLE WEDDING.

Two Young Couples Married in Otonabee by Rev. Mr. McCauley, of Keene.

An interesting ceremony took place on Wednesday evening the 12th instant, at Broadview, the residence of Mr. John Throop, of Otonabee, when his daughters, Edna Belle, and Willena Maud, were married, the former to Mr. James Reid of Peterborough, and Willena M. to Mr. Samuel Taylor of Ashburnham. The double ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. McCauley of Keene. Dressed in white organdie, and carrying a bouquet of carnations and ferns, little Mina Throop, sister of the brides, admirably performed the duties of maid of honor. Miss Edna's dress of white organdie, was trimmed with valenciennes lace and chiffon, and she carried a bouquet of white astors. Willena's dress was of pearl grey poplin, trimmed with white chiffon. She held a bouquet of white carnations. Mr. Throop's new house and grounds were handsomely decorated, the interior with ferns and astors, while through rooms and halls, beautiful colored lights cast their soft, and many tinted rays. The lawn and grounds outside, as well as the verandah, were brilliantly illuminated by numerous Chinese lanterns, the various colored lights producing a beautiful effect. The brides received a number of useful and handsome presents, attesting the high esteem in which they are held by their large circle of friends. About sixty guests did ample justice to a sumptuous wedding dinner. After an enjoyable evening had been spent in amusements and merry-making, the young couples left for their homes in Peterborough, followed by the best wishes of a large circle of admiring friends. We hope they will enjoy long, prosperous and happy lives.

A Record.

The month of August came pretty near to beating all warm weather records in the Dominion of Canada. It has been the warmest August in the period from 1840 to 1900, its mean temperature being 72.5, which is 5.2 degrees higher than the average of 59 years, and 3.1 degrees higher than August, 1899. The only previous August which reached an average of 70 degrees, was in 1876, and this average has been exceeded only twice. These two occasions were in July, 1868 and 1887; The average temperature of the six days, August 6th to 11th, inclusive was 81.2 degrees, the warmest day being the eighth with an average of 84.1 which was the warmest day in sixty years, with the single exception of July 14th, 1868, when the average was 84.5 degrees. The highest temperature last month was 98 degrees on the 6th, and the lowest 50.8 degrees on the 2nd. Rain fell on seven days to a total depth of 2.75 inches, of which 1.65 inches fell on the 9th.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

—Mr. Chas. Tanner, of Lakefield, was in town yesterday.

—Miss O'Donnell has been visiting friends in Campbellford recently.

—Mr. J. P. McBride, of the Toronto Globe, was in town yesterday, and gave The Times a call.

—Mrs. Morley Lysle, of Peterborough, is visiting her parents at Crow Bay, Mr. and Mrs. Thos Dunk.

—Mr. F. T. Whittemore, representing the Publisher's Syndicate of Toronto is in town and will make a canvass of Louis Creswicke's history of the South African War.

This is in three volumes, superbly illustrated and splendidly printed. It is the only first class history of the war, and the cause which led up to it, that has yet appeared.

—Yesterday The Times was pleased to have a call from Commodore Calcutt, who is getting stronger every day. He is now brighter and better than we have seen him in a long time, and, to use his own words, is "commencing to feel young again. He may not be able to play football as well as he did 20 years ago, but his hundreds of friends will be delighted to know that he likely soon to take his place with the boys once again.

A STRAIGHT WARNING.

Servian King Makes an Important Announcement.

Vienna, Sept 14.—According to information received here public centiment heartily approves of King Alexander's decided action in publishing an official warning to his mother and all other plotters against the monarchy that further scheming will be punished as treasonable.

Ex-Queen Natalie is declared to have indulged in constant flings at Alexander and Draging ever since the wedding, but the King has ignored them until she wrote a postal card to her former master of ceremonies in Belgrade, containing the vilest insults to her son and the new Queen.

Goes Beyond King's Patience.

The postal card was seized by the police, and then King Alexander concluded that it was time to act, and published on Saturday in the official journal a declaration that he would permit no further intrigue against the royal house, and that the instigators of such, "no matter of what rank or station," would be treated as traitors, and punished accordingly.

Other Significant Signs.

The Journal also announces dissolution of the office of Natalie's Hofmarshall in Belgrade, and it is understood the officials have received odrers to prevent the entrance into Servia of either of Alexander's parents, and the Journal publishes a letter from the Czar to Alexander wherein Nicholas congratulates him on his marriage and addresses him as "dear brother" and assures him of his devotion. He speaks of "our close friendship and mental affinity."

This significent letter, together with an official declaration that the birth of a successor to the Servian throne is assured, has aroused genuine enthusiasm among the people.

Franz Josef Goes to Maneuvers.

Franz Josef attended the memorial service for the Empress yesterday morning and left immediately after for Galizia to attend the annual manuvers. These promise to be among the most imposing ever held on the continent.

ELOPERS IN COURT.

Gloomy End of an Elopement in Court of two Prominent People.

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 14.—Dr. Howard M. Wilkinson, who eloped with Miss Josephine Packard, his wife's sister, will have a hearing before a justice of the peace to-day. Dr Wilkinson recently shipped a large consignment of drugs from Dover, Del., to the Eagle Drug Co., of this city. The goods were all attached by the several creditors of Dr. Wilkson, in Delaware. The Eagle Drug Co., of this city, had no knowledge of the shipment and the use of its name was was without authority. The whereabouts of the doctor and Miss Wilkinson are unknown adn it is expected the case will go by default. They had intended to open a drug store here before their movements became known.

WHIPPED HIS WIFE.

She Went Bicycling in Bloomers and Trouble Followed

Washington, Pa., Sept. 13.—Because his wife went out to ride a wheel in bloomers, Charles Redman gave her a whipping in the public street. The screams of the wife brought the police officers to the scene, and Redman was arrested, taken before the burgess, and fined $5.

Mrs. Redman and Sue Dickerson, the police say, were having a high old time. Mrs. Redman was dressed in bloomers. Miss Dickerson, as her escort, was attired in men's clothing, it is affirmed. Redman learned of their actions and started in pursuit.

A merry chase followed, but Redman overtook his better half, whipped her, and drove her home. Miss Dickerson followed and took up the gauntlet in defence of her friend, whom she has been escorting over the neighborhood.

When paying his fine Redman said he was sorry he had been interrupted, for in his opinion punishment as she deserved.

BOTHA RESIGNS IN FAVOR OF VILJOEN

Roberts Sends Hutton With His Mounted Men to Support the Attack.

BULLER IS DRIVING THE BOERS BEFORE HIM.

Methuen Successfully Attacks a Boer Camp, while Hildyard Drives the Enemy from a Mountain Pass—British Prisoners Badly Fed.

Lorenzo Marques, Sept. 13.—Mr. Kruger telegraphed his wife to joine him before sailing, but she has replied that her health will not permit. General Louis Botha has resigned the Chief Command of the Transvaal forces to Commandent Viljoen.

Some interest attaches to the meeting of the Portuguese Cabinet to consider the fight at President Kruger. Will Portugal surrender the deposed President or will she permit him to escape? This is the question which is being decided. As Portugal has much to gain by acting in a friendly manner towards Britain and nothing to gain by antagonizing the Boers, there are strong probabilities that the Portuguese may follow the lead of the Scots in the case of Charles the First, and hand over Oom Paul to his enemies.

TO THE SUPPORT OF FRENCH.

London, Sept. 13.—Lord Roberts reports from Machadodrop, under date of Wednesday, Sept. 12, that General French was heavily engaged that day with the Boers in the hills west of Barberton, and that General Hutton had gone to General French's support.

London, Sept. 13.—All the morning papers publish sketches of Mr. Kruger's extraordinary career. The editer's extraordinary career. The editorials comment upon his humiliating and undramatic exit which is universally regarded as less perplexing than and therefore preferable to capture. His flight with the bullion is regarded a sputting an undignified end to his legal pretensions.

METHUEN DEFEATS BOERS.

London, Sept. 13.—The War Office has received the following from Lord Roberts.

"Pretoria, Sept. 11. 7.40 p.m.—Methuen attacked Varmas camp at Malapoo Monday and dispersed the enemy. He took thirty prisoners. The British had six wounded. Several Boers were seen to fall, and many riderless horses were noticed.

"General Buller is at Kapgat, and is driving the Boers before him. He has captured several tons of food. The Boers destroyed a gun tackle and thirteen waggons of ammunition to prevent their capture by the British.

"The Mounted Infantry which started from the Ventersburg road station attacked the enemy at Cypergat kopjes on September 9, and captured cattle and horses that had been stolen from the farmes. The British casualties were two killed and two slightly wounded.

"Hildyard reports that he drove the enemy from Lankwaithe pass on September 10, and followed them through the pass on the way to the hills east of Utrecht.

"The British officers who were captured by the Boers were fairly treated. The food furnished to the non-commissioned officers and men, however, was inadequate in quantity and inferior in quality. The inhuman treatment of the sick prisoners reflects the greatest discredit oon the Boer authorities."

Gen. French has occupied Barberton.

WEATHER NOTES.

Probs—Moderate to fresh southwesterly; gradually veering to northwesterly winds; fine; a little higher temperature. To-day—Fine, and a little cooler again.

The severe storm has now passed out to sea, after causing a violent gale throughout the Maritime Provinces. Fine weather is at present generally indicated in all localities. A heavy frost was experienced in the Qu'Appelle valley, also locally in Alberta.

Political Notes.

It is said there is a big drop in the price of coal since the Liberal convention.

** * **

The Conservatives of West Peterborough will now breathe easier.

** * **

Mr. Kendry will have no walk-over. The Mayoralty election, in which everything was in his favor, indicates that in the coming election he will have to put up the battle of his life if he hopes to win.

** * **

An enquiry was made yesterday regarding East Peterborough. The Times is authorized to state that Dr. Ford, of Norwood, will probably get the call.

** * **

The Port Hope demonstration to-morrow will be a mammoth affair. A special train will leave the G.T.R. station at 5, returning after the meeting.

** * **

Mr. Robert Fair, speaking no doubt for those who are Liberals in Ontario politics and Conservatives in Dominion matters, says that there has been no "deal between the leaders of the parties, so far as he is aware. He is loud in his demonstration that the local party press is clean. We fear it will take more than Mr. Fair's eloquence to persuade people as to this.

** * **

Mr. McClellan proposes to enter into the campaign with all his might. Meetings, in various parts of the riding, will be held at once.

** * **

The Conservatives candidate expects to secure his majority through the help of "Stratton Liberals." It is just possible, however, that these Liberals (?) may be persuaded to stay in the Grit camp.

TO THE CENTRAL FAIR.

An Efficient Bus Service to be Inaugurated for the Convenience of Citizens.

The livery men have come together and will inaugurate an efficent bus service to the Central Exhibition this year. At a meeting at which all inteerested were present, it was decided to put the service in the hands of a committee who will make all arrangements, those praticipating in the work of running the 'busses to share alike. The committee will place a man to sell tickets at the corner of Charlotte and George-sts. The fare will be 10 cents each way. Tickets will be collected as the 'busses are loaded. Each 'bus will leave in its turn, and will be loaded in succession, men being there to take the tickets and see to the loading. Ladies and children will have special attention, and may rely on every care being taken that they are secured seats and made comfortable. Tickets to return from the grounds will be sold at the Fair ticket office at the entrance gates. Tickets are good to ride on any 'bus in the service, but tickets issued Wednesday and Wednesday evening will not be good for Thursday.

DIED OF HEART DISEASE.

Very Sudden Demise of Mr. D. S. Thompson Which Occurred Last Evening.

Mr. D. S. Thompson, salesman in Robt. Fair & Co's. store, died suddenly at his boarding house, 336 Stewart street at 7 o'clock last evening.

The deceased not feeling well did not come down to work yesterday morning, but was improved somewhat, during the day. He partook of some tea and was immediately after seized with heart failure and expired before medical aid could be procured.

Mr. Thompson was a native of Scotland, and his wife and family reside in Montreal. Although but a short time in the employ of the above firm he had filled his position very acceptably, and was highly esteemed. The remains will be sent to Montreal for interment.

Broke Her Wheel.

During the storm of Eednesday morning the logs belonging to the Rathbun Company, broke loose in the mouth of the river near Hastings, and forced the Steamer City of Peterborough up against the pier, with such force as to break one of the arms of her wheel. The Steamer managed to extricate herself and reach the lake, where repairs were made. She was bringing up the Government bridge at the time. In consequence the excursion, which was to have taken place yesterday to Jubelee Point, was postponed. The steamer reached town last night, nothing the worst for her mishap.

MUST TAKE OUT LICENSES.

Game Dealers are Required to do This or be Fined Twenty-five Dollars.

Many game dealers of the province appear to be paying no attention to the law that requires them to pay a license before they can deal with game. The Chief Game Warden of the province is notifying the game dealers that they must take out a license or they will be proceeded against. By the present law a fine of $25 and costs may be levied upon merchants who do not comply with the law.

The Game Warden says he likes to give the dealers plenty of chance before rigidly enforcing the law.

Eating and Sleeping.

Food supplies the substance for repairing the wastes of the body, and gives strength. Sleep affords the opportunity for these repairs to be made. Both are necessary to health. If you can't eat and sleep, take Hood's Sarsaparilla. It creates a good appetite and tones the digestive organs, and it gives the sweet, restful sleep of childhood. Be sure to get Hood's.

Root and Branch.

Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough, was accustomed to make an annual feast, to which she invited all her relations. At one of these family meetings she drank their health, adding, "What a glorious sight it is to see such a number of branches flourishing from one root!" But observing Jack Spencer laugh, she insisted on knowing what had occasioned his mirth, and promised to forgive him, be it what it would.

"Why, then, madam," said he, "I was thinking how much more the branches would flourish if the root were under ground."

What a Whale Weighs.

Have you any idea of the size of the common Greenland Whale? Nilsson, the zoologist, estimates the full-grown animal to average 100 tons, or 224,000 pounds. That is to say, a whale weighs as much as about eighty elephants or 400 bears. Of course some run larger than this. There are tales among old whalers of whales 110 feet long, and weighing at least 150 tons, but they are not seen in these days. A seventy-foot whale is a big one now. Still, it may give some idea of what monsters are occasionally killed when we mention that a ton of oil has been extracted from the tongue alone of a single whale.

A Well Trained Boy

Mr. Goodfather had brought up his son according to the good old model which teaches that children shall be seen and not heard, say "Yes, sir," and "No, sir," and respect their elders.

When Johnnie went to college he arranged with his father that on his arrival there, if he found everything satisfactory, he would telegraph "Yes." When the telegram arrived the busy father had forgotten what "Yes" referred to, so he wired back, "Yes, what?" and Johnnie answered, "Yes, sir."

The Athletic Girl.

The athletic girl is apt to be influential, to have power—and most of us like this—and when she expresses an opinion she is generally listened to with respect. A sound mind in a sound body is the superlative of attraction, and this a girl may and should possess. For most girls, as for many older women too, it is well to strive for the rounded life, the life of symmetry, the life which is not unduly developed in one direction at the expense of another.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Phonograph Will

A wealthy engineer recently talked his last will and testament into a phonograph. Then with a hot copper wire he signed his name on the wax roll of the phonograph, the witnesses doing likewise, and the "document" was thereupon completed.

Ceylon is the home of the largest spider in the world. This web spinning monster lives in the most mountainous districts of that rugged island, and places its net, measuring from 5 to ten feet in diameter, across the chasms and fissures in rocks.

The largest painting in the world, exclusive of panoramas and cycloramas, is in the grand salon of the Doge's Palace at Venice. This painting is 81 feet wide by 34 feet high.

BOOTS CHANGED HIS CAREER

A Southerner Whose Success in Life Hinged on His Substantial Footgear.

"Talk about your two good suits of clothes," said the son of a well-known Confederate army officer. "In my young days shoes, one pair, was the badge of the plutocrat. I came of a large family, eight sons, and when things were going particularly well one of us had a pair of shoes. I was the youngest, so that it never was I. Now, you would be surprised to know the effect, mental, moral and physical, that shoes have on a man. I consider that my career, aye, and my character, hinge upon the possession of a pair. When I went to school in Virginia thirty years ago, of course I was barefooted. I was a quiet youth, strong for my age, but phlegmatic and would put up with a lot rather than get into a fight.

"My particular enemy in the school was an impudent and conceited boy, somewhat older than myself. He was the son of our family doctor, an only son, and the proud possessor of a pair of shoes, shoes of the old country type, with thick soles adorned with plenty of steel. You see we were not utterly poverty stricken. We had a family doctor. You couldn't expect a Southern gentleman to be able to stand for a family doctor and shoes for his family at one and the same time. My enemy was forever tormenting me, but I endured it silently for a long time. At last one day my patience would endure it no longer. I fell upon him and a sanguinary conflict ensued. We fought for an hour or more. We fought like windmills in a hurricane. It is true we did not often hit one another. We were usually too close or too far off, but we smote everything in sight, trees, walls and particularly the air. Tweedledum and Tweedledee were not a marker to us. We managed to blacken each other's eyes and bleed each other's noses, chiefly through the contact of our heads.

"Finally, however, my enemy bethought him of his superior armament. He drew back and delivered upon my unfortunate bare shanks a kick of cruel force and precision. I can feel to-day the impact of that mass of leather and steel. It was agony. I surrendered unconditionally. Now began a period of the most heartrending humiliation and misery. Wherever I went that wretched shod youth followed. I was his slave. I ran his errands. He thwarted me in all my undertakings. He stood on his steel and leather between me and the smallest taste of enjoyment.

"There was a girl, a sweet little blue-eyed thing of twelve summers, my first love who was to me as all the world, including the village candy store. With her I would commune under the trees near the village school. With her I would wax gallant and eloquent. Yankees I would slay by the score, rather than that a hair of her head should be disturbed. I wished her to believe me a Paul Jones and a Stonewall Jackson in embryo, only with a spice of wickedness.

"I believe I should have succeeded but for that horrid boy with his shoes. One day when I was holding forth to my lady love in an especially lofty strain, the wretch came sauntering past. As he took in the situation, his eyes lighted up with malicious joy. He made straight for me.

"'Get out,' he said in tones of peremptory conteptm. 'I want to talk to Delia.'

"For a moment, as the spirit of Jackson and Jones burnt bright in my breast, I was for giving battle. But he merely raised his foot and I saw the flash of steel beneath the leather. The fire of my valor was quenched. I turned one last despairing glance on Delia, who was laughing and slunk away. The horror of those shoes was upon me and my knees knocked together.

"But I swore vengeance, and all things come to the man who knows how to wait. That winter my father carried through successfully a piece of business. Result, the whole family was shod. My own footgear was especially magnificent. No shoes, mind you, but boots, with stout leather reaching even unto the knee. Homer was all right when he made the well-grieved Achaeans the victors. Mine enemy and I met. He was vanquished from the start. I think he turned pale when his eye fell upon my leather-clad shanks. He would have declined combat. But burning with the wrongs I had suffered I fell upon him without giving him time to retreat. The battle was short and fierce. I scorned to use my feet, but I was now proof against his mulish onslaught. I took his kicks without feeling them and smote him with my fists. Finally I got him down and choked him until I was weary. But as he arose, humble, bruised and trembling, I deliberately landed my armed feet on each of his shins, and with a howl of agony he turned to flee. I delivered one more kick, the most satisfactory of all, on Nature's appointed kicking place.

"My fame reached Delia's ears, and she was all smiles when she received me. She had understood, she said, all along and her heart had bled for me. I had my doubts, but the heart of youth is as wax in a maiden's hands. Shortly after my enemy approached I called to him sweetly and he came tremblingly.

"'Why don't you tell me to get out?' I asked pleasantly, swinging my foot the while, and the titter of Delia sent the hot blood of pride and joy coursing through my veins. What became of Delia I don't remember. But upon those boots turned my career. My shyness and phlegm left me. I became energetic and confident. I succeeded in study and sport; I afterward became captain of my college football team. My subsequent career has been one of effort crowned with success."

The Language of Finance.

"Do you think there will be much interest in this political enterprise.

"Interest," repeated Senator Sorghum. "It'll be more than interest. It'll be dividends."—Washington Star.

SEPTEMBER ADVERTISING.

Business men differ as to when "ads" are the most productive of results. One heavy advertiser makes a special effort to attract custom in September, when so many people return from the sea shore, mountains and country with new energy, ready to take up neglected enterprises; when the children are to be got ready for school, and when preparations are to be made for winter occupations and pleasures. His purpose is to induce people to get into the habit of dealing with him. Everybody reads the Times.

Pretty Hands,

Hands delicately moulded and daintily white are among the chief of woman's charms. When such hands are marred by eruptions, their very beauty draws attention to the repulsive disease. Humors which break out on the body begin in the blood. Soaps and salves may cover up a humor but they can't cure it. There is a cure for salt-rheum and other eruptive diseases, caused by a corrupt condition of the blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures these diseases perfectly and permanently. It carries off the poisons which cause disease. It makes the blood pure and rich. It increases the quantity of the blood supply by increasing the action of the blood making glands. It makes the skin white and clear by making the blood pure.

"Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant.

"I write to tell you the benefit I have received from your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' after having suffered for three years with salt-rheum," writes Miss Bertha Peters, of Lulu, Monroe Co., Mich. "The humor was on my hands, and I had been treated by our home physician who did not help me. After I began the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I took seven bottles, and can now say with pleasure that I am cured. Nobody knows the intense pain I have suffered. I could not sleep at night, the stinging, burning, and itching sensation would be so bad, sometimes I could hardly bear it. I thank you for your kind advice."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets assist the action of the "Discovery" when there is constipation.

A HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY.

Mrs. South Orange Develops Unexpected Ability as Mistress of Finance.

"I have discovered a way of saving money," said Mrs. South Orange the other day, with pride. "It doesn't save much at once, but it is the little savings, made continually, that tell.

Mr. South Orange looked interested. Mrs. Orange as a financier, and especially as an economizer, was wholly new, and the prospect of having to pay for her economies in some unsuspected way was almost as exciting as a roulette game. So he said with careful pronunciation: "Well?"

"Well," said Mrs. South Orange, drawing a long breath. "You know I keep an account in town here." Mr. Orange nodded and sighed to himself. His wife went on: "The other day I heard from a little tailor in the city—I mean New York, of course—that he had had to pay ten cents to get a two-dollar check cashed that I had sent him."

"Yes," said Mr. South Orange, "country checks have to pay that now——"

"But we don't live in the country!" cried Mrs. South Orange, indignantly. "You told me only the other day that this was a city now."

"Yes, it is a city," said South Orange. "But 'country checks' is merely the name for checks coming from out of town. For some months past the city people presenting such checks have had to pay ten cents for getting them cashed. You see——"

"So they don't get all that we think they're going to get?" demanded Mrs. South Orange. "and I am banking on that. Banking is right, isn't it? I thought so. Well, I have decided hereafter, so long as they don't get all that we think they're going to get to just take ten cents off the checks that I send them. You see, that tailor wanted $2 and only got $1.90. I had to pay ten cents that didn't do him any good. So henceforth I shall only pay them what they're going to get. Thus, you see, I'll save ten cents, and they'll get all they would have got if I had paid 'em all they ought to have got."

She stopped breathless, and Mr. South Orange looked up without a word. Finally he asked, gently: "Have you begun on this yet?"

"Only thought of it last night, while I was waiting for you to come back from your bowling club."

"You wait about putting it into action until I have laid the plan before——No! You'd better see the President of the bank yourself, and take his advice. Good-by; I must run!"

South Orange thought he had rid himself of the job of explaining matters, but he hadn't. Mrs. Orange returned to the plan at dinner.

"The President said he did not approve of my plan," she said, sadly. "He said it was all right in theory, but would militate against banking customs, and that I had hardly the legal or moral right to lead an attack against those customs alone, as it would take up much of my time and might prove labor in vain. He said that his advice, as he was President of a bank, might seem prejudiced, and said that your advice was more likely to be quite disinterested than his own. So he referred me back to you."

South Orange's jaw dropped.

"Look here," he began; "I'll get you Mill's book on political economy tomorrow—the dismal science some one calls it. Meantime, it's full moon—let's go for a drive."

IT ISN'T THE THING YOU DO.

It isn't the thing you do, dear,
 It's the thing you leave undone,
That gives you a bit of heartache
 At the setting of the sun.
The tender word forgotten,
 The letter you did not write,
The flower you did not send, dear,
 Are your haunting ghosts at night.

The stone you might have lifted
 Out of a brother's way;
The bit of heartsome counsel
 You were hurried too much to say;
The loving touch of the hand, dear,
 The gentle winning tone,
Which you had no time nor thought for,
 With troubles enough of your own.

For life is all too short, dear,
 And sorrow is all too great,
To suffer our slow compassion,
 That tarries until too late;
And it isn't the thing you do, dear,
 It's the thing you leave undone,
Which gives you a bit of a heartache
 At the setting of the sun.
 —Margaret Elizabeth Sangster.

A LOCAL PARAGRAPH.

"The time has come for the American people to act. Shall fifty million patriots sit supinely by and let conscienceless rascals tear the stars of glory from the flag they love and trample its proud folds of crimson and white into the mire of national dishonor? Not while the deeds of '76 still shine through the mists of years in unexampled splendor. Not while the memories of '61 yet live in the hearts that thrilled with the stress of that heroic struggle. Not while"—Joel Snively, editor of the Meloogic Monitor, laid down his pen with a sigh.

Outside the dusty little window the green waters of the bay were sparkling in the sunshine. A keen north breeze was driving great huddling masses of white-shouldered clouds over a field of dazzling azure, and only a man who loved the sport with the whole-souled earnestness that filled his entire being could know how the fish must be biting on such a morning! Oh, to be out on that gleaming expanse armed with rod and line, with only the sun and clouds for company and a thousand pounds or so of gamy vertebrates playing about within reach of his cunning hook.

But also, it was Friday morning. On Saturday some two hundred impatient subscribers would expect the weekly dish of personal, political and intellectual pabulum which his facile pen had long served to them on that day, with more or less punctuality, according to the season. His duty clearly held him to his post at such a time, however, much his inclinations might have led him elsewhere.

So, with another lingering glance at the scene without, Mr. Snively took up his pen and resumed the stirring appeal which was to awaken fifty million patriots to action and incidentally convince the Republicans of Meloogic that it was their duty to vote for Joe Gridley for poundmaster.

So engrossed did the editor become in this pleasing task that he did not hear a step upon the creaking stair a little later. If he had he would have known at once that it was a woman and a lady who was approaching, for long and often painful experience had enabled Mr. Snively to determine with unerring accuracy what sort of person was climbing the somewhat perilous ascent to the editorial sanctum almost as soon as his foot touched the first step.

But for once the editor did not hear the soft footfall on the stair, so he was very much surprised and not a little disconcerted when a fresh, sweet voice, almost at his elbow, said "Good Morning, Mr. Snively," and looking up he beheld his neighbor, Mrs. Tracy, her plump figure buttoned into the trimmest of blue serge yachting suits, her smiling face shaded by a wide-brimmed hat and in her hand a fish pole, pointed, brass-tipped, elegant—the very perfection of dainty uselessness.

Without waiting for a response to her greeting she briefly made known her errand. She was anxious for a day's fishing and had been told of an Elysian spot, where the fish were so plentiful they were actually to be had for the asking. Unluckily, however, her own boat had not come, so she had ventured to ask if, in case he was not using it, Mr. Snively would be so kind as to lend her his yawl, it being impossible to hire one in the village.

Mr. Snively was delighted. Mrs. Tracy was a pretty widow of uncertain age but no uncertain charm, who had taken the cottage next to the editor's own some six months before. In the course of a rather desultory acquaintance the genial bachelor, whose ideas of the fair sex were those common to his kind, had discovered that his fair neighbor was a cheery little body of sound political views and excellent literary tastes (from the first she had been a prompt and paying subscriber to the Monitor), but beyond that his imagination had not soared. Now, however, behold the pretty widow invested with a wholly new interest. She was fond of fishing!

Eagerly Mr. Spively assured his visitor of his pleasure in putting his boat at her disposal and gave her exhaustive directions as to the means of obtaining it. A delightful half-hour of conversation followed. As though it were a magician's wand the dainty fish pole had placed the editor and his guest at once on terms of the most charming intimacy and the former didn't remember ever to have enjoyed a conversation so much in his life, albeit the talk was wholly of reel and rods and spoonhooks and other instruments of slaughter.

All things, however, are bound to come to an end, especially in an editorial office, so it wasn't long before Mrs. Tracy took her leave, escorted down the stairway by her delighted host.

At the door they were met by a spicy breeze straight from the pine woods across the bay. Mr. Snively sighed.

"Where is this wonderful place you are going to?" he asked.

"Ah, that's a secret," she replied gayly. "I promised I'd never, never tell."

"Oh, well, then I suppose it's a crime to even guess." And once more the editor sighed as he glanced out at the sparkling waters.

"But you've been so kind," exclaimed the widow, noting the sigh and immediately filled with compunction. "It seems ungracious of me to keep it from you who love so to fish." And then as she saw him give another wistful glance bayward she burst out impulsively: "Promise not to betray me and I'll tell you—It's Patchang Lake!"

"Patchang!" cried Mr. Snively in surprise. "Why, I never heard of a fish down there in my life."

"That's the charm of it," she rejoined gleefully, "and the man who told me about it (such a dear, dirty, old fisherman he was) was fearfully afraid some one else would find it out; so don't betray me." And she hurried away with a parting smile that made the dusty office seem duller than ever when he got back to it and reluctantly commenced setting up his editorials, for Mr. Snively constituted the whole working force of the Monitor.

And his task, too, seemed harder than ever, after the interruption. Thoughts of his pretty visitor kept intruding themselves into the midst of his most impassioned apeals to the voters of Meloogic.

How blue here eyes were and what bewitching little rings of hair the wind had blown up under the big hat.

And then the fishing.

The editor of the Monitor shook his head. Could it be possible any man living could have a soul so lost to honor as to play a joke on a woman who looked like that? It seemed impossible and yet Mr. Snively was as sure there wasn't a fish within a mile of Patchang as he was that there wasn't a free silver man in Meloogic.

Perhaps then Mrs. Track was sitting in that yawl, vainly waiting for the bite he felt certain she wouldn't get if she sat there till the United States got an honest government. And he was actually staying at home and deliberately abandoning a friend to such a fate!

As this agonizing thought occurred to Mr. Snively he dropped his type and started for the door. But once there he paused and slowly returned to his form, only to find it more and more impossible to keep his mind on his work.

At last he gave up in despair.

Taking a hasty survey of what he'd already accomplished he found his columns tolerably full, with the exception of perhaps a single paragraph on the local page. By hard work the following morning he might hope to set up his pages and would trust to luck for the missing paragraph.

Like all fishermen, Mr. Snively was a firm believer in luck. He was also a man of action when he chose and within five minutes of this calculation he had locked up the editorial department and was on his way to Patchang Lake.

When he reached that shallow sheet of water a little lady in blue serge sat in a boat in the centre thereof, with an expression of virtuous indignation on her sunburnt features.

"What luck?" called the editor from the shore.

"Luck!" cried the fair sportswoman, dolefully. "There's not enough water in this lake to catch cold in, much less a fish. All I've got for my trouble is a mighty poor opinion of fishermen in general and one dirty one in particular."

"Come over here," said Snively. "I know a pond not a thousand miles away where the fish bite like mosquitoes. If you'll try it I think I can raise your opinion of fishermen before I'm a day older."

"I can't," confessed the widow, blushing with anger and mortification. "I'm stuck—in the mud."

One moment the man of letters hesitated on the bank and then, with an inward prayer that he might at least be spared to get out that week's paper, he waded boldly into the expanse of treacherous mud that rolled between him and beauty in distress.

The next morning the editor walked into the Monitor office clad in his Sunday clothes. With his accustomed methodical neatness he pulled off his coat, hung it behind the door, and carefully drew over his linen sleeves a pair of black alpaca ones. Then he lighted his pipe and took his place at the form.

There, just as he had left it, was the vacant space at the end of the local column still yawning for the missing paragraph.

Mr. Snively regarded it for a few minutes reflectively—then he took up his pen, as a smile gradually spread itself over his face until it reached his eyes. It still lingered there when a little later he finished and paused to glance over his work.

What he read was this:

"The editor of the Monitor, after many years of bachelorhood, has had the good fortune to incur the risk and responsibilities of matrimony. He was married this morning to Mrs. Gertrude Tracy of Elm cottage and asks the congratulations and good wishes of his subscribers in this the happiest hour of his life."—Edgar Temple Field in Chicago Times Herald.

"Hunger is the Best Sauce."

Yet some people are never hungry. Whatever they eat has to be "forced down." There is, of course, something wrong with these people. By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla a short time they are given an appetite and then they enjoy eating and food nourishes them. If you find your appetite failing, just try a bottle of Hood's. It is a true stomach tonic and every dose does good.

The best family cathartic is Hood's Pills.

Biliousness is cured by Hood's Pills. 25 cents.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other goods offered for sale in our store.

Where Can We Find?

A woman to mop the brow of the mountain?

The whetstone that will sharpen a dull appetite?

The ring that will fit the finger of fate?

The correct measurement of the footprints of time?

When Women Voted for President.

Women voted in New Jersey in the Presidential election of 1804, when Thomas Jefferson was re-elected for a second term. In 1892 the women of the new State of Wyoming participated in a Presidential election which resulted in the choice of Grover Cleveland, who was the first President since Jefferson to be elected by the aid of women's vote.—The Forum.

Lions Not "Domestic Animals."

Justices Cave and Wright, London, recently dismissed an appeal against the magisterial decision in the case of the Aquarian lions. The keeper of these lions was prosecuted for cruelly beating them, but the Westminster magistrate dismissed the case on the ground that the lions were not domestic animals. The court upheld this view and dismissed the appeal.

New Use for Women.

Yet another occupation has been found for women—that of acting as barometers. Weather Prophet Dunn is quoted as saying that one of the ways of telling whether the temperature was rising was to watch a girl's front hair. When it began to lose its curl and grow straight, it would be a sure sign of a change of temperature.

REPORTERS' ROUNDS

Local Happenings Picked Up Here and There by the Times.

—Many of the telephone wires got tangled in Wednesday's storm.

—There were twenty four deaths in Belleville during the month of August.

—A number of the cars for South Africa have just been completed at the car works in Cobourg.

—It is said that apple buyers are staggering farmers by offering 50 cents a barrel for their entire crop.

Your best friend can give you no better advice than this—"For impure blood, bad stomach and weak nerves take Hood's Sarsaparilla."

—Wages in the lumber camps will run high this fall, as there is a scarcity of men. A large number have already begun this season's work.

—One paragraph in the game law says that speckled trout shall not be taken between the 15th of September and the 1st of May. Saturday next the close season will begin.

—A number of gentlemen in Belleville have formed themselves into a company to go into business on an extensive scale in the manufacture of shirts.

—It should be remembered by those who shoot partridge, next week and thereafter, that the sale of the birds is forbidden under any circumstances. The season opens on Saturday, 15th inst.

—Campbellford Herald.—Mr. Josh. McLaughlin is at present travelling over the roads of this locality purchasing hogs for a Peterborough dealer. There are now six men in the business in this neighborhood.

—Nearly all the milk of the country has been flowing into the cheese factories, and the flow has greatly decreased owing to poor pasturage, consequently there has been a limited amount of butter made, and it is a scare article with a big price attached to it, which is likely to advance.

—A gentleman representing a company who are undertaking to light Belleville and Trenton, was in Campbellford a short time ago looking at the water power of the Trent river here with a view to utilizing it for streets and stores, and power for manufactories, and an electric railway in this district.

—A Buffalo bride, who was spending the honeymoon with her husband and brother in the Muskoka district, was drowned on Sunday morning last in the Rugged Rapids, Moon River. She fell in the rapids accidentally and before her husband and brother could rescue her was swept out of reach and drowned, She was a daughter of Mr. Hengerer, of the Brown, Hengerer Company of Buffalo.

—Dr. T. W. Blake was the victim of a bunko game pure and simple Friday. During the hot part of the day the doctor hied himself to the river for a swim. During his stay in the water several cattle came up and chewed up his pants, shirt and socks. The doctor was obliged to remain in the water until he could scare up a small boy, who went uptown and secured the necessary clothing—Sterling Standard.

—Little Dorothy Mary Tupper, 5 years old, lies dead at her father's home in Toronto, as a result of eating poisoned ice carem sold at the fair. The child is the daughter of Mr. J. R. Tupper, of the Eckardt Casket Company. child's physicians, states that he believes there is an epidemic of such Dr. T. Shaw Webster one of the cases in the city. In his personal practice he had no less than five patients suffering from ice cream poisoning. The poisioning is caused by re freezing old cream, and is commonly known as "germ poisioning."

A Big Luminous Tree.

Every one has heard of luminous plants and shrubs, but comparatively few people are aware of the existence in Nevada of a luminous tree of large proportions. The Indians have always entertained a wholesome dread of this tree, and have a number of legends connected with it, some of which are clearly founded on the Biblical story of Moses and the burning bush. As a result of their superstition the tree has come to be known as the "witch tree," and is quite a source of interest among people for miles around. It is a valuable landmark at night, as it can be seen half a mile away, and the phosphorous substance which exudes from it is so powerful that it is possible to read a few words of print held close to it. Several botanists and tree scientists have made journeys to inspect and report on the tree, but we have never seen a really intelligent explanation of what seems to be quite a unique phenomenon.

Sleeping to Death.

One of the most curious and fatal diseases on record is termed "the sleeping sickness of West Africa." The malady has never been known to attack anyone except negroes. As the disease progresses the victim sleeps constantly and finally dies from starvation. The first symptoms are shown when the victim gradually gives way to a feeling of listlessness, which becomes at last a profound and lethargic sleep, the first noticeable signs of which are a visible and persistent drooping of the eyelids in the daytime and while at work. In spite of all efforts to arouse him, the patient lapses into slumber. The periods of sleep increase in number and the intervals between them lessen. Soon the negro appears to be always asleep. Death occurs at the end of from six to twelve months.—New York Sun.

Lincoln's Youth.

Abraham Lincoln was the son of a poor farmer, and of his boyhood days little is known. He was born in a small cabin on the Big South Fork of Nolin Creek, in La Rue county, Kentucky, which is about three miles from Hodgensville. One of the few little stories of his youth that the writers of his life have been able to find shows that even at the early age of ten he was guided by the same noble and generous impulses that made everybody love him when he grew to be a man. One day, after fishing for hours, he was returning home, tired and hungry, with only one fish, when he met a soldier. His mother and father had always taught him to be good to soldiers, and so, thinking this one might be hungry, he unhesitatingly gave him the fish he had worked so hard to catch.

Weight of Peas.

S. M. Andree, a Swedish scientist, has collected a tabular information showing the average weight of peas in their pods. The lightest peas were always found near the end of the pod. The average weight of a pea was greater the larger the number of peas in the pod, so that the largest pods contained the heaviest peas. The weight of the peas next to the point of the pod increased with the increased number of peas in the pod. With the exception of the first and last peas, there was but a very small difference in the weight of the peas in the same pod.

OLD FORT HAYS

Famous Frontier Post and Its Exciting History.

The most famous military post in the Kansas frontier has, by the passage of the Fort Hays bill by Congress, been wiped out of existence. This fort, which was for many years the central point of the army operations against the redskins, has for years been deserted. Its 7,000 acres have been leased to cattlemen and the splendid timber that is unequaled in Western Kansas has been furnishing the settlers with fuel. Nineteen big frame cottages, the officers' homes, the barracks and training quarters, have been unoccupied, and it will be a great delight to the people of this section to see them filled with students of the State normal school and the State agricultural school, both of which are under the bill to have branches there.

This fort was the barrier against the Indian raids that marked the last attempts of the redskins to frighten the people of the State. When the Cheyennes came down from the Northwest the soldiers of Hays, with the assistance of those from Wallace and Harker, met them and drove them back, saving the lives of thousands of settlers. Gen. George Forsythe followed Roman Nose into the Upper Republican country, and there, with his band of 100 soldiers, was surrounded by fully 1,000 of the redskins. For three days they were held there, and then were rescued by succor brought by two scouts who escaped and went back to the fort. It was found that the imprisoned soldiers had been more than victors, for they had killed more than a dozen for every one of their own number that fell. Roman Nose himself was among the killed.

There was another scare in the latter 70's, when the people as far east as Topeka felt uneasy, but the Indians did not come so far as on the earlier occasion. It then became apparent that there was no further need of the maintenance of the post, and it was abandoned a few years after. All this time the buildings have stood empty, and the caretaker has had the lonesome task of looking after them.

Fort Hays has had an eventful history. It was originally called Fort Fletcher, and was located fourteen miles south of here on the Big Muddy. One day the creek was swelled by a storm and the waters drove the soldiers out of the fort. Several colored soldiers who were too slow were drowned, and Gen. Pope ordered the location changed to the present site. The buildings were then erected and improvements made.

The town of Hays City, which was then founded a short distance to the north, was a rough place, being filled with cowboys and frontiersmen who followed the building of the rail road. The City Council granted thirty-seven saloon licenses the first day that it met. There were "killers" without number, and on the slopes of a little hill were laid the victims of their prowess. It was called Boot Hill, and there lie forty-five of the distinguished gentry who died with their boots on, some being known by their real names and some not. It will never be known who really were laid to rest in the unceremonious fashion of the frontier days, for now it is too late to find out.

"Wild Bill" was Marshal of the town for a while, until one day he shot three soldiers on the street, and then it was healthier for him to go hence. He went, and was next heard of at Abilene, where he was again Marshal, with a predilection for killing.

The most famous event in the history of the fort was the raiding of the army stores in 1869. The government then had a great many stores there and the surplus that could not be cared for at the fort was piled up along the railroad track with two watchmen to guard it. One of them, John Hays, went across the street one night and entered a saloon to get a drink. As he went in he was met by two soldiers from the fort, who without provocation, killed him. The soldiers were colored and were drunk. They went into a barber shop and broke mirrors and scared the proprietor to the roof of his shop. He went to the fort and when the men were ranged in dress parade by order of the Colonel he picked out the desperadoes. They were taken to Hays and shut up in a cellar that served as a jail. That night they were taken out by the citizens and strung up to the railroad bridge. In 1874 the Ninth Infantry (colored) tried to get even with the town, but in the battle that ensued 2 of their number were left dead in the street. There were many other fatalities in the conflicts between the town and fort, and the soldiers found that they had a town of fighters to deal with.

The old-timers, like the late Henry Inman and Gen. Forsythe, tried their mettle here and found honor. Now it will be devoted to peace, for the terms of the grant are that the agricultural college and State normal school shall have it for branches of those institutions. It is expected that at least 200 students will be in attendance.—Globe-Democrat.

Women Not Cowardly.

When cowardice is described as a leading feminine attribute somebody makes a huge mistake. Women do the most daring things on record—take chances which would appal a man. They may jump at the sight or mere mention of a harmless mouse, but they court death several times a year. It is one of the traits which makes feminine nature so puzzling. I have known women who were timid to a degree, under ordinary circumstances, come forth as heroines under the pressure of occasion. A woman who shudders at the sight of a small cut from which blood oozes will often exhibit a marvelous courage in a shocking accident. It is beautiful to think that dependence can be placed upon the sex in times of need.

SEPTEMBER ADVERTISING.

Business men differ as to when "ads" are the most productive of results. One heavy advertiser makes a special effort to attract custom in September, when so many people return from the sea shore, mountains and country with new energy, ready to take up neglected enterprises; when the children are to be got ready for school, and when preparations are to be made for winter occupations and pleasures. His purpose is to induce people to get into the habit of dealing with him. Everybody reads the Times.

THE ADVANCE IS STILL GOING ON

British Forces Drawing Daily Nearer to the Portuguese Frontier.

HARD FIGHTING BY GENS. FRENCH AND HUTTON

Buller's Success in Dividing the Army of Botha—Boers Disgusted With Kruger's Flight—Koomatipoort now the Objective Point of Lord Roberts.

London, Sept. 15. According to the Lorenzo Marquez correspondent of the Daily Telegraph Mr. Kruger is virtually a prisoner in the residence of the District Governor. This is at the motion of the British Consul, whose protesting against Mr. Kruger using Portuguese territory as a base for directing movements. The French Consul has been forbidden access to Mr. Kruger, as has also the latter's own officials. The District Governor has notified Herr Patt, the Netherlands Consul, that he, Patt, who had acted as Boer agent at Lorenzo Marquez would no longer be recognized as a leader of the Transvaal, which is British territory. I have had an interview with the American attachee, who is homeward bound, says the correspondent, and he is of the opinion that hostilities may not cease for a considerable time as the Boers are in despair, and may fight for a considerable time—and fight to the last. President Setralburg arrived here to-day (Friday) to consult with President Kruger, but was not permitted to see him and returned immediately.

Lord Roberts reports that General French has heavily engaged in the hills west of Barberton on Thursday, and that Gen. Hutton had gone to reinforce him. Meanwhile Generals Buller, Pole-Carew, Ian Hamilton and others, with Lord Roberts in supreme control, are pressing eastward along the main railway line toward Komatipoort, giving Gen. Botha's scattered commandoes no time to concentrate upon new positions. The English press deals with Kruger's flight to Lorenzo Marques as a fortunate occurance, and as greatly tending to bring about a speedy cessation of hostilities. Lord Roberts is reported to have declared martial law throughout the Transvaal. Botha is said to have resigned command of the Boer army, owing to his disgust at Kruger's flight. The latter is said to be going to Mozambique, a Portuguese possession.

The British Advance Continues.

London, Sept. 14, 1 a.m.—(Special—Kruger's flight has facilitated the policy of the Government. It is still an open question whether Kruger will sail for Europe or remain at Lorenzo Marquez, but in either event he will leave his followers free to give up a hopeless strugle and disband. News from the seat of war is indecisive, but it is clea rthat Lord Roberts is making a concerted movement upon Komatipoort and is directing it personally. General Ian Hamilton is returning to the arilway from Lydenburg. Gen. Pole-Carew is pushing east towards Nelspruit, General French is making for Barberton, and General Buller has divided Botha's forces and cut off a portion of them from communication with the commandos between Nelspruit and Komatipoort. Lydenburg, apparently was abandoned as soon as it was captured, and the British forces are in hot pursuit of the remnant of the Boer army, and driving it eastward to the Portuguese frontier.

Roberts' Bold Tactics.

These tactics are held, but are also in accord with Lord Roberts' otrategy since Frbuary. Komatipoort is the new objective point, and when it is captured Lord Roberts will be credited with having taken possession of the last Dutch railway line, and closed the door into neutral terriroary. The work od pactification will not then have been thoroughly worked out, but the main object will have been secured, as was done when Bloemfontein and Pretoria were occupied.

HELD UP THE TRAIN.

Exciting Night Adventure of Colonel Biggar—Boers Fired on Sleepers.

In a recent letter to relatives Lieut.-Col. Bigger, who assumed Col. Ryerson's duties in South Africa, narrates an exciting incident of his journey from Capt Town to Pretoria, made some few weeks ago.

In company with Dr. Wilson and Lord Lennox, military secretary to Sir Alfred Milner, Col. Bigger slept in the middle compartment of a sleeper. U. S. Consul Stowe was also on the train, which flew the Stars and Stripes. When within 20 miles of Kroonstadt, at about one o'clcok in the morning, the train was brought to a sudden halt. Commandant Theron and his Boers ran the engine on a siding, threw the switch over, upset two cars and poured a volley into the car windows.

Unlike those in other compartments, Col. Bigger ha dnot left his light burning. This as much as anything else, explains his escape, because the Boers afterwards acknowledged that they used the lights as targets.

When the enemy had left, it was found that three deaths had resulted; and that four passengers were wounded. The railway behind had been blown up. The telegraph lines were cut. In front daylight revealed a succession of unfired mines, one being directly below the cars.

Col. Bigger finally reached Pretoria in safety.

WILL AFFECT CANADA.

New Metallurgical Process Will Revolutionize Nickel Production.

A new metallurgical process for the extraction of nickel, copper, and other metals from their ores will, according to the Engineering and Mining Journal of New York, revolutionize the present method of treatment and produce metals at a very low figure. The inventor, Hans A. Frasch, conducted his experiments in the interests of the Nickel-Copper Company of Ontario, Limited, which was originally organized to mine and smelt the ores of Sudbury, leaving refinement in the hands of the Hoepfner Refining Company of Ontario, Limited.

One half the world's supply of nickel, a metal for which the demand is constantly increasing, is derived from the Sudbury deposits. Previously refinement was done in the United States. The new process, however, will build up the Canadian industry. Mining and refining will all be conducted in Canada. As a protective measure (the United States imposes a duty of $120 per short ton for refined nickel, while admitting matte free,) the Dominion Government has placed an export duty of 6 cents per pound of nickel contained on all shipments of matte to the United States.

USING THE CHECK.

Lord Curzon Says Indian Princes Must Not Visit Too Much.

Simila, Sept. 14.—A circular letter published in The Official Gazette indicates the strong line which the Viceroy is taking on the subject of the visits of native princes to Europe. The circular states that the Government considers the repeated absences of such princes as a dereliction of public duty, and that the result is "more often the collection of expensive furniture in the palace and questionable proclivities in the mind of the returned traveller than an increase in his capacity for public or political service. Visits of Indian rulers to Europe will in future only be permitted on grounds of the highest expediency.

The Simla correspondent of the Times observes that the publication of Lord Curzon's letter should have a good effect on chiefs such as the Gaikwar of Baroda and the Maharajah of Kapurthala, who have acquired the costly habit of constantly visiting Europe and leaving their States in charge of dewans.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The Annual Meeting of the Local Historical Society.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Historical Society was held in the Victoria Museum on Thursday afternoon, when the report of the Secretary was read.

The most important matter during the year was the matter of erecting a suitable memorial of the late Isabella Valancey Crawford. Mrs. McFarlane Wilson had been instructed with the looking after of the affair and he understood that the monument was all completed with the exception of the inscription. In explaining how the amount had been raised, the President said that Kit of the Mail, had very kindly forwarded $37, a lecture by Professor Higgon had yielded them $34, and Mrs. Wilson had collected $25.50. The monument had been drafted by Mr. T. A. S. Hay, the secretary of the society.

The inscription to be placed on the monument is—

ISABELLA VALENCEY CRAWFORD,
Born at Dublin, Dec. 25th., 1850,.
Died at Toronto, Feb. 13th., 1887.

The report of the Treasurer, Miss Halliday, was presented, which showed a balance of $4.50 on hand, although no fees had been collected during the past year.

President Rogers spoke of the necessity that existed for additional funds. It was important that the reminiscenses of the old men of the community should be obtained at as early a date as possible.

Secretary Hay's annual report referred to the death of Mrs. Traill, of Lakefield, and to the additions which were constantly being made to the articles in the museum.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The election of officers was then proceeded with and resulted as follows,—

Hon. President—His Honour Judge Weller.

President—Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers.

1st Vice-President—Richard Hall.

2nd Vice-President—J. B. McWilliams.

FIFTEEN BATTLES FOUGHT

THE SECOND CONTINGENT ARE ALL FIGHTERS.

Interesting Letter From Pte. Fred Elmherst, of Keene, to The Times—Interesting Relics on Exhibition at the Times Bookstore.

1st B Squadron, 2nd Contingent,
Canadian South African Field Force,
Pretoria, July 29th, 1900.

Dear Times,—I hereby enclose with this letter a Transvaal relic, viz—the prison regulations of the town of Middleburg, signed by President Kruger.

We are camped at that town at present, and have to tear down buildings to get wood. We tore down the Middleburg prison and I received some badges and the inclosed document from one of the prisoners.

We have had a hard time out here—long marches, little sleep and considerable fighting. Our rations are very good, considering the difficulties of transportation in this country.

We suffer more from the cold and frost at night than we do from hunger or thirst. No doubt you have got full accounts of all our engagements in the Canadian despatches. We have been in action 15 times; I will give you an account of the last 2 or 3 engagements.

When we reached Pretoria, we thought the war was over, but it turned out quite differently. We have been in 2 or 3 warm engagements since then. B and D squadrons have both been surrounded. B escaped by the timely arrival of the New Zealanders, who came to their rescue. D squadron refused a demand to surrender, and dashed through the Boer lines, losing two killed and one prisoner.

At Keltfontein, on July 8th, A and B squadrons had two officers and seven men severely wounded.

The 16th was an unlucky day for us. A and B squadrons, while charging a kopje, had two officers killed and two men mortally wounded. Lieut. Borden fell shot through the heart, with the words, "Boys, I'm done!" Lieut. Burch was shot twice. He just said "Lads, I'm bleeding to death." We had a very impressive military funeral, by moonlight. Corporal Price was cut off with three other men that day. He had a very close call.

Gen. Hutton complimented the Canadians next day, saying that we had inflicted a severe check on the Boers.

We will be in Leydenburg next week and I think that will end the war. I must now close. Yours sincerely,

FRED ELMHIRST.

THEY DID NOT FORGET HIM.

A Scotch Citizen Who Took Part in the Relief of Mafeking.

Edinburg, Sept 8.—Mr. James Buchan, son of ex-Baillie Buchan, of Portobello, was presented with an illuminated address the other day, recording his fellow-townsmen's addreciation and admiration of the prominent part he, with his wife and sister, Miss Crawford, played in the celebrated seige of Mafeking. Mr. Buchan went to Mafeking in April, 1896, and was engaged in the construction of the railway works there belonging to the Rhodesia Railways, Limited. Just before the gallant little town was besieged the Imperial authorities enrolled a large number of townspeople as special constables. The railwaymen, including Mr. Buchan, were formed into the railway division of the town guard, and among other duties they manned the armoured trunk in the action of Oct. 14. The district engineer was made captain of the division, and his chief clerk and Mr. Buchan were lieutenants. Mr. Buchan had charge of one of the forts in the recreation ground, and also the lookout station in the convent, so long as it was occupied by the railwaymen.

A DREAM COMES TRUE.

Mount Vernon, N.Y. Sept. 14.—Mrs. A. E. Schirmer, of 204 North Terrace avenue, Mount Vernon, dreamed last night that burglars were ransacking her home, and awoke to find her dream had become a reality. A thief entered the house by way of a window on the first floor and then ascended to the sleeping apartments of Mr. and Mrs. Schirmer. Walking over to a chair near Mr. Schirner's head the thief calmly ransacked the clothing and took a gold watch and chain and a roll of bills. Then he walked to the dresser and helped himself to several diamond rings belonging to Mrs. Schirmer. While the burglar was searching the room for plunder Mrs. Schirmer awoke from her dream and saw the thief at work. She thought the man was her husband, so she turned over and went to sleep again. When she awoke in the morning she found that the burglar had stolen $700 worth of property.

FEEDING THE RUSSIAN ARMY.

Lessons in Transport and Supplies Learned in South Africa.

Odessa, Sept. 14.—The provisioning of the large bodies of troops which Russia is now rappidly concentrating at various points of her East Asiatic frontier has hitherto given the War Office much anxiety; but according to the Intendantski Journal, the ways and means of meeting all difficulties have now been found.

It is surprisingly contradictory to the generally accepted belief that Siberia, with all its natural fertility, was already in a position to feed ten times the number of its population and still spare some of its breadstuffs for Western export, to find that Russia's Far Eastern army must be sustained chiefly by supplies from European Russia. Hence the great central depots of reserve grain for war purposes are now being heavily drawn upon, and the contents sent by both land and sea to the Far East. The military intendance has already engaged the services of an enormous number of auxiliary bakers for field service. Biscuit is produced in hugh quantities, but will be used only for general consumption in exigent circumstances where the field bakeries are not immediately available. Altogether, the amply equipped field bakeries attached to the Far Eastern forces can turn out 9,000 poods (about 325,000 pounds English) of biscuit in the twenty-four hours. This provision is made, it is officially explained, in view of the commissariat difficulties expected to be encountered in Manchuria and in the province of Pe-chi-Li.

Flesh meat must also be supplied very largely from European Russia, either frozen or tinned, but preferably in the latter shape. In case of need, however, several large refrigerating establishments are to be located in a few of the Baltic and Black Sea ports, and special steamers, with refrigeratings holds, chartered abroad. This is a question not yet finally decided, and the difficulties of the frozen meat cupply may not improbably lead to its entire abandonment in favor of the conserved system. Russia is fairly well stocked with conserved meats, an dthese, with dried vegetables, &c., are already being forwarded in train loads over the Siberian Railway, and in shiploads from this port.

As wholesome water will not be obtainable in many parts of the region in which the Russian forces will later on operate, a plentiful supply of small and easily portable filters will be distributed among the troops, besides which each soldier carries a packet of chemicals for purity. These are details which the British War Office might usefully note, in the light of recent revelations from South Africa.

In the Ussuri and Transbaikal districts a great number of mechanical hay presses are already at work providing fooder for the cavalry. The Commissariat Intendance has now at the front en route eight complete transports each of which consists of 1,000 roomy fourgons, which also assist to carry the extra field hospitals and ambulances, and, when convenient, some of the field bakeries. Part of the general supplies are being shipped oversea from this port to Port Arthur and Vladivostock, and part good by rail and river from Tcheliabinsk to the Amur.

I am informed by a military authority that the completeness and perfection of the various field services in this campaign are largely due to the knowledge acquired by the Russian military attaches lately in South Africa.

Th ehospital ship, as known in South Africa, has also for the first time come into vogue in a Russian campaign. The Russian Company's steamer Czaritsa has been chartered by the Red Cross section unde rthe direction of the Grand Duchess of Leuchtenberg.

THE SITUATION IS NOT YET CLEARED

Varied Reports Regarding the Intentions of the Powers in China.

RUSSIA STILL DETERMINED ON WITHDRAWAL.

An Alleged Ultimatum From St. Petersburg—Allies Demand Punishment of Prince Tuan, which Earl Li Hung Chang Says Cannot be Carried Out.

In our special despatches a few days it was stated that Great Britain had declined to withdraw her troops from Pekin at present. The Associated Press reiterates this statement in its London despatches of yesterday. Japanese troops have arrested a Chinaman a tPekin who claimed that he assassinated Baron Von Ketteler, the German Minister, in accordance with orders from high officials. Additional British troops are arriving at Hong Kong. Russia, it is reported, is still in favor of withdawal from Pekin, but has somewhat modified the original proposition on this point. The Pekin correspondent of the Times says that the opinion prevails there that Germany and Russia are acting in concert, and that the dismemberment of China seems inevitable. Russia is also alleged to have addressed an ultimatum to Li Hung Chang, which the letter says canno. be complied with. The ultimatum, it is said, asks among other things that Prince Tuan and other Boxer leaders be punished.

AWAITING SALISBURY'S RETURN.

London, Sept. 14.—Lord Salisbury's return is awaited by the politicians and leader writers as the signal for the dissolution of Parliament and a revival of activity in diplomacy. The Prime Minister may have a holiday journey, but he can never shirk the responsibilities of office, and Lord Salisbury has been in daily communication with the Foreign Office while in the Vosges. If he had been too ill to conduct to conduct foreign relations Mr. Balfour would have been in Downing street instead of playing golf north of Berwick.

SALISBURY IS RETICENT.

Lord Salisbury has been brooding over China and South Africa in his retirement, just as he does when he is at home in Hatfield, and if he has seemed sluggish in dealing with either question it is probably been because he has not believed that the time for effective action has come. His return will not alter the situation unless he is prepared either to dissolve Parliament or to take a more active part in the Chinese question than he has displayed hitherto. In either case he will not share his secrets with either his colleagues or the daily press.

BRITAIN MAY SUPPORT GERMANY.

Current belief points to British support of the German Emperor in China, but there is no direct evidence that Lord Salisbury has committed himself to any policy, much less to the four conditions of peace which Li Hung Chang has been informed Germany has imposed. A more probably explanation of his course is that he has preferred to remain in the background and allow Russia and Germany to make the first moves in a most difficult problem, and that he will now take a more active part and attempt to bring those powers together and prevent their occupation of Manchuria by the Czar's troops.

THE RUSSIAN REQUEST.

London, Sept. 14.—The Chinese problem has assumed anew phase. A German telegram from Shanghai states that the Emperor must resume the government, guarantee the apprehension and punishment of Prince Tuan and other leaders of the Boxers, and exclude the dowager-Empress from all influence in the government. The despatch adds that Li Hung Chang has declared that these propositions, with the exception of that regarding the Emperor's resumption of control, are unacceptable and has abandoned his journey to the north.

RUSSIA AND GERMANY.

The Pekin correspondent of the Times in a message dated Sept. 4, says that Russia has decided to withdraw her Legation from the capital.

DISMEMBERMENT INEVITABLE.

The British general made no announcement of the policy of the British Parliament. In the best informed quarters in Pekin the opinion is expressed that Russia and Germany are acting in concert. The correspondent adds that the dismemberment of China seems almost inevitable. In an earlier despatch he describes the military promenade through the Forbidden City, and speaks of the prominence and overmastering numbers of the Russians on that occasion.

BRITAIN WILL NOT WITHDRAW.

Britain, Germany, Italy and Austria Acting in Unison.

London, Sept. 13.—Great Britain's reply to the Russian proposition for the evacuation of Pekin was sent two days ago, as the Associated Press forecasted, Great Britain declines to evacuate Pekin prior to receiving satisfactory guarantees from the Chinese Government for the fulfilment of certain conditions. There is general disposition here to accept as mainly correct the statement that all the powers have now replied to the Russian proposal; that Great Britian and Germany have declined to evacuate Pekin; that Austria and Italy have decided to be guided by Germany's decision, and that the others have agreed to a more or less modified withdrawal, as defining the attitude of the powers. According to the suggested compromise arrangement, it is proposed that the strength of the garrison at Pekin, which is to be international, be made dependant on the progress and character of the negotiations with China.

According to a despatch from Shanghai, received to-day, another Imperial edict, dated Tchow, September 8, has been issued, again urging Li Hung Chang forthwith to take the vice-regal seal of the Province of Chili to Pekin, and there co-operation with Prince Ching and General Yung Lu in the re-establishment of peace. In his decree the Emperor assumes the responsibility for the events which have occurred in Pekin, and does not blame Prince Tuan or Kang Yi. The despatch reiterates the assertion that there is strenuous opposition in all the foreign colonies to the acceptance of Yung Lu as a peace negotiator.

The reports of the Chinese raids of the Tonquin and Korean borders are regarded as suggestive, and preparing Europe and the United States for France and Japanese operations in the regions wherein they are respectively interested, similar to the operations of Russia in Manchuria.

FIGHT WITH A SNAKE.

A Young Lady's Terrible Conflict and What Came of It.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 14.—Miss Lulu ZBuck, of Madison, Conn., recently had an exciting fight with a big black snake. When stooping to pick up some paper on the floor her hand grasped something that moved and felt like a piece of rubber hose. She dropped the papers, but not more quickly than a big black snake emerged and struck one of her knees. Miss Buck screamed and the snake slid to the far corner near the door, shutting off retreat and making ready for the fight.

Realization of her danger nerved the young woman to defend herself. She seized a big carving knife. The snake coiled and struck again. Miss Buck aimed a cross blow, but the snake's quick motion of head and neck knocked the knife from her hands. The girl seized a meat axe and swung it quickly, catching the snake about two feet from the head. The snake straightened out and Miss Buck stepped on its tail, dealing death blows.

As her adversary began to crawl away, wounded, Miss Buck struck harder and succeeded in severing its head from its body. The snake was ten feet in length and about two and a half inches in diameter. It is said she is not in danger from the wound in her knee, as it was cauterized at once.

A THRILLING ADVENTURE.

In a recent letter to relatives Lieut. Col. Biggar, who assumed oCl. Ryerson's duties in South Africa, narrates an exciting incident of his journey from Cape Town to Pretoria, made some few weeks ago.

DEATH BY HANGING.

It is the Most Exaggerated of All Modes of Execution.

"I have made the subject of death by hanging a long study," said Dr. D. S. Lamb, an ex-surgeon of the United States army. "From my observations during my experience in the army, I feel justified in saying that death by hanging is the most exaggerated of all modes. It may be immediate and without symptoms, but the subject must pass through three stages before death.

"In the first stage the victim passes into a partial stupor lasting from thirty seconds to two minutes, but this is generally governed by the length of the drop, the weight of the body, and the tightness of the construction. There is absolutely no pain in this stage; the feeling is rather one of pleasure. The subjective symptoms described are intense heat in the head, brilliant flashes of light in the eyes, deafening sounds in the ears, and a heavy, numb feeling in the lungs. In the second stage, the subject passes into unconsciousness, and convulsions usually occur. In the third state all is quiet except the beating of the heart. Just before death the agitation is renewed, but in a different way from that in the second state. The feet are raised, the tongue has a peculiar spasm, the chest heaves the eyes protrude, from the orbits and oscillate from side to side, and the pupils dilate. The pulse can, in most cases, be felt ten minutes after the drop.

"I once knew a man who was desirous of ascertaining if there was any suffering by hanging, and in order to find out he placed a rope around his neck and stepped off a bench, intending to step back again, but he became immediately unconscious, and would have died in a few minutes had it not been for the timely arrival of a friend. He said he experienced all the feelings that I mentioned in the first stage."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Thereupon There Was More Light.

"I was sexton of Grace church when the Rev. Mr. —— was rector there. It was a summer night and rather warm, so when the rector commenced his sermon I turned down the gas in the body of the church to make it a little cooler.

"The text that night was, if I remember it, 'Let there be light.' I was sitting in the rear part of the church, not paying particularly close attention to the sermon, nor, in fact, to anything else. Suddenly the rector exclaimed loudly:

"'More light; More light!'

"I jumped for the stop-cock in the gas supply pipe and turned on the gas full head all over the church. Well, sir, you ought to have seen those people! Some of them laughed right out, and those that didn't had hard work not to. I found out afterward that when the rector said 'More light!' he was not giving directions to me, but quoting the dying words of [illegible]

A Threat.

"I believe we mothers cannot be too careful. Whenever there is any difficulty between my husband and me, I send the children outdoors immediately."

"Very prudent; but, on the other hand, is it good for the children to be obliged to be on the streets from morning to night?"

THE GOLF WIDOW.

Up to Date No Silver Tongued Orator Has Pleaded Her Cause.

For several years now the golf widow's situation has been most pathetic, but she gets very little sympathy from any one save the other golf widows, and they are too busy sympathizing with themselves to feel another's woes. The attitude of the general public toward the stricken one is: "Serves her right. Any one who is fool enough to play the game deserves any hard luck she gets." Your true zealot is proverbially hard-hearted.

A married woman to-day must play golf or give up her husband. Even when she plays she probably has only the melancholy satisfaction of occasionally seeing the fluttering of his golf coat across a far bunker; but that is something. It's a devoted and self-sacrificing man who plays golf with his own wife, save at rare intervals, when no man friend is in sight or when he feels inclined to show his proud superiority by a little valuable instruction. Flattery, judiciously administered, will also bring the family together on the links occasionally. If a wife can only reduce herself to a condition of awe-struck appreciation, and knows just enough about the game to wonder and adore in technical sporting terms, she may be allowed to trail around the links with her husband, but it takes tact to achieve this proud distinction. The most she can hope for under ordinary circumstances is to lunch or dine with her golf-smitten husband, and hear him fight his battles over again; but that is better than dining and lunching alone, and she may prevent complete and final estrangement.

The wife of a cummuter has an especially hard time. He is so hurried and he really doesn't have time to go home at all save for purposes of sleep. Yet, after all, the city man does the same thing, and it is harder for his wife to follow him to the links than it is for the wife of the commuter to follow him, so perhaps honors are easy. The business man doesn't go home from the office to change his clothes. Not he. He keeps golf tog in his locker at the club. As early as he can possibly cut business he leaves the office, races for a train, goes straight to the links, plays until dark and dines at the club house, where he and the other men tell what would have happened if what did happen hadn't happened. Later he goes home so tired and sleepy that he doesn't stand upon the order of his going to bed, but goes at once, unless he stays awake long enough to tell his wife about his phenomenal drive from the sixth tee and the spectacular long put by which he halved the seventh hole. If she doesn't know the tee from lemonade so much the worse for her.

The golfer goes to the office early, so that he can get away early, and in the gray dawn he talk across the breakfast table about the virtues of his new brassey and the approach he has learned from Vardon. Then he goes off, wondering whether the weather will be too heavy for good work across the green, and calling back over his shoulder that he will not be at home for dinner unless it rains hard.

Countless golf widows are praying for rain as ardently as a Texas farmer in time of drought. A wet season is their only hope, and the wetness must be of the wettest variety. No ordinary drizzle will stop a golf game. No thunder shower will daunt a golf fiend.

"Over at home," says Willie, (every well regulated and warranted golf professional is a Willie, though there is some slight variety in our names), "no one wad think o' stopping for a Scotch mist, and any Scotch mist is a deal worse than this bit of drizzle."

And the American devotees of the ancient royal game turn up their coat collars, take a grip upon their clubs and their stiocism and paddle around the links, warmed by the thought that they are living up to Scotch tradition and that the quality of the clubhouse "Scotch" is beyond reproach.

So only a summer of continuous and pouring rain can restore the golfing husband to the arms of a non-golfing wife, and, if there is anything in prayer, it's a lucky thing for the general public that the golfers are praying for fair weather as earnestly as the golf widows are praying for foul, and that the former class outnumber the latter.

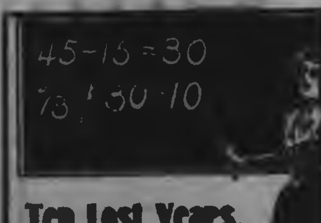
Saturday and Sunday used to be the days for domestic joys, with the tired business man. They are field days now, and the insidious thing about the game is that there's no age limit immunity from attacks of the disease. Anything from the infant to the octogenarian is fair prey for the golf germ, and only paralysis or blindness can make masculinity immune. Local attacks of morality have stopped Sunday playing in certain clubs and there has been a good deal of eloquent arguing for and against it. There's no denying that a day on the links is a tremendous physical invigorator for a man confined to an office during the week, and when one gets into the morals of the problem the issues are sadly complicated, but there's the golf widow. Some concession ought to be made to her; but, up to date, no silver-tongued orator has pleaded her cause.

On the whole, the best thing the deserted wives can do is to get into the game, whether they like it or not. They may hate violent exercise, and the sun may give them headaches and ruin their complexions, and they may find golfing so fatiguing and time-consuming that it leaves no time or energy for social duties or care of home and children; but, if they are going to leave all things and cleave to their husbands, they will have to do their cleaving on the golf links. If health or home cares absolutely prevent their playing the game, they will have to summon their feminine fortitude and resign themselves to the role of golf widow.

"Mrs. Strongmind is a warm advocate of women's rights, is she not?" "Oh, yes. If she had her way, man would not be eligible for anything more important than the vice-presidency."—Brooklyn Life.

SEPTEMBER ADVERTISING.

Business men differ as to when "ads" are the most productive of results. One heavy advertiser makes a special effort to attract custom in September, when so many people return from the sea shore, mountains and country with new energy, ready to take up neglected enterprises; when the children are to be got ready for school, and when preparations are to be made for winter occupations and pleasures. His purpose is to induce people to get into the habit of dealing with him. Everybody reads the Times.



Ten Lost Years.

Figure it for yourself. From the age of fifteen to that of forty-five a woman gives one-third of her time to the suffering incident to the recurring periodic function. Ten years of suffering! And this condition of things is popularly accepted as natural, and endured as a feminine disability for which there is no help! Is there no help? There is help for every woman and for almost every woman perfect healing in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It insures regularity, dries the drains which weaken women, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It is a temperance medicine—non-alcoholic and non-narcotic.

"I was so weak I did not have breath to walk across my room," writes Miss Isabel Miller, of New Providence, Calloway Co., Ky. "My periods occurred too often and the hemorrhage would be prolonged and the loss of blood very excessive. I also had spells which the doctor said were fainting fits. I did not gain strength from one monthly period to another; was very weak and nervous all the time. Was confined to my bed for three months and the doctor told me I would never be any better. I lived in this way from sixteen years old to twenty-three. I was at last advised by a kind friend to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which I did, and before I had taken two bottles of it I could work all day. I took in all six bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' and about five vials of Dr. Pierce's Pellets. I used no other medicine. I have never had a return of this trouble since."

RETIRED.

The strong tide breaks upon the narrow pier,
The ships go by; and one who knew them well
Sits at the close of day, and sits alone

Captain no more! But he remembers yet
The little town in dear old Maryland
Where first he learned by star and wind and tide
The track of the ocean, and the way of war,
Upon the wave that smote his native land.

Now all is done: a warship rides the bay,
With shining hull and blackened funnels high,
And his old heart leaps at its prisoned side,
For that his boy is there! He minds the time
When little arms were twined upon his neck,
And ears bent low to hear the thrilling tale
Of ships that fought in battles long ago.

He thinks of her who stood beside him then
With shining eyes—the light-house of his heart—
And outward passed, like to a little sail,
That, rocking in the mist, returns no more.

So comes the dusk; he hears the booming gun,
He sees the lowered flag, the night-lamps set;
And watching on the pier he falls asleep,
And dreams of golden anchors far away.

—John J. Meehan, in Leslie's Weekly.

MY DOUBLE DILEMMA.

Thoroughly tired of the pier, the esplanade, and the tennis-court, one afternoon, during my stay at the seaside, I took a solitary ramble round the coast.

With the tall cliffs on one side of me and a vast expanse of ocean on the other, I made my way over sand and shingle, careless of everything save the appearance of my immaculate flannel trousers, until the town of Brinybay was hidden by a chalk promontory, and I found myself alone, or apparently alone, with Nature.

As, however, I approached an irregular mass of rock lying together at the foot of the cliff, a scarlet object appearing above them attracted my attention, and, on nearing the spot, I discovered it was a parasol shading one of the most bewitching girls I had ever beheld in my life—and I have seen a good many.

Comfortably seated on a mossy boulder and deep in the perusal of a yellow-backed volume, she was becomingly attired in a dress of pale pink, and as I passed her I fancied she peeped at me from beneath her shady straw hat; but young men always think that girls notice them, especially when like myself, they are Oxford undergraduates with their college arms emblazoned on the breast of their blue serge jackets.

I had not left this siren very far behind when my progress was suddenly brought to a stop by the sea, which had covered the beach and was lashing the base of the cliff. I at once realised the unpleasant fact that the tide was flowing, and that if I did not speedily retrace my steps, my return to Brinybay would be prevented in the same manner as my advance.

Hastening back, and passing the maiden in pink, who was reading as unconcernedly as ever, I again found my path barred by a sheet of water several yards in width. I was completely shut off from the mainland.

To scale the cliff was utterly impossible, and although I might have resumed my homeward course after wading through the water, I could not have deserted the fair girl near me, who was evidently unconscious of her critical situation. The waves were rapidly advancing towards the rocks among which she was seated, and the seaweed clinging to them told me that at high water they were totally submerged.

Approaching the parasol, I coughed.

"Excuse me," I said, "but the tide is coming in very fast, and, I am afraid, will soon be up here."

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed, blushing, and hurriedly looking around her. "Oh, dear, how very stupid of me not to notice it; whatever shall I do?"

"The only possible way of getting back," I remarked, as she slowly closed her book and left her seat, "is across this piece of water, but it is rather deep."

In silence she followed me to the spot, and after gazing upon the fast-widening barrier, looked up at me and smiled.

"I think I know how we can overcome the difficulty," I said, "but I hope you won't be offended at my suggestion."

"Oh, no, no," she exclaimed, with a little laugh; "anything as long as I can get out of this horrid fix."

"Then, I believe I could manage to carry you across, if you wouldn't object," I said, after some hesitation.

Another smile illumined her fair countenance, and she replied in tones of the deepest sincerity—

"Oh, thank you, thank you; I should feel so grateful if you would, so very much obliged."

Throwing off my shoes and socks, and tucking up my immaculate ones, I put the yellow-covered book into one of my capacious pockets, deposited my stick with the scarlet parasol on the beach and gently lifting its fair owner in my arms, in another moment had forded the water and deposited her on terra firma.

She returned with me to Brinybay. Her thanks were overwhelming, and ere long we were chatting together like a couple of old friends.

A proposal I made for taking her mother for a sail in my yacht pleased her more than ever, and when I parted with her near the pier—though ignorant of her name and connection—I thought she was the most charming girl I had met with for a long time.

On arriving at my apartments I found that the yellow-covered volume which she had entrusted to my care was still in my pocket. I opened it and found on the title-page the following: "Bessie Cragg, Sea View Villa, Brinybay."

Not displeased at my discovery, I penned a polite little note to "Miss Cragg"—who was evidently the bewitching possessor of the scarlet parasol—in which, after briefly referring to her book, I had the boldness to fix a day for the proposed yatching expedition.

Neatly enclosing the epistle with the volume, I left the parcel that evening at Sea View Villa.

Next morning I was told that a gentleman desired to speak to me in private. I ordered my landlady to show the visitor in, and forthwith a black-looking man, of middle age, entered my parlor.

"Mr. Lyon, I presume?" he began, eyeing me unpleasantly.

"I am Mr. Lyon; what is it?" I said, annoyed at the stranger's manner.

"What is it?" he sneered; "what is it, indeed young man! What do you mean by sending my wife such stuff as this, and by asking her to accompany you in a yacht, etc., you impertinent fellow?" and he threw my little note to Bessie Cragg on to the table.

"Your wife?" I exclaimed in confusion, "your wife, sir? I think you are in error; I think that you have made a mistake, sir."

"Mistake!" cried the stranger fiercely; "mistake—fiddlesticks. I am Mr. Joseph Cragg, young man, and if ever I catch you insulting my wife with another such billet doux it's ten to one you won't have a chance of repeating the offense!"

With this terrible threat, my visitor left the house.

I threw myself into a chair and groaned aloud—a pretty ending, forsooth, to the romantic incident of the preceding day.

During the next week I had little bliss; it made me miserable to think that fair and frolicsome Bessie was bound for life to such a wolfish monster as Joseph Cragg.

On reflection, I wondered why she hadn't informed her husband of her adventure by the seaside (for I presumed he was unaware of it.) and why, when she was with me, she had appeared so eager to accept my invitation.

I met Mrs. Cragg several times alone in the town and on the pier, but always passed her without any token of recognition. On one occasion I fancied she smiled faintly at me, but taking no notice of her familiarity, I thought, for a married person, that her behaviour was extremely improper.

Just a week after my eventful ramble round the coast, while strolling listlessly on the esplande, I was surprised on being accosted by a pleasant-looking old lady who, grasping my hand, exclaimed—

"Are you the gentleman that saved my dear little Marie from being drowned when almost caught by the tide some days ago?"

I was absolutely bewildered, nor was it until I was seated in the gushing old lady's drawing-room conversing with her and her fair grand-daughter Marie—the identical possessor of the scarlet parasol—that an explanation of the whole affair took place.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cragg was a friend of Marie's and had lent her the yellow-backed volume which, on being returned to its original owner, had fallen into the hands of Mr. Cragg.

Without showing either the book or the note to his wife, this gentleman had opened the letter with the above recorded unpleasant result.

It may interest the reader to know that Marie and I took our yachting trip as proposed, and thoroughly enjoyed it, too; but beyond the information contained in the appending newspaper cutting, I cannot furnish further particulars of the consequences of my eventful ramble when, although I eluded the clutches of Neptune, I fell a victim to the snares of Cupid.

Lyon—Brading.—August 4, at St. Old's, Brinybay, by the Rector, the Rev. P. Prosy, M. A., Charles Lyon, eldest son of John Lyon, Esq., of Harrowfield, Hants, to Maria, daughter of Colonel John Brading, Royal Slashers.

How to Read the Tongue.

The perfect tongue is clean, moist, lies loosely in the mouth, is round at the edge and has no prominent papilae.

The tongue may be furred from local cause or from sympathy with the stomach, intestines or liver.

The dry tongue occurs most frequently in fever and indicates a nervous prostration or depression.

A white tongue is diagnostic simply of the feverish condition, with perhaps a sour stomach. When it is moist and yellowish brown it shows disordered digestion. Dry and brown indicates a low state of the system, possibly typhoid.

When the tongue is dry and red and smooth, look out for inflammation, gastic or intestinal.

When the papilae on the end of the tongue are raised and very red it is called a strawberry tongue, and that means scarlet fever.

Sharp pointed red tongue will hint of brain irritation or inflammation, and a yellow coating indicates liver derangement.

The world contains an oversupply of average man.

The gold handled by adentists always at a premium.

Why There are Heroic Jims.

"Why is it," the girl asked, "that the brave boys who are not appreciated at home—who are regarded as black sheep by the rest of the family, and go to war where they fall while carrying the beloved flag of our country up the rocky slopes—why is it that these noble fellows are always named Jim? I have read a hundred poems about them during the last year or two and every one of them was Jim. Is it merely a coincidence, or can there be somehing in a name, after all?"

"It is not a coincidence," the cynic beside her answered. "I's the name that makes them heroic. Juliet said a rose by any other name would smell as sweet, but Jim by any other name could not have poems written about him. Just think of the possibilities presented by slim, trim, vim, him, brim grim, dim, whim, glim, rim, limb, not to mention cherubim, seraphim and a lot more long words that could be used in a pinch. Jim is one of the boys that have glory thrust upon them."—Chicago Times-Herald.

This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the Sunshine, located two miles east of Salida at Cleora Station, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, also on the Arkansas river, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

The record of Hood's Sarsaparilla is literally written in the blood of millions of people to whom it has given good health. The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other goods offered for sale in our store.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

The Times' Megaphone.

The very thing for Stony Lake cottagers and campers. It will carry the voice half a mile to a mile and a half. Made in two sizes. Price $1.25 and $1.00. Every cottager should have one.

No Special Train.

The parties having the matter in charge were unable to arrange for a special train service to Port Hope today. This will be a great disappointment to many, who had planned to hear the Conservative leaders. The next best thing for them to do, however, is to purchase a copy of Monday's Times with a report of the proceedings.

County Maps.

There are still a few copies of the new maps of the County of Peterborough, left. Order one before it is too late. Price, Mounted on roller, $2; paper 50c. Times Bookstore.

An Ambulance.

That there is great danger in the present methods of using ordinary hacks for conveying patients suffering from contageous diseases to the hospitals, few will deny. There should be something done at once to provide an ambulance for the use of the hospitals. A suggestion has been made to the Times that an arrangement might be made to keep an ambulance wagon in the fire hall.

A Flying Leap.

Yesterday evening a prominent young professional man took a flying leap over a stick of timber that was being drawn through the town, at the corner of George and Hunter streets. He evidently miscalculated the distance of his jump, for he did not quite clear the "hurdle." When he recovered himself, and dusted the mud from his spotless pants and coats, and picked up his Christie Stiff, which had been thrown 20 feet further on, he walked off with the air of a martyr.

THE BEST ADVERTISING.

When a business man admits by a painted sign or a display window that he wants business he can give one of but three reasons if he fail to advertise in the newspapers, viz. That the amount of business in his line in the community is too small to warrant the expense; that he lacks the money required for the best form of advertising, or that his judgment is bad and is not influenced by obvious facts. The most successful business men are the most persistent of newpaper advertisers. Everybody reads the Times.

AT THE POLICE COURT.

A Number of Cases Disposed of Yesterday by the Magistrate.

There were a number of cases disposed at the Police Court yesterday, the most important being one in which a young man was charged with dangerous driving. It appears that defendant was driving a team on the right side of George-st. one evening when he overtook a lady and gentleman riding wheels. The cyclists were on the extreme right side of the road and so close were they followed by the team that the lady became frightened, and turning suddenly to the left come in contact with her companion. During the mix-up the team passed to the right side, when according to the rules of the road it should have passed to the left. The Magistrate spoke strongly when dealing with the case, and gave him some good advice and fined him $5, which he paid.

The action of Laplante vs. Clancy, for destruction of a window, was laid over until Monday.

Mrs. Ada Spencely, for assaulting Maud Wilson, was fined $1.

Their Great Superiority over all other ways of Home Dyeing—A Ten Cent Package Will Color from One to Five Pounds of Goods—Colors that Will Not Wash Out in Strong Soapsuds.

Success in home dyeing depends wholly upon the kind of dyes used. With Diamond Dyes, if the simple directions on the package are followed carefully, and the special dyes for cotton are used for cotton and mixed goods, and the wool dyes used for all-wool goods, there is absolutely no chance of failure.

Diamond Dyes are very simple and easy to use, and by using a stick to lift the goods while in the dye bath, there is no need of soiling the hands. For beauty, brilliancy and fastness, no other dye-stuffs, whether for home use or for the dye-shop, equal the Diamond. The latest scientific discoveries are used in their manufacture, they are guaranteed the strongest and fastest of all known dyes, and will not wash out in the strongest soapsuds, nor will they fade when exposed to the sunlight.

Try Diamond Dyes once, and see how easily it is to make old and faded dresses, waists, ribbons, capes, jackets, etc., look like new.

RELICS OF THE WAR.

The Times has a Document With Kruger's Signature.

The Times received yesterday from Private Fred Elmhirst, a copy of the prison regulations of the town of Middleburg, taken from a prisoner, containing the written signatures of Paul Kruger and Dr. Leyds.

We have also on exhibition a copy of a late issue the official paper of the Transvaal Republic.

These very interesting documents are on exhibition in the window of the Times Bookstore.

The Late David Rose.

Norwood Register.—Mr. David Rose, late of the Township of Dummer, who died at Souris, Man., on the 31st ult., was born in Moreyshire, Scotland, in the year 1827. He came to Canada in the year 1832. He filled very many important offices in Dummer during his 59 years' residence there including the offices of Reeve and Township Treasurer and was for a number of years extensively engaged in lumbering operations. In politics he was a prominent and consistent Conservative. Four of his sons took up homesteads near Souris, and having lost the dearest of all friends his wife, about twelve years ago, he decided to also go west, which he did about nine years ago, in order to be in closer touch with his family. Three sons, John, Duncan, and Rev. George, remain in this neighborhood. The sad news came like a thunderbolt on his large circle of friends here, for he had written a few days ago to one of them, expressing his intention to visit old Dummer again this winter to renew old associations, and also his thankfulness for his continued good health.

It can be truthfully said Mr. Rose had not an enemy in all the surrounding country where he was known, and that the expressions of sorrow when his demise became known were sincere and general. He was 73 years of age.

ARITHMETIC AND FOOD.

School Children Must be Better Fed.

A young girl in Newport, Ind., Miss Ethel Thornton, says no one has a better right to speak of Grape-Nuts food than she. "I was in school, but in poor health, until Mamma began to give me Grape-Nuts food. I began to improve at once, both mentally and physically, and I improved so in my work at school that I got 100 in arithmetic, and during that time I gained 3 or 4 pounds in weight and am still gaining.

"There is no one has a right to recommend the food more highly than I. Mamma neglected to supply it for about three weeks, and I began to fail in helth again, so I commenced the use of the food over, and now I don't intend to do without Grape-Nuts on table."

It is well for parents to know that Grape-Nuts food contains selected elements from the grains, prepared and cooked in such a way as to present these food elements so that they can be quickly digested and assimilated; the phosphate of potash obtained from the field grains, and contained in Grape-Nuts unites with the albumen of food to quickly rebuild the gray matter in the nerve centers and brain.

It is of the greatest importance that growing children and students be given food that substains both brain and nerves.

Jiggers and the Soldiers.

One of the most annoying pests of the tropical countries, particularly of the West Indies, which we have taken into Uncle Sam's family, is the jigger. It was one of the afflictions of our army before Santiago, and nearly every soldier who returned from Cuba could tell fearsome tales of the ravages of the dear little thing. True to human nature, as the cynic would say, it is the female which makes trouble for man. She bores with her head into the human skin and stays there. The large quantity of eggs which she takes in with her swell her to the size of a pea, the color being white. This results in a small ulcer which inflames in the course of a few days. If the parasite isn't removed inflammation increases and in the course of it the jigger eliminates itself.

At the beginning the pain is so slight that usually it is not noticed. But the festering would, if not cleaned, as in the case of all neglected wounds, cause serious inflammation, gangrene, and even general blood poisoning. As the jigger lives in the ground, it usually seeks the feet of its victim, so that the mode of prevention and the treatment are easy. Thick boots or high boots are good protection. Peru balsam is rubbed into the socks. As soon as a jigger is noticed it should be removed with the greatest care. The wound should be cleaned out and if kept clean it usually heals quickly. If, in the removing of the jigger, the parasite is lacerated, blood poisoning and severe inflammation are sure to result. German soldiers in east Africa are afflicted with jiggers sometimes, through carelessness in not attending to the feet. This neglect is punished, because it prevents soldiers from marching, when care and attention would have kept their feet in good condition.

DEATH BY HANGING.

It is the Most Exaggerated of All Mode of Execution.

"I have made the subject of death by hanging a long study," said Dr. D. S. Lamb, an ex-surgeon of the United States army. "From my observations during my experience in the army, I feel justified in saying that death by hanging is the most exaggerated of all modes. It may be immediate and without symptoms, but the subject must pass through three stages before death.

"In the first stage the victim passes into a partial stupor lasting from thirty seconds to two minutes, but this is generally governed by the length of the drop, the weight of the body, and the tightness of the construction. There is absolutely no pain in this stage; the feeling is rather one of pleasure. The subjective symptoms described are intense heat in the head, brilliant flashes of light in the eyes, deafening sounds in the ears, and a heavy, numb feeling in the lungs. In the second stage, the subject passes into unconsciousness, and convulsions usually occur. In the third state all is quiet except the beating of the heart. Just before death the agitation is renewed, but in a different way from that in the second state. The feet are raised, the tongue has a peculiar spasm, the chest heaves the eyes protrude, from the orbits and oscillate from side to side, and the pupils dilate. The pulse can, in most cases, be felt ten minutes after the drop.

"I once knew a man who was desirous of ascertaining if there was any suffering by hanging, and in order to find out he placed a rope around his neck and stepped off a bench, intending to step back again, but he became immediately unconscious, and would have died in a few minutes had it not been for the timely arrival of a friend. He said he experienced all the feelings that I mentioned in the first stage."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Thereupon There Was More Light.

"I was sexton of Grace church when the Rev. Mr. —— was rector there. It was a summer night and rather warm, so when the rector commenced his sermon I turned down the gas in the body of the church to make it a little cooler.

"The text that night was, if I remember it, 'Let there be light.' I was sitting in the rear part of the church, not paying particularly close attention to the sermon, nor, in fact, to anything else. Suddenly the rector exclaimed loudly:

"'More light; More light!'

"I jumped for the stop-cock in the gas supply pipe and turned on the gas full head all over the church. Well, sir, you ought to have seen those people! Some of them laughed right out, and those that didn't had hard work not to. I found out afterward that when the rector said 'More light!' he was not giving directions to me, but quoting the dying words of Goethe."—[illegible]

Offensive Partizanship

Editor Morning Times

Sir.—A paragraph appeared in an evening paper on Thursday to the effect that a certain party had offered to wager $500 against half the amount that the Liberals would be returned to power at the next election.

The item went on to say that the bet was not taken, and the party to whom it was made was forced to "crawl into his hole."

Now, Sir, it is just such things as this that does the Liberal party harm and that will elect Mr. Kendry. Honest, decent citizens have no use for men who are bluffers, and who make almost every matter a subject of a bet.

If I were a better man I would wager a guinea that the party who offered the wager as well as the newspaper that published the item, is a Conservative in disguise.

PORT HOPE'S BIG DEMONSTRATION TO THE CONSERVATIVE LEADERS

A Royal Welcome Accorded Sir Charles Tupper, Hon. Hugh John Macdonald and Hon. George E. Foster.

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE CHEER THE CHIEFS

"Hugh John" Receives an Ovation and Captures the Crowd.

Sir Charles Tupper is in Fine Fettle and Delivers a Capital Speech.

Town Crowded with Cheering Multitudes to Honor the Great Triumvirate.

Saturday was a great day in Port Hope. If the immense crowd which came to see and hear the Conservative leaders has any connection with the state of public feeling, it means an overwhelming change of sentiment on the part of the electorate. If this idea is correct, and thus obtains elsewhere in the same proportion, there is no doubt whatever as to the triumph of the Conservative party. Saturday's demonstration was a spontaneous outburst of the people, who were delighted to welcome the great Conservative chieftain, and do honor to "Hugh John," the great son of Canada's greatest statesman, the late Right Honourable Sir John A. Macdonald. It was not alone the Conservatives who welcomed the leader, it was a greeting from Liberals as well.

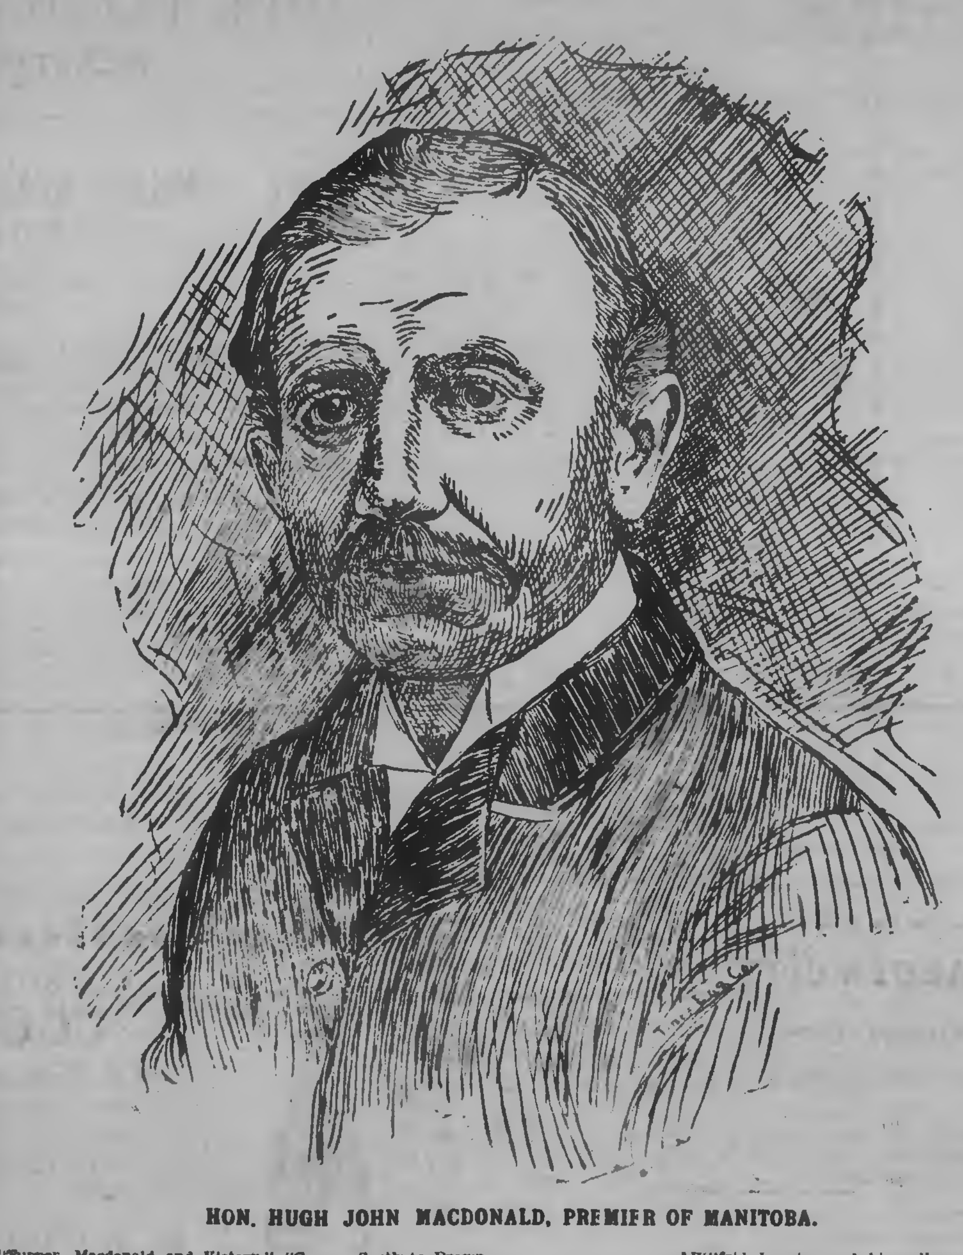
The appearance of "Hugh John" has certainly been greeted with boundless enthusiasm, not only in Port Hope, but also all along the line, wherever he has appeared. He could not speak for some time, and as he proceeded he was cheered again and again. It recalled to the older ones the chieftain who had so often led them to victory, the man around whose memory centered the imperial sentiment now finding such widespread expression. To the young men the magnetism of Manitoba's Premier, the amiable manner of the man, his sincerity of purpose and record of straightforwardness won all hearts at once.

Long before the time for opening the doors, the streets leading to the spacious drill shed were thronged with people. Hundreds of ladies were in the crowd, and appeared to be quite as enthusiastic as their male escorts.

The decorations were profuse and appropriate, the various mottoes being distinctly so. "Welcome to our Leaders," "Tupper, Macdonald and Victory," "Canada's Grand Old Man," &c., &., were amongst the most conspicuous placards.

On the arrival of the train at 7 o'clock, with the distinguished visitors, a torchlight procession was formed, headed by Ald. C. A. Hagerman, Grand Marshall, on horseback, and the Sons' of England Band. The procession paraded the following streets—

Down John street to Walton
Walton to Mill
Mill to Peter
Peter to King
King to Ward
Ward to Mill
Mill to Walton
Walton to Pine
Pine to South
South to Brown,
Brown to Walton
Walton to Queen
Queen to Drill Shed.



HON. HUGH JOHN MACDONALD, PREMIER OF MANITOBA.

The doors of the shed were kept closed until the arrival of the procession.

The carriages containing the visitors were lighted by six torches, in charge of Messrs. John N. Brown, Geo. Walker, Thos. Lewis, Geo. Gamble, C. A. Merrifield and James Fleming, Jr. Torchbearers to the number of about 400 followed in line, and behind them came Mr. R. W. Smart on horseback, whose duty it was to see that their ranks were not broken by conveyances or otherwise. Then followed a detachment of horsemen and a long line of private carriages.

On the route the greatest enthusiasm prevailed, ringing cheers greeted the chieftain and his party at every step.

On arriving at the drill shed every inch of space was soon filled, and after order had been restored, the chairman opened the proceedings.

SIR CHARLES' SPEECH.

Sir Charles Tupper was in fine voice and spoke with all his old time vigour. His arraignment of the Government was a masterly one, and cheer followed cheer as he illustrated how completely Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues had violated their pledges to the people and trifled with the interests of Canada. His position on the great question of reciprocal preferential trade, so important to Canada and so important to the Empire, was once more so clearly defined as to admit of no misunderstanding. The Conservative policy is a tariff to protect the industries of Canada and the working men of Canada, but a fair and reasonble preference to the Mother Country in return for a preference for colonial products in her market.

MANITOBA'S PREMIER.

Hon. Hugh John Macdonald bears so striking a resemblance to his father that it seemed almost as if the old leader himself were present at times. He modestly thanked the audience for the grand reception accorded him, which he said he felt was because he was his father's son. He paid a glowing tribute to Sir Charles Tupper, his honoured leader, at whose solicitation he had himself re-entered Dominion public life. He reminded the audience how, side by side with Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir Charles had laboured to promote the union, progress and welfare of Canada. With a confidence which had the ring of sincerity he expressed the opinion that in the coming elections Sir Charles and the Conservative party would be triumphantly returned to power. He contrasted the conditions of the two parties in 1896 with the conditions to-day, speaking with the utmost frankness of the state of affairs preceding the last general election. He admitted the country had prospered since the present Government came into power, but no man could point to a single act of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's which had brought about or assisted in that prosperity. He illustrated his points with happily told stories which sent the audience into roars of laughter.

"Hugh John," as the people will insist on calling him, made a splendid impression and closed amidst cheers lasting for several minutes.

HON. GEO. E. FOSTER.

After the applause had subsided, the Chairman introduced Hon. George E. Foster, who for an hour engaged the closest attention of the audience with an arraignment of the Liberal leaders so withering in sarcasm, so replete with illustrations of violated pledges, so convincing in argument as no report could do justice to it. His words can be reproduced but the ringing tones of denunciation, the scathing manner in which his happy anecdotes were applied has not been excelled in any previous speech. It was a grand meeting as he said and he seemed inspired by the splendid audience and the enthusiasm of the occasion.

Short speeches were made by others. Then, after a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting broke up with cheers for the Queen and the party leaders.

It was a meeting which in the representative character of those who attended, the number and enthusiasm of the audience, and the importance of the occasion and eloquence of the speeches will stand out as one of Port Hope's historic events.

LOOTING HAS NOT YET BEEN FINISHED

LI STARTS OUT FOR PEKIN

Boxers to the West of Pekin Escape From the Pursuit of the Allied Troops.

Shanghai, Sept. 14.—Earl Li Hung-Chang has started north. It is reported that the Germans intend seizing the Grand canal at several points in order to protect their interests in Shan Tung.

BOXERS HAVE ESCAPED.

Taku, Wednesday, Sept. 12.—The Boxers, against whom an expedition of allies was sent to the westward, had left the vicinity of Tu Liu four days previous to the arrival of the troops. The German and the American legation guards have returned to the ships.

LOOTING AT PEKIN.

Pekin, Sept. 3, via. Taku, Sept. 7, via. Shanghai, Sept. 13.—Looting in Pekin continues, both authorized and un-authorized. Few houses are guarded except those occupied by foreigners, the palaces and those in the Sacred City. Already every house is destitute of furniture. Gen. Chaffee says he could not have believed that any city would ever be given over so completely to looters; and he earnestly desires the co-operation of any nation to prevent this.

On the other hand, the missionaries complain because the Sacred City has not been looted.

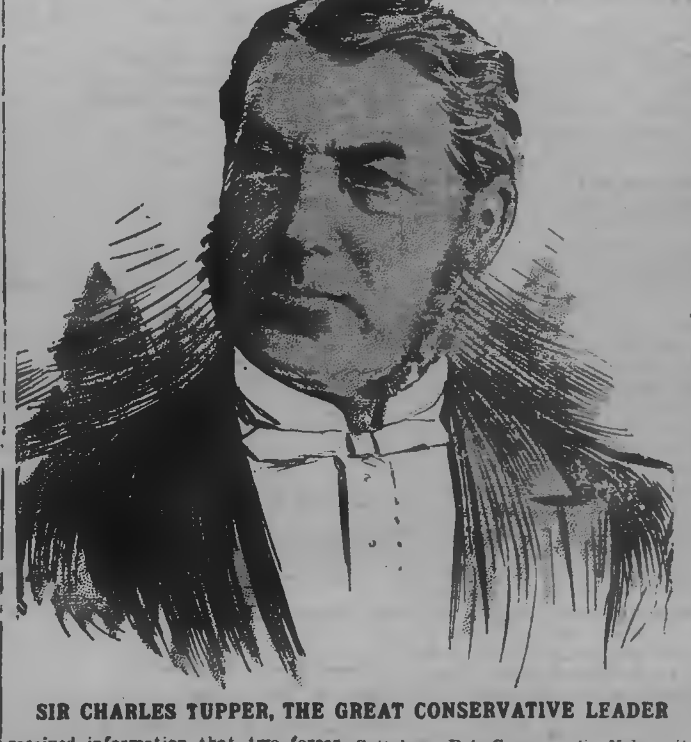
They urge that the royal family and other highly placed Chinese personages who were behind all the trouble should be made to suffer more than those who blindly followed them.

BRUTAL OUTRAGES.

Gen. Fukushima, the Japanese commander, informed Gen. Chaffee that brutal outrages were being committed in Tung Crow. He told the American commander that he had positive information that many women had thrown themselves into wells or committed suicide; in other authentic cases of coolies who had been killed under peculiarly atrocious conditions. He requested Gen. Chaffee to investigate and then to co-operate with him to check these barbarities as far as possible. Gen Chaffee ordered Major Muir to proceed immediately to Tung Chow and to report.

At a council of generals to-day the Russian General Linovitch said he had received information that two forces of Boxers, one numbering 10,000 and the other 4,000 were marching from the south to endeavor to cut the communications of the allies between Pekin and Tien Tsin. It was finally decided that the line was suffcently guarded, as the allies would certainly receive definite tidings of the approach of the Boxers in time to mobilize at any given point. The council merely issued orders for increased vigilance on the part of the outposts.

The telegraph line has been closed against press messages because of enormous Government business.



SIR CHARLES TUPPER, THE GREAT CONSERVATIVE LEADER

FRENCH SURPRISES BOERS AT BARBERTON

Forty-Three Locomotiues and a Great Quantity of Rolling Stock Captured.

A HUNDRED BOERS TAKEN, WITH MANY CONVOYS

Lisbon, Sept. 16.
The newspapers here say that Mr. Kruger will take the German steamer Hergogate from Lourenzo Marques, his destination being Holland by way of Marseilles.

Lisbon, Sept. 15.
The Portuguest Government has telegraphed to the Governor of Mesambique authorizing the departure of Mr. Kruger for Europe. The Governor, however, must satisfy himself that Mr. Kruger is really going to Europe. Meanwhile he is instructed to take all precautions to safe guard the personal security of Mr. Kruger.

Cape Town, Sept. 16.
The military authorities have taken over the Netherlands railway. General Macdonald, operating in the northeastern corner of Orange River Colony, compelled the Boers to take a hasty flight from the Vaal River. He captured 31 wagons, a quantity of cattle and stores, and 65,000 rounds of rifle ammunition.

London, Sept. 15.—Another brillant piece of work by General French. another Boer force surprised by an audacious move; another striking illustration of the highest development of cavalry tactics. Barberton, towards which the general has been struggling for over a week past, through the intricate mountain passes, has been captured by a clever and daring coup which affords a fitting parallel to the dash upon Kimberley on February 15th. Leaving his infantry column at the Komati river, General French led his cavalry brigades across the mountains separating him from Barberton, and was able to come upon the Boers so suddenly at this place that they had no time to carry off their rolling stock or to save convoys of supplies which were on the way to various outposts from Barberton, which appears to have been the base for operations south and east of the Delagoa Bay line, which includes the Natal border. He is now in possession of Barberton, which is the terminus of a branch running towards the main railways, the use of which will facilitate the further progress of French towards Komatipoort. General French was yesterday twenty-five miles ahead of his infantry, which was then struggling with the difficulties of the mountain passes, but may be expected to join him to-morrow The most difficult part of General French's flanking movement upon Komatipoort is completed and when he continues his march he will be close upon the railway, with the British centre, under Pole-Carew, near at hand to support him. With the occupation of Barberton the town of Nelspruit, to the north, for some time the refuge of Kruger, will be laid open to occupation, and Pole-Carew will now advance from Godwin Station in that direction. This will place the British army exactly in line with Buller at Spitzkop, Pole-Carew at Nelspruit and French at Barberton, a distance of fifty miles separating the extreme right from the extreme left wing. The news that President Kruger is practically a prisoner of the Portuguese, though now confirmed, is positively true, and it is quite possible that the surrender of the ex-President may be one of the historical events of the near future. There is, of course, the possibility that Portugal may be taking care of Kruger until he is ready to sail, and thereby preventing any overt act upon his part while on neutral territory.

Twenty-Three Officers and Fifty-Nine Men Released—Brilliant Work.

Hart's Brigade Surprises and Bags a Number of Boers at Potchefstroom.

WORK OF GENERAL FRENCH

London, Sept. 15.—Lord Roberts reports to the War Office under date of Machadodop, Sept. 14, as follows.

"French occupied Barberton yesterday with the cavalry which he took across the mountains. He met slight opposition, the enemy being completely surprised. Twenty-three officers and fifty-nine men, who were prisoners, were released, and fourty-three locomotives and other rolling stock were captured. The former will relieve us of great difficulty, as we had to put up with a few days rickety engines.

"French reports that be has sufficient supplies for three weeks for his force and for a week for his horses. One hundred Boers, with many Mauser rifles and a quantity of ammunition were captured. There are large quantities of cattle and sheep in the country which is good news.

"French intercepted large convoys, showing that Barberton was used as a depot of supplies for the Boers in the south and southeast. The bulk of French's force is still thirty-five miles behind the cavalry, owing to the difficulty of getting the wagons over the pass leading to Barberton."

London, Sept. 14.—The War Office has received the following from Lord Roberts, dated Machadodrop, Sept. 13.

Buller has occupied Spitzkop. He found 30,000 pounds of supplies, principally of rice, sugar, flour and coffee, and 300 boxes of ammunition.

"An engineer convoy, which was escorted by the 19th Hussars, was attacked at the Crocodile River. The engineers have returned, but there is no news of the escort.

"Ian Hamilton's force has replaced Pole-Carew's brigade at Watervalonder, from which place Carew's command reached Godwin to-day. The enemy abandoned the place and the Godwin bridge was blown up.

"Rundle has returned at Bethlehem. Boers near by attacked a patrol of Yeomanry. The Boers retreated after demanding the surrender of the patrol and threatening to give no quarter.

"Hart reoccupied Potchefstroom on the 11th, the mounted men having covered forty-five miles and the infantry thirty-five miles without rest in order to surprise the Boers. The plan succeeded admirably, and at dawn some Boers rode out of the town into the arms of the British and were prisoners. The alarm was sounded, and the Boers endeavored to escape in small parties. Some were shot and a few escaped. The remainder rushed back into town and were captured.

"Clements advanced against Delarey's burghers, who retired north of Magliesberg. Delarey admitted forty casualties."

THE NEWS FROM CHINA

Tien Tsin, Sept. 13, via Shanghai, Sept. 15.—The Russians, it is reported here, are rapidly pushing troops into Manchuria, where all indications point to extensive operations before the arrival of winter. They have suspended work on the railway to Pekin, which adds to the complications. It is believed that their object is thus to compel the other powers to consent to the destruction of Pekin.

Pekin, Sept. 11, via Taku, Sept. 14.—The allied Generals were in conference for four hours to-day, the principal topic being how best to encourage the Chinese to return. It was agreed that looting should cease, and that foraging parties should hereafter be accompanied by an officer who should give receipts for all supplies taken. The question of wintering at Tien Tsin was brought up, with a view of ascertaining if possible the attitude of the Russians. General Linevitch admitted that most of his troops would winter there.

Tien Tsin, Sept. 15.
Via Shanghai, Sept. 16.—A British Signal Officer reports a sharp engagement between a company of the 14th U. S. Infantry and 3000 Boxers at Mottoo "Matow," on the road to Pekin. The Americans made a gallant stand and a detachment of Bengal Lancers near by, hearing the firing, came to their rescue and charged the Boxers in the rear. The Chinese were routed leaving 200 dead. The Americans had no casualties. The Germans report an engagement with a heavy force of Boxers west of Pekin Thursday, the German loss is said to have been 20. Indications now point strongly to the withdrawal of all the powers from Pekin to Tien Tsin.

TRAINING A HUSBAND.

How the Boy Grows Into the Man. Selecting a Dress for Mother.

It was a large store in New York where a sale of a special fashionable article of dress was taking place. The father and son, a boy of perhaps thirteen or fourteen, were customers. The boy was the purchaser, and was left free to select the garment, evidently intended as a gift for his mother. Hundreds of these articles were piled in confusion on the counter. At last a choice was made, when the father said, in a slow, contemplative tone,—

"I never saw mamma wear plaid."

The boy looked up.

"Don't you think she ought to?" he asked.

"Well, I do not know about 'ought;' she never seems to choose it," was the response.

The boy said in a determined tone,—"I like plaid."

"Oh, yes," interrupted the father, "but you want her to enjoy wearing it, not wear it just to please you."

"Why, of course," sad the boy put down the garment of his choice and selected a dainty pink, saying, in a soft loving voice. "That looks like mamma more than the other, even if the other is pretty."

The father nodded, and the perfect love that surrounded one women in this work-a-day world was evident to the chance observer, as was the fact that one boy was being trained to appreciate the clothes worn in his home and by those he loved. The ideal husband is not the man who provides, but the one who provides money with a warm, intelligent interest in the way it is expended, and notices and comments on the results obtained by the money expended.

Did His "Young Marster" a Favor.

A little incident at the police station recently attracted comment from various sources on account of the realistic romance it embodied. An old negro walked into the office and asked in a mild and respectful manner if his "young master," M. C. Goin, was there. He was told that Goin had been fined $2 for being drunk and was on the rock pile. He applied to Mr. Dye, keeper of the rock pile, and had a talk with Goin. The latter was very drunk when arrested and the Recorder fined him $2. He hails from Corinth.

"How much?" asked the old negro, "will you let him out for?"

Mr. Dye replied that $1.75 would purchase his liberty. The old man pulled out a tobacco sack and unloosening the strings got out $2. The young man was released. Being asked why he was interested in the young man the old man said:

"I belonged to his father endurin' the war, and no better man ever lived. When I hear 'em say young marster was in de rock pile I jes' cum up heah ter see him. I'd give my last cent 'foh he shud stay in de prison."

The young man and the old ex-slave walked away together.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

So useful are toads in gardens that they are sold in France by the dozen for stocking gardens to free them from many injurious insects.

THIS AND THAT.

"Electricity is a funny force," said the observant motorman. "Last night nearly all the current was suddenly off from the wires in the barn, and after a minute, came on again. Soon an ordor like that of an over cooked dinner filled the power house. On examination, two chickens were found roasting to death on the main wire. For hours the feathered pair had rested in safety on separate wires. The minute Chanticleer reached across to give a good night kiss to his dear Biddy, on an opposite wire, a deadly current was forced through their bodies."—Philadelphia Record.

The recent death of a member of a Sedalia, Mo., firm disclosed the fact that for thirty years the firm had kept no account books. It did a strictly cash business, and divided the day's receipts each night, share and share alike. When a bil of goods was purchased, each member of the firm paid one-half of the money, carried in his pocket.

In Newton, Mass., the other day, a man's $5 bill was blown out of his hand, and he could find it nowhere. A friend cut a piece of paper just the size of the bill and liberated it in the place where the man had lost his money. The paper blew down the street and around into an alley, and there the man found the $5 bill.

A collapseable fly proof dish cover has been designed, which has a central vertical hoop, with pivoted hoops on either side, which swing into a horizontal position to pull the netting which covers the frames down into place around the dish, folding against the central hoop when not in use.

SEPTEMBER ADVERTISING.

Business men differ as to when "ads" are the most productive of results. One heavy advertiser makes a special effort to attract custom in September, when so many people return from the sea shore, mountains and country with new energy, ready to take up neglected enterprises; when the children are to be got ready for school, and when preparations are to be made for winter occupations and pleasures. His purpose is to induce people to get into the habit of dealing with him. Everybody reads the Times.

HAY FEVER CAN BE CURED

The microbes which are formed in this season of the year from certain flowers and members of the vegetable kingdom attack the membraneous linings of the nose and eyes. These become inflamed and produce that horribly distressing ailment known as Hay Fever.

The Stay-Abed Club.

Of the many curious features in New Orleans life there is none other more interesting than the Stay-Abed Club, an organization composed of bedridden people. The qualifications for membership are confirmed invalidism and the ability to communicate with other members of the club by letter. The idea and plan of this singularly pathetic organization originated with a lady who for fifteen years has been a bedridden sufferer. She conceived the scheme of writing down each day her experiences, impressions and thoughts, and this essay or letter she exchanged with an invalid friend, receiving in return a similar epistle. Presently the circle of correspondents grew larger, and last winter there were fourteen invalids enjoying the curious benefits of the club. Each member writes his or her letter each day, and this communication is passed around in routine to the others, so each member has thirteen letters every day.

Lizzie Borden Snubbed.

Lizzie A. Borden, of Fall River, whose father and mother were murdered in 1892, is the subject of much comment. By the death of her parents she became heir to the Andrew J. Borden building at the corner of Anawan and South Main streets. One of the rooms in the building was occupied by the local branch of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of which Miss Borden was, before the tragedy, an active member. While Miss Borden was in Taunton jail the society joined with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in passing resolutions of sympathy. Since then her case has been rigidly excluded from society debate, and several of the members have snubbed her. She felt that she should not put up with insults from her tenants, and accordingly the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union has been compelled to seek quarters elsewhere.—Springfield Republican.

THE PRODUCT OF EDUCATION.

Helvetius says. "Man is the product of his education." The properly educated, trained and qualified druggist if he is acquainted with true business principles, must win the confidence of his townspeople. The liberal patronage bestowed on us up to the present, is ample proof that our efforts to please the public are appreciated. Family dispensing is our special forte.

KEEP THE OLD FRIEND.

Make new friends, but keep the old:
Those are silver, these are gold:
New made friendships, like new wine,
Age will mellow and refine.

Friendships that have stood the test,—
Time and change,—are surely best;
Brows may wrinkle, hair grow gray,
Friendship never knows decay.

For, 'mid old friends, tried and true,
Once more we our youth renew.
But old friends, alas! may die,
Now friends must their place supply.

Cherish friendship in your breast,
New is good, but old is best;
Make new friends, but keep the old,
Those are silver, these are gold.

COPLEY'S EYEGLASSES.

We had been talking over a lively incident in the life of one of our friends—his name was Thwaites—which had led to a peculiarly strong development of that individual's nose. Three of us knew Thwaites quite well, and one of the three had told the story to the others. The fourth man did not know Thwaites personally, but he did know a story of another man of which he said, this story about Thwaites reminded him.

"You know that eyeglasses make a great difference in the looks of a man, don't they? Well, this is how Copley came to wear eyeglasses:

"His eyes? They may have suffered from the artificial help they have been getting from those glasses all these years, though I believe he has had the good sense all along to wear simple lenses that make not the least difference to his vision. But he certainly never took up with those eyeglasses for the good of his eyes. It began in a matter of policy with Copley.

"When I knew him first we were both students in a big London hospital, trying to become doctors.

"Copley was very much in earnest, you see. He may have been naturally disposed to have his larks in one way or another, but he always had a certain shrewdness which kept him from playing tricks calculated to bring the professor down on him. In particular he knew how good a thing it was to stand well with the dean of the faculty.

"I ought to explain, in case you do not know, that there the dean of the faculty is the professor who has held office longest, and at that particular hospital the statutes made him very much of an autocrat. For instance, there were three big 'exams' to pass in the five years, and no student could present himself at any one of these without a certificate from the hospital he belonged to that he had attended lectures and demonstrations duly and faithfully' for a certain number of terms. Those certificates were signed at our hospital by the dean of the faculty alone. He took the reports of the other professors, but in the last resort his signing or not signing might be very much a matter of his own personal estimate of the individual student. See? The dean could practically stop a man from getting his degree, even if that man knew as much about medicine as Galen.

"Fortunately our dean was a good old fellow, and he used his power not only with justice, but with mercy. Perhaps his botanical studies made him mild. I have noticed that people who have much to do with plants and flowers are mostly of a gentle disposition. He was professor of 'materia medica.'

"One day he seemed fidgety and distraced when he took his place to begin the lecture. He seemed to be looking over the class in search of some one. Presently his eye fell on Copley. The old man puckered up his brow and stared at Copley through his spectacles.

"Then he began in a nervous, irritable way: 'Yes, sir, you. I don't know your name, sir. You, sir. What is your name, if you please?'

"Copley made no pretense of not seeing that he was the person in question. He frankly answered, 'My name is Copley, sir.'

"'Copley? Ah, very well, Mr. Copley,' says the old man. 'Mr. Copley, I have to tell you in the presence of this class unless your character undergoes a change you will never be fit to practice the healing art. You have no humanity, sir. You are cruel, sir—cruel.'

"Copley had no idea what the dean was talking about, and none of his friends could enlighten him. Some of the class could guess, but they did not happen to know Copley well enough to volunteer a hint. The truth was that some student had been making an ass of himself that morning with the schoolboy trick of fastening walnut shells on the feet of a cat, and then turning the beast loose in the lecture room corridor. The janitor had at last been obliged to kill the cat with a shotgun. The dean thought he had found the perpetrator of this outrage, but he was wrong. Poor Copley had not even been in the college and he knew nothing about it.

"As Copley had no idea what the dean was driving at, he could only submit to a harangue, after lecture, go and ask the dean what it all meant. But the dean only stared at Copley as a particularly imprudent specimen of a normally impudent genus—the London medical student.

"'Go away, sir. Go away, Mr. Copley, and remember that I have my eye on you.'

"But after that the dean seemed to have it in for Copley. Twice again in that same term Copley was reprimanded for outrageous behavior of which he had no sort of knowledge. The second time he was threatened with expulsion for having willfully and deliberately intoxicated a little street arab and then put him to sleep in the dissecting room, where he afterward came to himself in a terrible fright and very nearly had a fit.

"Whoever was the perpetrator of this villainy, the dean had, as he thought, the evidence of his own senses as to the perpetrator's identity.

"'I saw you, sir, when you brought that unfortunate child into the inner courtyard,' said the dean. 'I saw you and wondered what you were doing with him.'

"Copley kept his head this time. It was a very serious affair, and he saw the necessity of using all his wits.

"The faculty never did find out who was guilty. It was a most unsatisfactory investigation. Copley's innocence was clearly established, but a disagreeable suspicion of several first-year and second-year men also grew up. Copley, I ought to say, was in his fourth year.

"The story of the street arab who had been frightened nearly to death got into the newspapers and made a sensation. There was no doubt that it would injure the reputation of the hospital. The board of directors debated over the affair at a special meeting, and all the 700 students debated over it on all occasions.

"It was a nurse—of all possible people—who gave us the first hint of a way to put a stop to the persecution of poor Copley. She was chatting with him, myself and a senior student, all of us on night duty in her ward.

"'The thing is quite plain to me,' she said. 'In fact, I believe I could put my hand on the guilty party to-morrow morning, if I wanted to. But the scandal has nearly blown over now, and the young man has been badly frightened. So we might as well let well enough alone.'

"'And how about me?' says Copley.

"'Well, then,' she said, 'Mr. Copley has a double—yes, a double. Mr. Copley's double is a young limb of Satan in his first year. I have noticed the likeness over and over again, but, as you gentlemen never see anything of the first-year students—'

"Of course, now that she had mentioned it, we all saw just how it was. The nurse did not tell us the name of this young man, but we three quietly kept on the lookout for Copley's double among the first-year men, and in less than twenty-four hours we found the double of Copley in a youth by the name of Wixem. We all three pitched upon the same man. There was no room for the least doubt. The only difference between Copley and Wixem at ten yards' range was that Wixem was already serious and even grave in his demeanor, and Copley had a gay, devil-may-care way, in spite of his troubles. Any one would have taken Wixem for a sober, earnest, ambitious student, which is just what he was not, and Copley was.

"Copley was so exasperated that he attacked Wixem on the sidewalk, just outside the principal gate of the hospital and gave him a terrible black eye. Copley was arrested by a passing policeman, but Wixem was too cunning to appear in court. He knew that people were still talking about the dissecting-room scandal.

"'Well, anyhow,' I said to Copley, 'that black eye will help the dean to distinguish between you and Wixem for some time to come.'

"But for several weeks Wixem did nothing that could get Copley into trouble. The dean looked at Copley very hard, with a puzzled expression, from time to time, and Copley bravely returned the stare.

"Then came Copley's eyeglasses.

"You see, we all, including the friendly nurse, agreed that Copley could not go on blackening Wixem's eyes periodically to keep from being mistaken for that young miscreant. So the nurse suggested that Copley would look very well, and immensely professional, in gold-rimmed eyeglasses. And after that there was no possibility of mistake."

"And so," one of the three asked, "your friend Copley stuck to the identifying glasses for life?"

"Yes, but wait a minute. The funny thing was that the first day Copley appeared in the hospital with his new glasses—I was with him at the time—he also wore a dark frock coat and a high hat, and it happened that he had never before appeared there in such a sober get-up. Just as we entered the inner courtyard, which happened to be deserted, Mr. Wixem, looking very solemn, which meant that he had been up to some devilish pranks, met us as he was coming from the museum wing. Copley glared at him, as if he would like to black his eye just once more.

"Wixem stopped short and said: 'Why, sir, I had no idea you were in town!'

"'Hadn't you, sir?' says Copley. 'Then, sir, let me recommend you to bear in mind that I am in town.'

"Wixem only stared for a moment, said 'Oh!' in a manner that indicated both astonishment and relief, and passed on.

"'Copley,' I said, 'that young man took you for his father.'

"'I'll father him if he doesn't mind what he's about,' says Copley.

"The general effect of the eyeglasses was wonderfully effective for good in Copley's career. In the first place, the dean discovered that he had made a good man a victim of his own mistakes. He wanted to reopen the inquiry about the dissecting-room, only the board wouldn't let him. But he became a fast friend to Copley, and that fact helped him on considerably long after he had begun practice.

"No, it isn't merely as a souvenir that Copley continues to wear his glasses. The fact is that the friendly nurse wouldn't hear of his taking them off. She is Mrs. Copley now."

Friendly Assistance.

"Can I help you to anything?" asked Boarder No. 6.

"Yes," replied the newcomer at the foot of the table. "You might give me a clew to this 'hash.'"—Philadelphia North American.

Delays Are Dangerous.

A small pimple on your face may seem of little consequence, but it shows your blood is impure, and impure blood is what causes most of the diseases from which people suffer. Better heed the warning given by the pimple and purify your blood at once by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine cures all diseases due to bad blood, including scrofula and salt rheum.

The non-irritating cathartic — Hood's Pills.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different: we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other goods offered for sale in our store.

Root and Branch.

Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough, was accustomed to make an annual feast, to which she invited all her relations. At one of these family meetings she drank their health, adding, "What a glorious sight it is to see such a number of branches flourishing from one root!" But observing Jack Spencer laugh, she insisted on knowing what had occasioned his mirth, and promised to forgive him, be it what it would.

"Why, then, madam," said he, "I was thinking how much more the branches would flourish if the root were under ground."

Sahara is Not a Barren Waste.

The Sahara is not a barren waste, as is popularly supposed. Not long ago 2,000,000 goats and 260,000 camels in the Algerian Sahara alone, and the oases furnished 1,500,000 date palms.

An address was presented to Mr. and Mrs S. Taylor, Ashburnham, accompanied by a handsome rocking chair, by the Epworth League and Sabbath School connected with St. Mark's Church. The presentation took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, when those who took part spent a very pleasant evening in socal entercourse.

Lumbering Operations.

Mr. Wm. Cresswell was in town Saturday hiring men for the Mossom Boyd Company's lumber camp in Glamorgan township. Operations were commenced in this camp on Sept 4th, with about 20 men. These will be increased to about 100 as rapidly as men can be procured. The timber cut in Glamorgan will be floated down Burnt River, and manufactured at the Company's mills at Bobcaygeon. Mr Cresswell is in charge of this camp, and is a hustler. Mr. Dick Cavanagh is assisting in hiring men.

From the Old Sod.

Messrs. H. LeBrun & Co., have just opened out large cases containing British cloths and furnishings, imported direct from Great Britain. The Old Country invoices, made out in sterling currency, have a great genuine look about them. This Simon pure importation includes a large consignment of high-class Scoth tweeds, West of England suitings, overcoatings and trouserings, together with a large import order than usual of Towne's celebrated English driving gloves, and other up-to-date gentlemen's furnishings.

Profits of Advertising.

There seems to be an implied agreement among persons engaged in certain lines of business to avoid the appearance of competition, and thus escape the expense of advertising. Being without expirience, they do not know that the wresting of trade from rival establishments is not the only effect of the publication of business announcements. One of the results of advertising is to increase the total volume of trade. Most people have to be frequently reminded of their own needs of duties. The cost of judicious advertising is small compared with the profits. Everybody ready The Times.

Death of Mrs. Crossley.

The death is announced as occuring Saturday of Elizabeth Hartley, wife of Mr. Holden Crossley, at the age of 66 years. The deceased had been an invalid for the last fifteen years, suffering from a complication of ailments that defied successful treatment. She was a native of Yorkshire, England, and has lived in Canada since 1856, and in Peterborough for the last seven years. She was a member of the St. Andrew's congregation and very widely esteemed for her admirable personal qualities. Her husband, two sons and three daughters survive her. The funeral will take place from the family residence, Hunter-st., this afternoon at three o'clock.

—The Senior Girls' Guild of All Saints' church will hold their opening meeting and election of officers this evening at 7.30 o'clock.

Your best friend can give you no better advice than this—"For impure blood, bad stomach and weak nerves take Hood's Sarsaparilla."

—Another huge lawsuit in the horizon. On Saturday a Corporation watering cart ran over the tongue of an Otonabee's farmer's wagon on the market and broke it. The farmer says he will sue the town for damages.

—A Lindsay man says he saw a sea serpent forty feet long. He won't take off an inch and he says he can lick any man who says he is a liar. Anybody who wants to doubt his word is at liberty to do so. We don't.

The tables were set in the pretty garden close to the house, which was beautifully decorated with flowers, ferns and bunting.

—Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary, spent Sunday in town. He leaves this morning for Orillia, where he will officially visit the Asylum for Idiots, and to-morrow will visit the Penetang Reformatory for Boys. All the public institutions of the province are in charge of his department, in addition to the administration of the License Law, the Provincial Board of Health, the Registrar-General's Branch, the incorporation of all companies, and the management of the Central Prison, where is carried on a number of manufacturing industries. So that Mr. Stratton is a busy man.

COUNTY POLICE COURT.

Magistrate Edimson Disposes of a Case at Lakefield—Others Pending

County Magistrate Edimson was in Lakefield Friday holding Court. Instead of placing themselves at the disposal of the court, a number of defendants failed to appear, and warrants for these will be issued immediately.

A fine of $5 was meted out to John McIlmoyle, jr., for creating a disturbance by being drunk and disorderly.

Bishop and Pearson vs. John Connor for grossly insulting language, did not materialize, owing to the non-appearance of defendant.

William McIlmoye did not present himself to answer to a charge of drunk and disorderly.

Another court will probably be held at Lakefield on Wednesday, when Hugh Nicholls and Michael Trainer will answer to the charge of feloniously burning an ice house, while against Nicholls is also slated a charge of theft of a canoe.

Court will be held at Norwood on Monday, when a very grave offence against a school teacher there will be considered.

FIT THE GROCER.

Wife Made the Suggestion.

A grocer has excellant oppokrtunity to know the effects of special foods on his customers. Mr. R. A. Lytle of 557 St. Clair St. Cleveland, Ohio, has a long list of customers that have been helped in health by leaving off coffee and using Postum Food Coffee.

He says, regarding his own expirence. "Two years ago I had been drinking coffee and must say that I was almost wrecked in my nerves.

"Particarly in the morning I was so irritatable and upset that I could hardly wait until the coffee was served, and then I had no appetite for breakfast and did not feel like attending to my store duties.

"One day my wife suggested that inasmuch as I was selling so much Postum Food Coffee there must be some merit in it, and suggested that we try it. I took home a package and she prepared it according to directions. The result was a very happy one. My nervousness gradually disappeared and to-day my nerves are all right. I would advise everyone affected in any way with nervousness or stomach troubles, to leave off coffee and use Postum Food Coffee."

LOCAL NEWS-LETTERS.

BETHANY.

Our new Methodist church is in a fair way of being compliteed this month. As the plasterers are now busy the bricklayers are expected daily.

Quite a number of this vicinity are unwell at time of writing, but all are improving under the skilful treatment of Dr. T. G. Brereton.

Miss Dorcas Richardson, of Rochester, who has been visiting friends in this locality for the last three months, returned home.

Mr. David L. Somerville has been engaged to teach our public school for the balance of the year, and we think the trustees have made an excellent choice, as Mr. Somerville is very highly spoken of.

Mr. John Westlick, brother of Mr. William Westlick, who has not been heard of for about twenty-four years, arrived in the village last week and gave William quite a surprise.

LAKEFIELD CEMENT WORKS.

Capacity of the Works to be Six Hundred Barrels per Day.

The Cement Works here is to be a much larger concern than was at first proposed. The original idea was to create works with a daily capacity of 200 barrels. The fine quality of the marl, however, has induced the Company to put in a plant with a 600 barrel capacity.

The work of building the electric tramway is progressing. Grading is proceeding, and will be completed in a short time. There is to be a canal dug between Buckley's Lake and the river, to enter the latter below the Government da. Sawers' Creek will be turned through this ditch, and the marl bed properly drained.

It is expected that the Works will be in operation in January next.

HE STOLE CUTLERY.

A Man Named William Jones Arrested for Theft.

Wm. Jones, a stranger in town was arrested, charged with stealing a quantity of cutlery from Mr. J. W. Butcher, of the Ten Cent Store, George street.

Jones was soliciting orders for court plaster, and making a canvass of the town for this purpose.

He was in the act of coming out of Mr. C. N. Brown's store, when the Chief arrested him. Under his coat he carried a parcel, which proved to be cutlery and which was fully identified by Mr. Butcher as his. There were eleven knives in the package.

Jones appeared before Magistrate Dumble Saturday, and was remanded until Sept. 18th.

Another Snap in Remnants.

Those who have been lucky enough to secure some of the splendid cloth remnants offered by H. Leburn & Co. will be glad to know that this firm has secured another 2,000 yard lot of excellant ends of tweeds from the Maple Leaf Woollen Mills at a great sacrifice in price. These are now offered to the public of Peterborough at less than half regular net prices—a good deal lower than wholesale cost. These remnants are just the thing for boys' suits, men's suits and single garments. Ladies are invited to call early and see them. H. LeBrun & Co.

Profits of Advertising.

There seems to be an implied agreement among persons engaged in certain lines of business to avoid the appearance of competition, and thus escape the expense of advertising. Being without experience, they do not know that the wrestling of trade from rival establishments is not the only effect of the publication of business announcements. One of the results of advertising is to increase the total volume of trade. Most people have to be frequently reminded of their own needs and duties. The cost of judicious advertising is small compared with the profits. Everybody reads the Times.

Poultry at Large

Police Magistrate Fline writes as follows to the Belleville Sun; Perhaps you would permit me to use your columns to answer a question asked me by many citizens. The question is, are hens, ducks and poultry allowed to run at large? The answer is, all poultry may be impounded for running at large. In case notice in writing has been served upon the owner, requesting him to confine his poultry, if the notice is not obeyed, the owner can be brought before a magistrate and fined."

Licenses for Deer and Moose Hunting.

The attention of the Provincial Game Warden has been directed to a wily scheme which deer hunters have practised in former years. The license to kill moose or cariboo is $5, while that for dear is but $2. The sportsmen have been in the habit of taking out a deer license, and if they were lucky enough to shoot a moose they would thake out that license afterwards. The scheme will this year be thwarted by the decision of the Game Warden to issue no licenses after the season opens.

SIX LIVES FOR EACH ONE.

Trooper West, Who was Killed, Tells Exciting Experences.

Ottawa, Sept. 14.—Trooper West, of the Strathconas, formerly of England, who was one of the six killed a few days ago by the Boers, in a letter written at Waterval on July 24, says—

"I am writing this on telegram forms in a station we have just succeeded in capturing, and I tell you we have had a hot time while engaged. I was one of the patrol of four scouts. Our troops, consisting of thirty men, were in our rear about one mile. We scoured the country well for four miles, when we came to this station, and advanced on the station to within about 200 yards, when all at once a most terrific fire was opened on us. Well you ought to have seen us skip. My horse was shot in the hind foot, but it did not hurt him for the day. We got back to the troop and reported the affair, and our officer divided our men into three sections and then we advanced again on the station. We placed our horses in a safe place and advanced on foot to within 300 yards and lay down in the grass.

"All this time the Boers were peppering away at us, but they are no good to shoot. We got one man wounded and one horse killed, and we did not fire until we saw something to fire at, and then we let them have it. Finally our fire became too hot for them, and we succeeded in driving them away. When we got to the station we found three dead, four wounded and our left flank captured six of their horses. I am going to ride one of them into camp. The Boers have a mortal dread of the Canadians. We fight them pretty much at their own game, and they do not like that. General Buller complimented Strathcona's Horse on the scouting, which I believe they deserve, but I wish it was over. There is no fun in going out in the morning and not know the moment some Boer may snipe you off from behind a rock, but when we get at them we don't try to bring in many prisoners. Our ambition is centered on their rifles and we got six Boer lives to every one of ours so far. Our casualties to date have been nine killed, fourteen wounded and six captured, including one major and one captain. We count up 72 Boers in all we have killed."

ANNOUNCEMENT

To the People of Peterborough and vicinity:

TO-DAY, September 15th, China Hall will be re-opened with a stock which for quality, completeness and variety is unsurpassed in Canada.

During the last six months we have been collecting these goods from every quarter of the globe, and the result will make of China Hall a veritable art gallery.

Added to a full line of staple and domestic wares, we show direct importatians from Egypt, Japan, Austria, France, Germany, Spain, Bohemia, England, America, and last, but not least, from Canada.

This collection comprises the newest styles in Dinner and Tea, Toilet and Salad Sets, Lamps, Cutlery, Silverware, Flower Pots, Cut Glass and Bric-a-bac, including specimens of such reliable wares as Habiland, Doulton, Ridgeway, Wedgewood and Farnival, Royal Bonn, Carlsbad, Satsenna, Awata, Lenara, Yokohama, Terra Cotta, Hand-engraven Egyptian and Cloisonnee.

Several of these lines are now placed on sale for the first time in Peterborough, and a few of them for the first time in Canada. Amongst these unique pieces may be seen (with a printed guarantee enclosed) a facsimile of the celebrated Portland vase which made Josiah Wedgewood famous.

China Hall in its present form is a model of convenience and beauty, and it has now every facility for the carrying on of an up-to-date trade. A prompt and courteous service may be relied upon, while a cordial welcome is assured to all visitors whether purchasers or not.

For the convenience of customers a cosy waiting room is provided, which we trust may be appreciated to the extent of being used and of becoming a rendezvous for ladies who wish to meet down town.

The accomplishment of all this has been no small task, and it is hoped that the public will take pride in this new store which, without exception, is the handsomest of its kind in Canada.

A few words as to our future policy. The business will be conducted upon a cash basis, with one price to all and positively no reduction from the marked figures, which will be as low as is compatible with the character of the goods, our aim being that customers should remember the quality after the price has been forgotten. No article will be represented as being better than it really is. Special attention given to matching and mending.

Thanking our numerous customers for their many expressions of goodwill, and for their adherence to us while in cramped quarters, we shall now take pleasure in welcoming them to our commodious and artistic premises at 360 George-st.

100,000 MEN STRIKE AT PENNSYLVANIA MINES

That is the Estimate of President Mitchell of the Mine Workers' Union.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND MORE WILL GO OUT.

Tie-Up Practically Complete in Scranton and Wilkesbarre Districts—The Coal Supply Has Thus Been Cut Off and Dealers Are Exercising Caution.

Philadelphia, Sept. 17.—Reports from the anthracite coal fields of this State indicate that the tie up caused by the strike for higher wages of more than 140,000 mines workers is at least as complete as the leaders of the United Mine Workers of America, the organization back of strike, have asserted it would be. Compaines and individuals owning mines who had claimed that their workings would operate as usual, reckoned apparently without accurate knowledge of the attitude of their men. It is true that some operations in the Hazelton region were moving to-day, with as high as 80 per cent. of the men at work, nevertheless the greate rnumber of men in the district were idle.

In the Scranton and Wilkesbarre the tie-up was practically complete. As was expected, the Schuykill region, with Pottsville for a central point, was at work with very few defections. These men have not the same grievances that prevail in the other districts, and, if they go on strike it will be largely through sympathy.

President Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers, who has established head-quarters at Hazelton, and is personally directing the strike, estimates that over 100,000 men struck, and that 15,000 more will join them to-morrow.

OVER 100,000 MEN IDLE.

Hazleton, Pa., Sept. 17.—When President Mitchell reached his office in the Valley Hotel, which is the strike head-quarters, he found a big batch of mail awaiting his attention. With regard to the situation up to noon Mr. Mitchell gave the following statement to the Associated Press.

"The information in our possession this morning indicates that over 100,000 men are idle throughout the entire anthracite region and that at least 15,000 adtional workmen will refrain from working tomorrow morning.

"There are several thousand men who entered the mines this morning for the purpose of properly timbering their working places and obtaining their tolos. I feel entirely satisfied that the remaining men employed in and about the mines will join with strikers in their contest for living wages and humane conditions of employment."

The [illegible] Vally Coal Company's colliery at Yorktown did not make an attempt to start work, and the operations at Upper Lehigh, which began work with a reduced force, were compelled to shut down at 10 o'clock, not enough men being on duty to keep the workings going.

The union men hope to have all the colleries tied up on the North Side by to-morrow morning.

The proposition of Father Phillips that Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, be called in by the United States Workers as arbitrator, has not yet been acted upon by the miners' representatives. It is said by the later that the proposition has not yet been officially laid before them. When President Mitchell and other leaders were approached on the subject to-day they declined to discuss it.

Hazleton, Pa., Sept. 17.—A last desperate attempt was mad elast night to bring about peace between the coal operations and the men. Father Phillips, who has worked hard for a settlement of the differences between the employers and the mine workers, has again entered the field with the proposition that Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, be accepted as arbituator Father Phillips held a conference with President Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers, and asked that the organization he represents stand aside and allow Archbishop Ryan to approach the operations on behalf of the men and the pbulic generally, the latter of which he claims has a material interest in what is taking place.

PRESSURE ON MARKLE MEN

The officials of the United Mine Workers' Union brought all their resources to hear upon the men to obey the strike order. The union leaders want them to strike, and a big meeting was held at Jeddo for the purpose of inducing them to strike.

LEHIGH COLLIERIERS AT WORK.

Pottsville, Pa., Sept. 17.—The reports that come from Shenandoah, Ashland, Girardville, Mahanoy City, Lamqua, Tremont and Minersville indicate that all the collieries in this vicinity are at work with a full complement of hands. The Lehigh Coal Company's collieries are at work as well.

SEVENTY THOUSAND MEN OUT.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 17.—Pennsylvania's great strike of anthracite miners is now officially under way. This morning found the many thousands of miners workers in the Lackawana and Wyoming valleys ready for the struggle with the operators, and when the scores of breaker whistles sounded for the day not enough men and boys rallied at any one place to warrant the beginning of work.

Fred Dilcher the member of the National Executive Board of United Mine Workers, who is in charge of district No. 1. covering these two valleys, was enthusiastic over the strike news, which rapidly came in from every direction. The headquarters were swarmed with officers, and workmen from the local unions, and all reported a complete tie-up.

In all not less than 70,000 mine employers of all grades are idle in district No. 1 this morning.

IN THE WYOMING VALLEY.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 17.—The coal miners' strike is almost general in the Wyoming valley. Some of the Pennsylvania Coal Company's collieries in the vicinity of Pittston started to work this morning short handed. A Delaware and Hudson Company mine at Plains is working, but the big mines at Nanticoke, Plymouth and Parsons are completely tied up.

CHINA WILL OFFER AN INDEMNITY.

Correspondent of The Times States Her Intentions.

WHAT THE REPLY WILL BE.

"An Eye for an Eye, a Tooth for a Tooth," Will be the Probable Rejoinder of the Powers.

London, Sept. 17.

The British Commander at Taku cables that a fatigue party engaged in destroying gun powder at Chung Chow has been blown up. Eleven Welsh Fusiliers were wounded; two British-Indian soldiers were killed, and thirteen British-Indian soldiers were wounded; Captain Hill and 11 British-Chinese infantry soldiers were wounded. Later advices show that 16 were killed and 22 injured in the explosion.

London, Sept. 17.—The view expressed in this despatch a few days ago thatt he Chinese would in all likelihood try to compound the villainies committed by the Boxers by the offer of a money indemnity is confirmed to-day by Dr. Morrison, the correspondent of the Times at Pekin, who intimates that Prince Ching does not realize the situation but thinks the powers can be squared in this way. The interview with Li Hung Chang, published a few days ago, gave a similar impression regarding this aged statesman. As Prince Ching and Li Hung Chang are the negotiators on the Chinese side it may safely be concluded that the course they will take will be to offer a solatium in taels for the blood of the Christian missionaries which has been shed. It can also be forecast with some degree of certainty that such an offer will be rejected and that "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth" will be the basis upon which the representatives of the powers will conduct negotiations. Only in this way can the real culprits be punished, for to levy an indemnity would be to afflict the mass of the Chinese people while the high officials who are more responsible would escape.

LI HUNG AT TIEN TSIN.

London, Sept. 17.—A special despatch from Shanghai says Li Hung Chang has arrived at Tien Tsin.

Li Hung Chang left Shanghai on the German steamer Anping September 14. The steaming distance between Shanghai and Taku is about 800 miles.

TO OPEN NEGOTIATIONS.

Washington, Sept. 17.—The Chinese Minister has received a despatch from Prince Ching dated Pekin, Sept. 8, stating that he had been clothed with full authority together with Li Hung Chang, to negotiate peace, and requesting the Minister to ask the Secretary of State to instruct Minister Conger to open negotiations at once.

SAVED BY VON KETTELER.

New York, Sept. 17.—Baroness von Ketteler leaves for Germany via America tomorrow, cables the Herald correspondent at Pekin under date of September 5. The murder of her husband on June 19 by Government soldiers in the main street prevented a general massacre of all foreigners in Pekin, as all the foreign Ministers except Baron von Ketteler had decided to accept a Chinese assurance of protection for their journey to Tien Tsin. It is now known that Prince Tuan had arranged for their annihilation en route.

FURTHER HOSTILITIES.

London, Sept. 16.—Under date of Pekin, September 7, a despatch says—

"Sir Robert Hart, the director of the Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs, has informed the foreign generals that they must be prepared for further hostilities, that the Chinese troops are concentrating and moving on the line of communication between Pekin and Tien Tsin, and that he thinks trouble may be looked for by November.

"General Chaffee believes Pekin has sufficient troops to hold out against any attack."

READY FOR AN OUTBREAK.

London, Sept 17.—In connection with the prediction of Sir Robert Hart that there will be further hostilities in China in November, the Associated Press understands that the British Government is alread yconsidering the transfer of troops from South Africa to India, in order to make it practicable to send more British troops to China. The military authorities consider the war in South Africa so far ended that troops may now be safely moved.

TO SQUARE THE POWERS.

London, Sept. 17.—Dr. Morrison, the Pekin correspondent of the Times, in the course of a long despatch, dated September 6, continues to protest against the evacuation of the capital, but he agrees with the Pekin correspondent of the Morning Post that the withdrawal of the Russian troops, owing to their barbarous habits, would be an unmixed benefit. He asserts that further convincing proofs have been obtained of the intention of the Empress Dowager to massacre all the foreigners. Prince Ching, he says, fails to realize the real situation, evidently being convinced that all the powers can be squared by the payment of money indemnity.

TIED BY THEIR PIGTAILS.

Nagasaki, Sept. 17.—Dr. Collins, a correspondent of the Brussels Etoile Belge, has arrived from Blagovestchensk. He confirms the rumor of a Russian massacre of Chinese there in the middle of July, under the orders of the chief of police and the Governor. He estimates that 5,000 harmless Chinese residents were expelled from the town and thrown into the River Amur by the soldiers, who tied most of them together in batches by their pigtails.

THE TRANSVAAL CAPITAL

INTERESTING LETTER FROM A CANADIAN OFFICER.

Lieut. Morrison, formerly Editor Ottawa Citizen, gives his opinion of the Boer Capital—Kruger's late residence.

Pretoria, Aug. 6.—I am in here on leave from Pienaarspoort, where our battery is on duty pending the general advance under Lord Roberts to round up Botha. The railway is being rapidly repaired eastward and trains are running during the day to Bronkhurstspruit, which is the "rail head" for the present. The fighting does not seem to be over by any means. A Yeomanry colonel was killed just outside of this city a few days ago and a sentry was wounded last night not far from the hotel quite early in the evening. You have already heard of the sharp fight General Hamilton had twelve miles east of here last week. We were not in that but our friends of the Berks regiment had 22 casualties, including the colonel and major. I was on rear guard with them not much more than a week ago and it is hard to realize that they are knocked out so soon. It was the same with young Borden; we met him at Irene on Saturday and we could hardly believe it when we heard he had been killed on Monday.

Sergeant Belford and I rode in here yesterday sixteen miles from Pienaarspoort and the country we traversed is a picture of the ravages of war—ruined and burned houses, deserted farms and minor houses, broken-down fences and dead horses, mules and oxen everywhere, smelling to heaven and disfiguring the landscape with their bloated grotesque bodies. Even the wild animals that should eat them have been scared away, and the vultures—well, they're "living retired." Like their friends the army contractors, the war has made them fat and impudent. In the course of our ride we only saw one or two houses that were occupied and we passed many places that must have been the residences of wealthy burgers in the antebellum days.

Here we met "Gat" Howard and Major Wynn, both in on furlough, also Major Boulanger, and heard all the gossip of the army corps. All the Canadian nurses are here and so is Chaplain Cox. Every time you turn round you meet somebody you know. But apart from the people you meet it is hardly worth the trouble of coming in—the stores are empty, you cannot buy anything for love or money—that is, anything you want. There is a match famine and a tobacco famine, nothing procurable but Boer tobacco, one pipe full of which will knock you out like "dope," but to our poor beggars who have been smoking tea and coffee and chewing tobacco it is better than nothing and has the one virtue in that it goes a long way, because one pipeful twice a day is as much as an able-bodied man can stand. Then there is no beer and only officers can buy whisky, and then only with their meals at the Grand hotel. To be sure I slept last night between sheets for the first time since I left Deilfontain hospital last June, but to tell the truth I was so beastly cold (there were about three ounces of bed clothes on the bed) that I awoke numerous times to wish that I was snugly stowed away in my blankets among the rocks on the top of Fusilier mountain. As Mulvaney says, the army spoils your taste for the luxuries of civilized life. Nobody is allowed on the streets after seven o'clock without the countersign and it is like a city of the dead after that hour, the silence only broken by the occasional clatter of a mounted patrol through the streets or the sharp bark of a sentry in the darkness as I heard last night as I came back from the club to the hotel. (The club here is a Godsend to the officers if you know the ropes. You can get a drink there without the necessity of an application to the commander-in-chief of the forces.) No doubt you think I write a good deal about eating and drinking, but these essentials loom up large in the scheme of existence of us poor Tommies. Oh, ye chaps who kick about being "ten miles from a lemon," what do you think of an Irish regiment—Irish, mark you!—that has not had any whisky in its mess for over two months. Also you want to be ten miles from a hardtack for 48 hours to discover that you are living near to nature's heart, and it's the marble heart at that. However, life on the march is a great life—sleeping under the stars, up and trekking before sunrise, eating whatever you can get, a brush or two with the enemy, or maybe an engagement, every other day to add a spice of excitement and then the evening bivouac when the huge snake-like column coils itself for sleep and thousands of lights wink out in the twilight until you think you are in the centre of a great magic city that has sprung into being in an hour on the lonely veldt and kopje.

Our battery with the Connaught Rangers and Royal Fusiliers, is guarding a narrow gorge through which the broken railway runs between two mountains east of here. One section is on top of the mountain, another is on outpost four miles away at a village with a name I am too lazy to attempt to write; the other is holding down the base of the mountain. Lieut. McCrae and I take turns of 48 hours each manning the rock sangars on the mountain top with a detachment of gunners. There is a view for ten miles around and our business is to watch the Boer patrols and see that they do not cut the railway line. You would laugh to see us starting out with our detachments to climb the mountain with our blankets, grub, pans, kettles and all the rest of it on our backs. We look like a party of prospectors going up the White House pass in the Yukon, except that the trial is a deuced sight steeper and rougher. Once up, however, it is comparitive pie. All we have to do is to lie around the guns and snooze or read or write letters, except two look-out men who inspect the horizon constantly with binoculars. When they locate some Boer parties we wait for a chance for a shot if they seem likely to come within range, or, if not, flag their whereabouts down to camp and the information is heliographed to other detachments to keep their eye on them. The men rather like it and so do I. We build sleeping places of rocks, about the size of a decent tomb and spread a rubber sheet over the top and are as comfy as could be.

We had visits in camp several times from the Misses Cronjie, nieces of the general. They are very nice well-educated girls and quite fashionably dressed. As we marched into camp last Sunday we passed them on the veldt driving home from church in a stylish Victoria with a fine pair of carriage horses and a little Zula boy on the box. It looked coriously out of place on the veldt and reminded one of the southern outfits "befoh de Wah." When the Misses Cronje visited our camp they were attended by three strapping Zulu waiting maids, their freshly oiled faces shining out of enormous snow-white sunbonnets. Cronje pere and the girls' two brothers are away fightin against us. I may be a Foxy Quiller but I am inclined to think that the social attentions of the young ladies are not prompted so much by a desire for the pleasure of our society as a patroitic impulse to assist the Boer cause by obtaining a knowledge of our position. Our commandant has been advised that Botha proposes to try to cut the line at this point.

* * *

I walked down to-day to see the Kruger residence. It is a tawdry little mansion on a very dirty street and the only striking feature about it are the two stuccolions behind which Oom Paul was wont to pose when being photographed. What would really be a very fine square in the center of the city flanked by the Raadzal the palace of justic, the Grand hotel and other buildings is spoiled by the ugly Dopper church in the center, which, however, will likely be pulled down. The palace of justice is twice as large and very much more effective architecturally than the Langevin block in Ottawa. It has been turned into a hospital and accommodates thousands of patients. The business methods here are most easy going. On Wednesday and Saturday all the slops close at noon. On other days they close from one to two for dinner. The banks are never open in the afternoon. It is a mystery to me where the people of the Transvaal have gone. In the course of our march of nearly 150 miles with General Hamilton I don't suppose we saw more than a dozen houses that were occupied. They cannot have come into Pretoria because fully a third of the houses here are vacant or occupied by the troops. The only explanation is that they have trekked off into the part of the country still held by the Boer troops.

Canadians should get the contracts for furnishing army wagons to the Imperial government. The prairie wagons made by the Ottawa Car company for our troops are far away the best transports in the army. They are lighter, more compact, easier for draught and hold just as much as the heavy, cattlekilling concerns in use by the British corps. Counting the Karoo march, those with our battery have probably done a larger mileage than any in the army and they have never even had a tire re-set since they started. In the stampede of the transport when the Boer guns fired into it at Onverwacht, a big army "buck" wagon drawn by a score of mules tried to jockey one of our six mule prairie wagons off the road. The gunner driver in charge of our transport spurted ahead, took a wheel off the other fellow and rolled the big "buck" in the ditch without as much as splintering a spoke. The Canadian horses are also doing very well in this country. Our battery has only had 25 remounts since it came to Africa. My section is still horsed exclusively with Canadians as we were on detachment at Edenburg when the new horses were received. A number of the remount horses have died or given out since that but we did not lose a Canadian horse on the last campaign and they came in as fresh as when they started. In marked contract was the Elswick battery which was brigaded with us. By the time we returned from Balmoral that battery was done up.

KRUGER WILL NEVER RETURN TO TRANSVAAL

British Government Does Not Desire to Interfere With His Departure for Europe.

CASE OF JEFFERSON DAVIS KEPT IN MIND

Lord Salisbury Does Not Wish to Embarrass His Government—Captain Howard of the Strathconas Has Been Released by the Boers.

Berlin, Sept. 17.

The Vossische Zeitung points out that the singular orders given by the Portuguese Government to the Governor of Mozambique, authorizing the departure of Mr. Kruger for Europe, permit him to sail for only a European port, adding—The Government in so doing goes beyond its powers. Doubtless Lisbon is acting under pressure from Great Britain, who fears presumably that Mr. Kruger is going to the United States.

London, Sept. 17.

Mr. F. W. Riety, State Secretary of the abrogated South African Republic is going to Paris, according to the Pretoria correspondent of the Daily Mail, from which point he will proceed to the United States, where he will probably remain.

London, Sept. 17.—Kruger is abandoning his Presidency and his dupes on the plea of ill-health, though everybody knows that this is only a pretext for his final withdrawal from South Africa. The fact that Mrs. Kruger has joined her husband is an additional confirmation, if any is required, of the theory that Oom Paul is leaving Delagoa Bay for Europe, never to return. Henceforth for the short remaining period of his life, the ex-President will be an exile holding his shabby court in some Continental town and enjoying with little relish the millions accumulated by grinding down the Uitlander. It appears quite certain that the Portuguese Government has been requested by Great Britain to interpose no obstacle to the departure of Kruger. Lord Salisbury evidently appreciates fully that Kruger the prisoner would be far more embarrasing than Kruger the fugitive. He no doubt has in view the mistake which the Northern States made in arresting President Davis at the close of the war and the trouble which such a bungle created.

The report that General DeWet was killed near Potchefstroom is not confirmed, and cannot be relied upon. The only authority for the news is the alleged statement of a Kaffir, which experience has proved to be an utterly unreliable authority.

The Boers are being worsted in all directions, and are daily losing supplies, which appears to be the object aimed at by the British, as an effectual method of crippling the commandos. The latest success in this direction is that of General Macdonald on the Vet River, an old fighting ground of the Boers, to which they have evidently returned only to be severely defeated.

"FOR THE SAKE OF HIS HEALTH."

London, Sept. 17.—All doubts as to Kruger's intentions of proceeding to Europe are now at rest. In reply to a telegram sent to the ex-President by the Express, The Transvaal Consul-General stated that Kruger was at Lorenzo Marquez on leave, and that the object of his proposed European trip was personal and not political. The voyage was to be made for the sake of his health. Kruger declined to say whether the moment was opportune for any statement of a political character. Mrs. Kruger has joined her husband.

DUTCH WARSHIP OFFERED.

The Hague, Sept. 17.—The Government of the Netherlands has telegraphed to Lorenzo Marquez, offering a Dutch warship to bring Mr. Kruger to Holland.

AFTER THE WAR IS OVER.

London, Sept. 17.—The War Office has decided to invite details of the officers and men from each colonial corps in South Africa to visit England as the guests of the nation as soon as it becomes possible to reduce its forces there. The colonial troops will come with the first returning regulars, and the Queen will present them with colors.

IS GENERAL DE WET KILLED?

Pretoria, Sept. 17.—It is reported that Gen. De Wet, who has caused the British so much trouble, was killed on September 7 near Potchefstroom. His Kaffir servant, who has reached Vereeniging, states that General De Wet was shot through the lungs and died a few hours afterwards.

CAPTAIN HOWARD RELEASED.

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—The Militia Department has received a cable stating that Captain Howard, of the Strathcona Horse, who was taken prisoners by the Boers, has been released.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 18 1900.

ENGLAND COULD RETALIATE TOO.

The New York Sun, commenting upon the proposal for Inter-Imperial Preferential Trade, says—"The instant we should discern the slightest liklihood of the admission of Canadian, food staples to the British market duty free, while duties are imposed on similar products from the United States, we should acquaint British manufacturers and the millions of operatives dependant on them with our retaliatory intention to bar British goods out of our market by imposing on them heavier duties than we levy on similar goods coming from Germany and France."

Perhaps the Sun is not aware that Germany and France have preferential tariffs in favor of their colonies and impose high duties on American products entering their markets, yet the United States does not discriminate against those countries in favour of the United Kingdom, which admits American products free of duty.

It is not proposed that the British Government should impose high duties on foreign products, but in framing an Imperial Preferential Tariff there would, of course, be a most favoured foreign nation clause, and it would be provided that if any nation treated the United Kingdom less favourably than other foreign nations additional duties would be imposed on the products of the offending nation. For instance, it has been proposed to place a duty of five cents a bushel on foreign grain entering the British market, while admitting colonial grain free. A British preferential tariff of five cents per bushel would not shut out American grain from the British market, although it would help the colonists very much, but if the duties were made as high as the American duties are, the producers of the United States would be shut out of the British market completely. If grain produced in Russia or the Argentine Republic were admitted to England on payment of 5 cents per bushel duty, while colonial grain was admitted free, and the United States producer had to pay from 25 to 40 cents per bushel to get his grain into England, other food products being treated the same way as grain, how would it affect American farmers and packers.

American producers of food products would not suffer alone. The moment the United States tariff was made to discriminate against the manufacturers of the United Kingdom in favour of those of Germany and France prohibitory tariffs would be imposed against American manufactured goods by every country within the British Empire. American manufactured products would be shut completely out of Canada, Australia, South Africa, India, the British West Indies and other British possessions, as well as out of the British Isles.

Knowing this, the American Government will have sense enough not to make any objection to such low customs duties as the United Kingdom will impose upon foreign products when Inter-Imperial Preferential Trade is adopted.

WIVES OF PRESIDENTS.

Personal Appearance of the Women Who Have Ruled the White House.

Of mistresses of the White House one of the most popular was Mrs. James K. Polk. Like Mrs. Cleveland, she was a brunette, and of fine presence; it was often remarked that not a crowned head in Europe could queen it more royally than the wife of the republican President. Poets penned verses in her honor, and on the last Sunday of her stay in Washington a clergyman addressed her from the pulpit. She was treated with great distinction, and after leaving the White House was visited every New Year's by the Legislature in a body.

Mrs. George Washington also had dark hazel eyes and brown hair. She was not a beauty, but she had a good form, rather below middle weight, and her manners were frank and engaging. She dressed plainly and at a ball given in her honor she wore a simple russet gown and white handkerchief about her neck. One of her dresses which she herself manufactured was of cotton striped with silk, which she obtained from ravelings of brown silk stockings and old crimson chair covers.

Mrs. Monroe was considered a beauty. She was tall and gracefully formed, polished and attractive in society. Mrs. John Adams was never beautiful, but she was of imposing appearance and very intellectual.

Mrs. John Quincy Adams was famed for her charming manners, and Mrs. Andrew Jackson for her amiable temper and kind heart. Mrs. Martin Van Buren, who died before her husband became President, was a pretty woman with modest, unassuming manners and gentle disposition.

The first Mrs. Tyler was one of the belles of eastern Virginia, and was most attractive in her striking loveliness of person and character. The second Mrs. Tyler was the first woman to marry a President. Before her marriage she was, for the one season she spent there, the belle of Washington.

A sparkling brunette was Mrs. William Henry Harrison. She was very handsome, with a face full of animation, and her health, which was robust, added a glow to her features, which increased her charms. "Upon her countenance," it is recorded, "nature had been profusely liberal."

Mrs. Thomas Jefferson was remarkable for her beauty. Her complexion was brilliant; her large, expressive eyes of "the richest tinge of auburn." A little above medium weight, she was slightly and delicately formed. She danced, sang, played the spinnet and harpsichord and rode with great skill.

Mrs. James Madison was a pretty, buxom woman, with a smile and a pleasant word for every one. She had regular features and sparkling eyes.

Mrs. Zachary Taylor was a quiet woman, but had great strength of character and the true spirit of the American heroine, enduring patiently privation incident to life on the frontier, where her husband, as Major Taylor, was stationed. She had no ambition beyond making her home happy.

A blonde of rare beauty was Mrs. Millard Fillmore, with a skin of dazzling whiteness and auburn hair. She was quite tall with a fine figure and of commanding presence. She is ranked with the wives of the two Adamses as a learned woman, and it was through her that her husband asked for and obtained an appropriation of Congress to buy books for the White House. Up to that time there had been a Bible there, and little more.

Another woman of rare beauty was Mrs. Franklin Pierce. She also had many accomplishments. She was very refined and quiet, shunning society.

Mrs. Abraham Lincoln as a girl was very attractive, and she had many suitors. When she became the mistress of the White House she was "fair and forty." That she was the successor of the popular and accomplished Miss Lane was not a point in her favor. At the first levee she appeared in pink silk, decollete, short-sleeved dress and a floral headdress, which ran down to her waist, and destroyed what comeliness simplicity might have given her.

Mrs. Andrew Jackson possessed the beauty of face and form which rendered her mother one of the most beautiful of women. Mrs. Grant was a blonde, of delicate figure, rather below middle stature. Mrs. Hayes was of very attractive appearance. Mrs. Garfield was noted for her tact, and her husband one said that he never had to explain away any words of his wife.

Mrs. Arthur, who died before her husband became President, was known as "the beautiful Miss Herndon with the marvellous voice" before her marriage.

Mrs. Harrison was fair as a girl and possessed a blonde style of beauty, which also belongs to Mrs. McKinley.

How Congress Spring Was Named

When John Taylor Gilman, a member of Congress, visited the log houses which chiefly constituted Saratoga in its early history, he was accompanied one day on a hunting ramble by a young son of the woodsman with whom he boarded. When they returned to the cabin the boy enthusiastically shouted, "Oh, ma, we've found a new spring!" "Who found it?" he was asked. Turning to the distinguished lawmaker the little fellow admiringly exclaimed: "Why, the Congress!" And to this day the name has clung to one of the most celebrated of the springs which made the place a sanitary resort long before it became the seat of summer fashion.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Early Promise.

"I'm going to be proud of that small boy of mine one of these days," he exclaimed, earnestly.

"Is he talented?"

"No. He's going to be a business man. I told him last week if he'd be a good boy I'd take him to the circus. Instead of taking me right up, he thought the proposition over for a minute, and then asked me if I thought it was a good circus."—Washington Star.

FROM THE BEST THINKERS

Who am I; what is this me? A voice, a motion, an appearance; some embodied visualized idea in the Eternal Mind? "Cogito ergo sum." Alas! poor cogitator, this takes us but a little way. Sure enough, I am; and lately was not. But how? whence? whereto? The answer lies all around, written in all colors and motions, uttered in all tones of jubilee and wail, in thousand fingered, thousand voiced, harmonious nature; but where is the cunning eye and ear to whom that God-written apocalypse will yield articulate meaning We sit as in a boundless phantasmagoria and dream grotto; boundless, for the faintest star, the remotest century, lies not even nearer the verge thereof. Sounds and many visions flit round our sense; but Him, the Unslumbering, whose work both dream and dreamer are, we seek not; except in rare, half-waking moments, suspect not.—Thomas Carlyle.

A man may be as brilliant, as clever, as strong and as broad as you please and with all this, if he is not good, he may be a paltry fellow; even the sublime which he seems to reach, in his most splendid achievements, is only a brilliant sort of badness.—John Stuart Blackie.

I wish to suggest that a man may be very industrious, and yet not spend his time well. There is no more fatal blunderer than he who consumes the greater part of his life getting his living. All great enterprises are self-supporting.—Henry David Thoreau.

Man dwells apart, though not alone;
He walks among his peers unread;
The best of thoughts which he hath known,
For lack of listeners, are not said.
—Jean Ingelow.

A friend is worth all hazzards we can run.
Poor is the friendless master of a world:
A world in purchase for a friend is gain.—Young.

How we all attitudinize to ourselves! The whole of life often seems one long dramatic performance, in which one-half of us is forever posing to the other half.—Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

A Thrust.

"I believe we mothers cannot be too careful. Whenever there is any difficulty between my husband and me, I send the children outdoors immediately."

MOSEBY ESCAPED

George W. Fink Had the Famous Guerrilla Under Arrest.

The man who captured Colonel John Singleton Moseby, the most famous of the Confederate guerillas during the civil war, was George W. Fink. The fact that Moseby was a prisoner under Fink for only a short time, not more than half an hour, in fact, does not take away much from the glory of his achievement, as may be seen from the circumstances of the incident as related by Mr. Fink at the Union station in the special train in which the colonists lay over while arrangements for the transfer from the Pennsylvania to the Fort Wayne were being made.

At the outbreak of the war Fink enlisted in Troop A, of the First Pennsylvania Cavalry, and went with that command almost immediately to the region of the Shenandoah Valley, where their field of operations continued to be. In 1861 Fink was one day a member of a scouting party sent out to reconnoiter, and in that capacity traveled a considerable distance from the spot where the camp had been pitched. It was learned from some of the Union sympathizers in the region that a small party of Confederates were concealed in a house three or four miles away, and a detachment was sent after them.

Fink himself rode up to the door and demanded entrance, which was refused him by the woman who answered his knock at the door. She denied vigorously that any soldiers were within and loudly protested against the intrusion of the scouts.

In one of the upper chambers two officers, a lieutenant and a captain, were found lying under the bed, and were triumphantly dragged forth, covered with dust and lint from the floor. In another room a third man, dressed in civilian's clothes, but very evidently connected with the army, was found and placed under arrest in company with the others. Their arms were taken from them, and under the guard of Fink and one companion their return to the camp was begun.

On the way a thick wood was passed through. The man in civilian's clothes was riding at the front of the little party. When the middle of the grove was reached he wheeled his horse, plunged the rowels into its side and dashed off to the right. Fink promptly raised his carbine and fired at the rapidly retreating form. The horse fell dead, but the rider leaped free from the animal's body and ran like the traditional white head further into the woods. The cavalrymen could not leave the two prisoners who remained, and who were watching with breathless interest the flight of their comrade, so the journey to the camp was continued without chase having been made.

When headquarters were reached the two officers were turned over to the commander. On their way to the guard house they turned to Fink and one of them said:

"You may be interested in knowing that the man who got away was Colonel Moseby." Then he started on with his companion. Fink, in telling the incident said:

"I was feeling sore enough over the escape, as it was, but when I heard who my prisoner was, I felt like going to the guard house myself and serving the longest sentence I could persuade my superiors to give me."

It has never been positively established that the man who got away in the woods was really Moseby. The two officers averred that it was, and Fink's comrades believed them and always called him "the man who captured Moseby."

If it was Moseby it was the closest escape he ever had from becoming a prisoner of the Federal government, for there was no man probably in the whole rebel army who was more wanted than he was and against whom more determined efforts were directed. Arch H. Rowand, Jr., the well-known local attorney, who was during the war one of the most famous of Federal scouts, put in the best part of three years in trying to apprehend him. Mr. Rowand this morning said in connection with the Fink incident.

"If Fink really had him I never heard of it. I put in my spare time and a good deal more during 1862-3-4 in going after the doughty old fellow, and when we weren't after him he was after us. I was once chased by three of his men from Stickers Gap clear into Harper's Ferry. My own opinion is that the man who skipped out in the woods Fink speaks of was not the guerilla at all, but that the officers who didn't get a chance to clear out just said he was, to make their own captors feel sore at their loss. Of course you understand I don't know anything about the affair, and that this theory is one of my own construction."

Moseby is still alive and resides in California. He came into great prominence just after the close of the Civil war by becoming a Republican, or as the phrase went then, a "reconstructed rebel." He held office under President Grant and has always remained an administration man. During the Spanish war he came into public notice again by applying for a commission. He was told to get the recommendation of the Senators of his State, but hotly declined to seek any such backing, closing the letter in which he did so with the characteristic declaration that he was after an army job, not a political appointment.

"The use of visiting-cards dates back to quite an antiquity," explains Mrs. Van Koert Schuyler, in the Ladies' Home Journal. "Formerly the porter at the lodge or door of great houses kept a visitors' book, in which he scrawled his idea of the names of those who called upon the master and his family, and to whose inspection it was submitted from time to time. One fine gentleman, a scion of the nobility from the Fauborg St. Germain, was shocked to find that his porter kept so poor a register of the names of those who had called upon him. The names, badly written with spluttering pen and pale or muddy ink, suggested to him the idea of writing his own name upon slips of paper or bits of cardboard in advance of calling upon his neighbors lest his name should fare as badly at the hands of their porters. This custom soon became generally established."

SCYTHE IN THE PINE TREE.

A Constant Reminder of the Son's Going to the War, Never to Return.

Thirty-eight years ago young Augustus Bliss, of Warwick, quit cutting brush on his father's farm, hung his scythe on a pine tree and went off to war. The soldier boy never came back, and the scythe has never been taken down from the tree where he hung it, but has become imbedded in the growing pine until it is a fixture. This pathetic reminder of the great civil struggle is a familiar sight to members of the Sheomet Club of this city, as the tree stands near the club's comfortable quarters in Blissville, a hamlet just across the North Orange line into Warwick.

When young Augustus Bliss left home and parents, to fight his country's battles, Blissville was a busy centre of small industries, traces of which remain to tell the story of the shifting of the scene of manufacturing from the small country hamlet to large centres. The tree has witnessed all these changes, has seen the mill standing near slowly falling into decay, the population changing, but still the scythe hangs there, summer and winter, a mute testimonial to the devotion to duty that animated young Bliss. His father, Milton Bliss, was engaged in building the dam standing by, and sent his son to cut some briers that were in the way of stone that were needed. After the briers were cut the scythe was hung on a small pine tree near, probably without a thought of how long it would remain there.

In a day or two Augustus Bliss went to the front, having enlisted for a three years' term of service in the army some time previous. The young soldier never came back. He was but eighteen years old when he enlisted, August 4, 1862, in Company H, Thirty-sixth Massachusetts Regiment. While with his regiment in the South, he was overtaken by a fatal disease and died in an army hospital at Mildale, Miss. The circumstances of his contracting disease were very sad. He had gone to get water for his comrades, and his company had orders to march while he was gone. He tried to overtake them, and the over-exertion was more than he could stand, and he was taken ill with fever before he had been in battle. He was not brought home for burial, but his name is on the roll of honor on the soldiers' monument at Orange.

In all these years no one has meddled with the scythe. It has hung there a symbol and visible reminder to his father of his son's devotion to duty. As the tree grew, the scythe has become embedded in the wood, until it is a part of the tree. The snath, which has been forced off the scythe by the growing tree, is supported in its original position by a small framework. The woodwork of the tholes has yielded to the action of the elements and fallen away. Around the tree, which is probably a little over a foot in diameter at its base, has been erected a railing.—Springfield Republican.

The Man Who Does Not Hurry.

Many evils in this life come from undue haste in the morning. A Roman gentleman of excellent family and large income killed himself because, as he left word, he was "tired of doing the same things." Think of the hideous monotony of morning life. You stretch yourself in bed and yawn; a sense of duty drags you out, just as in earlier years a chapel bell summoned you at school to early and shivering prayers. You poke your feet into slippers. Bath, the operation of shaving, a quick decision as to the necessity of a change in underclothes or linen, then a rush into clothes, as though you were a fireman in active service. You gobble breakfast and a newspaper, there is a wild scramble for a street car, there is suspension from a strap, and you are at the office with a dash of shaving-soap close to an ear and biscuit crumbs on your mustache. And for what?

The body is too fine a thing to be treated in haste. We know a man, and we think of him now with reverence, who snaps fingers at conventional duty. He snoozes after he has had eight or nine hours of sleep. After he has made ready his bath he lies down again to recover from the exertion. He then puts a Scotch cap on his head—association of ideas, for he drank Scotch the night before—gets into the tub, where he soaks for fifteen or twenty minutes, and reads a novel. Then in bath-robe he drinks two or three glasses of water and eats a sliced orange. He shaves himself as carefully and slowly as though he were about to be hanged. He then examines his stock of shirts, which leads him to a study of the methods pursued in a modern "American hand laundry." He chooses a cravat to suit the sky and the temperature of the day. About an hour and a half after he parted from sleep he consumes a cup of coffee and a roll. Finally he saunters toward the street corner, and there he waits until he sees a car with empty seats. Do you call him lazy? He has all eternity before him. And we claim that this man is better prepared to meet the problems of the day than you, who are complimented when some one describes you as a hustler. It is true that if the deliberate one is working for others they may not appreciate his deliberation; they may discharge him. But this is a mere detail. Others will gladly hire him at a princely salary.

Unpreparedness.

A courier presses toward the commanding general, his steed foaming conventionally.

"The enemy is in motion," he cries, "but it is impossible to decide whether he advances or retreats!"

Again the sickening unpreparedness of the war office, which should have provided charts of the Boer trouser, enabling the strategists at the front to determine at a glance in which direction any person wearing this garment was proceeding.

What the Gentleman Said

Mrs. Crimsonbeak—Did you say that Miss Decolleta was the best dressed woman at the opera?"

Mr. Crimsonbeak—No. I didn't say exactly that. What I did say was that she outstripped all the others.

Eating and Sleeping.

Food supplies the substance for repairing the wastes of the body, and gives strength. Sleep affords the opportunity for these repairs to be made. Both are necessary to health. If you can't eat and sleep, take Hood's Sarsaparilla. It creates a good appetite and tones the digestive organs, and it gives the sweet, restful sleep of childhood. Be sure to get Hood's [illegible]

Biliousness is cured by Hood's Pills. 25 cents.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other goods offered for sale in our shop.

A YELLOW SEA POPPY.

Only a yellow sea poppy,
That grew in the shingle and sand,
Kissed by the spray of the ocean,
Afar from the dews of the land.
Hard is thy bed, little beauty,
And few are the comforts that bless;
No butterfly wing passes by thee,
Thy life is one lonely distress.

Yet thou art golden in beauty,
And delicate, too, in thy form.
There! as I lifted thy glory,
'Tis shattered before the rude storm.
Flower, thou art parched in this desert,
Too dry for one tear of complaint;
Around thee hard stones, and above
Fierce rays—thou wilt wither and faint.

"Oh, no," said the poppy, "not so;
God made me to blossom out here;
My red-coated brothers, I know,
Were formed for a different sphere.
But God wanted one little flower
To grow where no other bloom grew,
And He has provided my dower,
Where you think the comforts are few.

"And if He has called you to be
Where all things seem barren and bare,
Then learn this blest lesson from me—
God's flowers in a desert are fair.
The yellow sea poppy God made
To grow amid shingle and sand;
And here I have always His aid,
To me 'tis a good, fruitful land."

All of our claims have been more or less developed and it is our purpose to put the same on a paying basis at once.

Our company owns, clear of incumbrances the following claims: The Sedalia Extension, the Sedalia Extension No. 2, which property adjoins the great Sedalia mine, which has been a big producer for upwards of seventeen years; the Copper King of Colorado, which immediately adjoins the above; the Copper Queen of Salida, a very promising property, only a few steps from the depot in Salida. This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the Sunshine, located two miles east of Salida at Cleora Station, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, also on the Arkansas river, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

No Council Meeting.

A special meeting of the Town Council was called for last night, but there not being enough of the city's fathers present to form a quorum, the business of the evening was adjourned till Thursday night.

Speaker Kerr.

The Ottawa Free Press says—"It is pretty well settled that Senator William Kerr, of Cobourg, will be the next Speaker of the Senate. Senator Kerr is one of the old Liberals, a man whose political record is spotless, and whose appointment would be widely appreciated in the party. Senator Kerr's great popularity, his calm judgement, the name for strict fairness commend him for the high office which he is likely to fill." Mr. F. D. Kerr, town, is a son of Senator Kerr.

Our Beautiful Lakes.

Bobcaygeon Independent.—The Rev. Dr. Dewart, of Toronto, writes enthusiastically to the Globe, of a recent visit to the Kawartha Lakes. He deals specially with Stony Lake, and describes the scene on his arrival at the lake as "a thing of beauty and a joy for ever." The Lakes are also vividly described in the Racine Daily Times, Wisconsin with a large display heading "Kawartha Lakes a pleasant spot for Campers and Tourists," and also in an Ohio paper. The Lakes have been wonderfully advertised this year, and are becoming more popular year by year. Next season will see a still larger invasion of tourists.

The Indian Pow-Wow.

Johnston Paudash, Indian Chief, Hiawatha, passed through town yesterday on his way from Christian Island, near Midland, where a big Indian pow-wow, which lasted all last week, took place. He was accompanied to Christian Island by Moses Anderson, also of Hiawatha, and four or five other representatives of the Rosneath and Mud Lake Reserves. There were about 1,200 Indians in attendance at the camp. Johnston says he met a number of Indians who are anxious to obtain medals or lands from the government in recognition of the services their grandfathers rendered the country during the war of 1812. Coming from Christian Island Johnston spent a week visiting the Indians of the Rama Reserve, near Orillia, where he spent a delightful time. He brings with him a number of interesting mementoes, including some excellent photographs of several charming Indian princesses.

Popular Steamboat Crew.

Lindsay Post.—The fierce gale of Wednesday morning last was an augury of pleasant things for the crew of the Royal Mail Steamer Esturion, of the Trent Valley Navigation Co's. line, plying between Lindsay and Bobcaygeon. When the vessel reached the untroubled waters of the river, a number of Sturgeon Point cottagers gathered at the bow of the vessel, when Mr. J. D. Flavelle, on behalf of the members of Sturgeon Point colony, handed Purser Jack Diament $20, Fireman Ab. Dafoe $10, and Capt. Johnston and Engineer Marshall, handsome pipes, briefly explaining that the gifts represented in a feeble way the gratitude all residents felt towards the crew for innumerable kindness and unvarying courtesy during the season about closing. The recipients made brief but suitable replies, and they wear the same smiles still.

*NOTE.—25 prizes of Greenbacks and Gold will be paid for truthful letters regarding experience in coffee drinking. See statement in this paper Oct. 1st, headed "More Boxes of Gold."

If you miss the paper write to the Postum Co., at Battle Creek, Mich.

Another Steamer.

A despatch from Kingston says. It is said that the Lake Ontario and Bay of Quinte Navigation's Company will build another steamer this winter, as the steamer North King and Hero cannot attend to the traffic, which is ever increasing. It is possible that the steamer Hero may be rebuilt, while the travelling public admits that the North King is one of the best sea boats on the lake, it is the general opinion that she should be replaced by a much large and faster craft. The North King would make an excellant auxilary to a larger and faster steamer, and we hope the company will build such a boat during this coming winter.

HOW ARE YOUR NERVES?

THE R CONDITION DETERMINES THE STATE OF YOUR HEALTH.

Paine's Celery Compound

is a Nerve Medicine and Nerve Food.

It Makes Sick People Well

Too many people are ignorant of the fact that the nerves regulate the blood supply through the body. The condition of the nerves should therefore claim our best attention.

If the nerves are out of repair the result is, loss of sleep, irritability, depression of spirits and lassitude, all of which are the beginning of serious ailments and diseases.

Paine's Celery Compound is a nerve medicine and nerve food as well as a purifier of the blood. When used, it removes from the nerve centres all irritability, and by supplying abundant nutrition to the nerve tissue secures healthy action throughout the nervous system.

When men and women are worried and overworked in the home, workshop, store or office, and find it hard to get sleep at night—when the used-up brain gets no time for repair, nothing so refreshes, strengthens and gives vigorous life as Paine's Celery Compound. It is the food for brain and nerves.

Paine's Celery Compound is the acknowledged chief of all medicines for the cure of diseases due to nervous weakness or to a bad condition of the blood. It is the one real remedy known to-day that never fails to benefit. Get Paine's Celery Compound and only "Paine's" if you would be well and strong.

THAT ELECTRIC ROAD.

Another Meeting Regarding the Road From Brighton to Havelock.

The Havelock Standard says.—"A meeting of the representatives of the various municipalities through which the new electric railway will run, was held at Warworth on Wednesday afternoon, for the purpose of ascertaining what route would be adopted for the road and also as to the probable amount of shiping which could be secured. The meeting was not as largely attended as it should have been, Brighton and Havelock having the largest deputation present. Those from Havelock were.—Mr. Jas. Bryans, reeve; Councillors Jas. Mark, S. S. Joyace and Wm. Cooper, Mr. John Brown and Mr. P. Lancaster.

"Mr. Gunyo, reeve of Brighton, opened the proceedings by reading a statement of thee intentions of the Company, who have decided to aband the public highway route, which was found to be unpopular among the people and purchase a private right of way right through, following closely the survey of the proposed Brighton and Marmora Railway, made in 1857. The bonus for the road was voted on by Brighton and was not carried, when Coburg secured it, and ran the road to Harwood, thence to Trent Bridge by water, and from there on to the iron mines.

"Mr. D. Carlow officiated as chairman and called upon the deputation to express their views, which were very fovorable. Messrs. Jas. Bryans, S. S. Joyce and Jno. Brown delivered excellant addresses, pointing out the numerous advantages Havelock presents to the road as a feeder from the back country, which is exceedingly rich in minerals, wood and lumber, and which, too, is a great inducement to tourists and sportsmen. Mr. Harnden, electric engineer, assured the deputations that the road would be built. The cost per mile would probably be $15,000, the total running up to $800,000.

"Committee were appointed for each municipality, to obtain statistics in regard to amount of shipping, etc., they would be likely to furnish. Meeting will also be held to give public information on the scheme.

"The Havelock committee is composed of Messrs. Jas. Bryans, Jas. Mark, A. Miell, Jos. Knox and S. S. Joyce. For Belmont township Messrs. J. A. Sexsmith, Jno. Brown, R. Burgess, R. Anderson and Wm. Young were selected."

TRAINED NURSE.

Speaks About Nourishing Food.

"A physician's wife, Mrs. Dr Landon, gave me a packet of Grape-Nuts about a year ago, with the remark that she was sure I would find the food very for my parents. I was particularly attracted to the food, as at the time the weather was very hot and I appreciated the fact that the Grape-Nuts required no cooking.

"The food was deliciously crisp, and most inviting to the appetite. After making use of it twice a day for three or four weeks, I discovered that it was a most wonderful invigorator. I used to suffer greatly from exhaustion, headaches and depression of spirits. My work had been very trying at times and indigestion had set in.

"Now I am always well and ready for any amount of work, have an abundance of active energy and cheerfulness and mental poise, I have proved to my entire satisfaction that this change has been brought about by Grape-Nuts food.

"The fact that it is predigested is a very desirable feature. I have had many remarkable results in feeding Grape-Nuts to my patients, and I cannot speak too highly of the food. My friends constantly comment on the change in my appearance. I have gained nine pounds since beginning the use of this food." Eleanor Miller, Trained Medical and Surgical Nurse, 515 Jeff. St., Bay City, Mich.

"Your son," said the school teacher, "is very backward in his studies." "That's funny," mused the father. "At home, in conversation with me, he seems to know it all."—Philadelphia North American.

"I wish I knew," said Mr. Tucker, "how I caught this cold."

"This cold's in your head, ain't it, paw?"

"Yes."

"I guess you got it by changing your mind."

Feminine Inconsistency.

It's such a nuisance having to remove one's hat," remarked a pretty girl in a marvellous piece of millinery at the theatre recently.

"But everybody does it nowadays, and, after all, it's only common courtesy," the youth replied.

"Yes, of course; still it's most inconvenient. But I've the greatest scheme in the world," she added enthusiastically. "Instead of hatpins, that are always falling out of one's hat during the performance and rolling off under the seats, I have a new patent arrangement—two cute little shell combs that are attached to the hat and fasten in the hair. They are simply fine."

"And they do away with these barbarous long pins?" the man interrupted, with a shudder.

The girl laughed. "What a horror you men have of them! I'll show you how this thing works. Not now—I never take off my hat till just before the curtain goes up." The conversation then ran in other channels, and as the music ceased and the lights were lowered an impatient voice was heard to exclaim:

"Oh, dear, I can't get my hat off."

"Can I help you?" her escort asked.

"Oh, dear, one of those nasty little combs has got caught in my hair. If it were only light——"

"Possibly I can disentangle it."

"Ouch! You're pulling my hair."

A painfully distinct voice from the rear: "Will you ask that lady to remove her hat?"

"Oh, I can't. It won't come off."

Another voice with equal distinctness: "I'd speak to the usher."

"What shall I do? What shall I do? I can't budge it!" The girl was growing tearful. "Isn't there a lady back of me?"

"No, only men."

"This is too awful! What a beastly arrangement this is!"

Several minutes elapse, during which twenty square feet of stage are rendered invisible to part of the audience, who evince impatience. Finally, a triumphant voice exclaims:

"There, it's off at last. But hasn't my hair come with it? Oh, I know I'm a fright. What a hateful arrangement! The man who invented it ought to be drawn and quartered."

The youth smiled, but refrained from comments.

Need of Pure Air.

In order that sleep may perform its legitimate work of restoration it demands that its conditions and environment shall offer no obstacle to its accomplishment. Sleep demands a purer atmosphere than the waking hours of life. Awake and at work we are somewhat on the defensive, but we yield ourselves into the arms of slumber and are at the mercy of unseen foes lurking in secret hiding places about our rooms, close beside our beds and beneath our very pillows.

ANNOUNCEMENT

To the People of Peterborough and vicinity:

Saturday, September 15th, China Hall was re-opened with a stock which for quality, completeness and variety is unsurpassed in Canada.

During the last six months we have been collecting these goods from every quarter of the globe, and the result will make of China Hall a veritable art gallery.

Added to a full line of staple and domestic wares, we show direct importatians from Egypt, Japan, Austria, France, Germany, Spain, Bohemia, England, America, and last, but not least, from Canada.

This collection comprises the newest styles in Dinner and Tea, Toilet and Salad Sets, Lamps, Cutlery, Silverware, Flower Pots, Cut Glass and Bric-a-bac, including specimens of such reliable wares as Habiland, Doulton, Ridgeway, Wedgewood and Farnival, Royal Bonn, Carlsbad, Satsenna, Awata, Lenara, Yokohama, Terra Cotta, Handengraven Egyptian and Cloisonnee.

Several of these lines are now placed on sale for the first time in Peterborough, and a few of them for the first time in Canada. Amongst these unique pieces may be seen (with a printed guarantee enclosed) a facsimile of the celebrated Portland vase which made Josiah Wedgewood famous.

China Hall in its present form is a model of convenience and beauty, and it has now every facility for the carrying on of an up-to-date trade. A prompt and courteous service may be relied upon, while a cordial welcome is assured to all visitors whether purchasers or not.

For the convenience of customers a cosy waiting room is provided, which we trust may be appreciated to the extent of being used and of becoming a rendezvous for ladies who wish to meet down town.

The accomplishment of all this has been no small task, and it is hoped that the public will take pride in this new store which, without exception, is the handsomest of its kind in Canada.

A few words as to our future policy. The business will be conducted upon a cash basis, with one price to all and positively no reduction from the marked figures, which will be as low as is compatible with the character of the goods, our aim being that customers should remember the quality after the price has been forgotten. No article will be represented as being better than it really is. Special attention given to matching and mending.

Thanking our numerous customers for their many expressions of goodwill, and for their adherence to us while in cramped quarters, we shall now take pleasure in welcoming them to our commodious and artistic premises at 360 George-st.

MINERS ARE GLAD COLD WEATHER IS COMING

They Think It Will Increase the Demand for Coal and Force an Adjustment.

ARBITRATION IS PERSISTENTLY SPOKEN OF.

But the Owners Declare That They Will Deal With Their Employes as Individuals Only—Strikers Increasing in Number.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 18.—If, as President Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers, claimed last night, 112,000 of the 141,000 mine workers in the Pennsylvania anthracite coal fields were idle yesterday it is certain that this number has been considerably augmented to-day by additions to the strikers' ranks.

The weather has grown much cooler since yesterday, and this change is greeted with joy by the mine workers, who believe that it will greatly increase the demand for coal, and thus force and early adjustment of the differences between them and their employers. Talk of arbitration is so persistent that the hope is growing that this method of settling the strike may eventually be adopted. However, the mine owners declare that they will deal only with their employes as individuals, and the strike leaders say they will insist upon formal recognition of the union.

One little band of miners in the Wyoming valley, and those of West End Coal Company, numbering a few hundred men, stand out prominently as the only men at work, and of nearly 90,000 in the Lackawanna region. Efforts to induce them to join the strikers have failed. They say they have always been treated kindly, they have no grievance, and they will therefore remain loyal to their employers.

ONLY ONE MINE WORKING.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 18.—There was no change in the strike situation in the Wyoming valley this morning. All the collieries that had been compelled to suspend operations yesterday were idle to-day. The companies had steam up at some of the mines ready to start the machinery, but the men did not put in an appearance.

The United Mine Workers had watchers in the vicinity of every colliery to see if any miners reported for work. The Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company had a small washery in operation employing about twelve company hands.

The colliery at Macanaqua, operated by the West End Coal Company, which was in operation yesterday, started up again this morning with a full force of men. The United Mine Workers have tried hard to get the men at this colliery to join them, but so far without success. It is the only mine in this district that is working.

COAL FAMINE AT OSWEGO.

Oswego, N. Y., Sept. 18.—The miners' strike in Pennsylvania threatens Oswego with a coal famine. Only one firm has any coal on hand to supply the trade, and that will sooon be exhausted. That concern is selling hundreds of tons daily, for which people are glad to pay cash. The big trestles here have been closed down because of the scarcity of coal. Unless the strike is soon settled much suffering will be caused here.

LABOR LEADERS PELTED.

Pottsville, Pa., Sept. 18.—All the Schuylkill region collieries resumed work this morning, with the single exception of Morea, operated by Dodson & Company. The Vulcan and the Buck Mountain, near Mahony City, are short-handed, however. The Lehigh Coal Company's Centralia Colliery which shut down at noon yesterday owing to scarcity of coal, resumed this morning with a less number of men at work than yesterday. It was said that work would be suspended at noon again to-day or perhaps earlier. It was reported to-day from Nesquehoning that last night, when Hugh Dempsey, of Saranton, and James Gallagher, of Hazleton, labor leaders, attempted to address a metting they were jeered and pelted with stale vegetables and had to stop.

STONED THE WORKERS

Shemokin, Pa., Sept. 18.—About 20 per cent. of the men who worked at Mount Carmel yesterday joined the strikers this morning, having cleaned up their work, and the strike leaders declare that the indications and that all the mines there will be tied up.

Some of the strikers at Mount Carmel this morning gathered in the neighborhood of the mines operated by the Reading Coal and Iron Company and the Union Coal Company, and stoned the men who persisted in going to work. The operators are calling in the services of a large force of deputies, and they declare they will protect those men who chose to work at their mines.

Superintendent P. Brennan, of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, gave out a statement to-day to the effect that the Henry Clay and other mines belonging to this company in the vicinity of Shamokin would not resume work until the strike should be settled. He said that it was useless to attempt to operate these mines.

NOT A HUNDRED WORKIING.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 18.—Scracely one hundred men and boys are at work throughout the entire valley, 35 miles long, from Pittston to Forest City. Even the washeries of the big corporations may be unable to accomplish anything, as the railroad men have given the National Executive Board to understand they will not draw coal cars out of the branches to the main lines.

The Delaware and Hidson Company, through its general superintendent, C. C. Rose, made the announcement today that as soon as there should be a demand anywhere for their coal they would find the men to operate one or more of their collieries and provide such workmen with protection.

A call at the score of offices of the mine operators here to-day showed all agreed upon the enormity of the strike movement, and for the most part all the superintendent are apparently chagrined at its wide extent. But the superintendents feel certain that the companis will maintain the position they have taken.

CHINA HALL.

The MacFarlane Wilson Co's New Store is Up-to-Date.

Visitors to Peterborough during the time the Central Exhibition is on, will find no more attractive looking business house than China Hall, the home of the Macfarlane Wilson Company, corner of George and Simcoe streets.

The fire which last spring completely destroyed the premises of the Macfarlane Wilson Company, with its contents, may in one respect be said to have been a blessing in disguise, for when the company last week moved back to their old stand they found that for elegance, convenience and general attractiveness, they possessed a store that has perhaps no equal in Ontario, or any of our Canadian cities.

China Hall these days is crowded, not only with those who are anxious to buy the latest ideas in chinaware but by visitors anxious to get a look at a stock that for completeness of variety is not surpassed by any city stock in Canada. The store inside is finished off in the most superb manner, with its metallic ceiling, its prettily prepared walls that harmonize, and effectively with the surroundings, and its elegant polished oak fixtures. From George and Simcoe sts. through large plate glass windows, an abundance of light is admitted to show up everything to advantage.

A rather unique feature in connection with China Hall is a ladies' waiting room in the rear of the store, furnished in a very home-like manner, and in which not only shoppers, but anyone who may desire, can meet their friends. Then there is the office, equally as handsome, making China Hall an establishment of which Peterborough may well feel proud.

A BUILDING OF THEIR OWN.

Catholic Societies Would Like to Have a Building of Their Own.

Members of the different Roman Catholic Societies assembled in their respective lodge rooms Monday evening for the purpose of discussing the feasibility of erecting or purchasing a building which could be used in common by the Emerald Benevolent Association, the Catholic Mutual Beneficial Association, the Catholic Literary Association, and the Total Abstainers' Society.

The idea, which has many commendable features, has been informally talked of amongst the membership of the Catholic Societies for some time, and it was finally decided to bring the matter to a head. The heads of the different societies accordingly called out the members, and each organization appointed representatives to attend a meeting which was held last evening for the purpose of discussing the scheme.

Many of the prominent movers in th eproject were seen durung the day, and the hope was universally expressed that His Lordship Bishop O'Connor would look with favour on a proposition to errect a large building, which would be the property of the Church, and in which appartments could be rented by the various Catholic Societies. It is felt by many that the building would be paying investment, with four such strong organizations as tenants.

At the Opera Last Night.

The Lyceum Company presented the romantic drama "A Cavalier of France," last night in the Bradburn Opera to a fair sized house. The acting was good, and special mention might be made of the fourth act, which was applauded again and again. It was a fine production presented by a strong company.

VON WALDERSEE REACHES CHINA

Arrival of the Commander-in-chief May Cause a Development.

TROUBLE FEARED IN WEST RIVER

Chinese Troops Around Canton Are Drilling in Every Direction—British Warship Ordered to Canton

London, Sept. 19.

"On the eve of Li Hung Chang's departure," says the Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Express, wiring yesterday, "he received a strong worded cablegram from Lord Salisbury, declaring that the British Government would insist upon the return of the Emperor Kwang Su to Pekin as an absolutely essential condition of peace negotiations, without which the dissolution of the Chinese Empire was inevitable.

"Lord Salisbury informed Earl Li that the allies desired to preserve China, but that nothing would divert them from their irrevocable intention of punishing those responsible for the outrages, whom they would, if necessary, pursue over all China."

London, Sept. 19, 2.30 a.m.

As might have been expected, coincident with the arrival of Count Von Waldersee in China, comes the most important declaration of policy yet issued by any of the allies. As the Daily News remarks—"Germany's circular note has turned the tables on Russia, whose evacuation proposal had put German yinto an awkward position. Now if Russia assents to the German note, she will be unable to continue," says the Daily News, "to pose as China's lenient and forgiving friend, while, if she dissents, Russia will lay herself open to the charge of reducing the punitive expedition to a farce."

London, Sept, 19.

The London Morning papers have little but praise for what is called Germany's "Admirable Note," The Times goes so far as to wish that the credit of making such a proposal belonged to Great Britain. The Morning Post alone, in a well reasoned editorial points out a grave objection, namely, that if the real authorizes and instigators of the uprising should prove to be identical with the personnel of the Chinese Government it can hardly be expected that they will deliver themselves up, and that the Chinese Government should be disignated, as guilty it would be under the ban of the powers. A condition of things only terminable by the conquest of China, or a revolution producing a new Government. Therefore, says the Morning Post. The powers should carefully weigh matters before committing themselves. There is no confirmation in any other quarter of Lord Salisbury's alleged telegram to Li Hung Chang, referred to by the Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Express.

London, Sept. 18.—Affairs in China are still in a condition of suspended animation. The arrival of Count Von Waldersee, the commander-in-chief of the allied forces at Hong Kong, is the only event worth chronicling. It is only a question of a week or more when the Count will have reached Pekin when the situation may be expected to develop, for the passion of the Emperor William for military glory will not permit of his representative in China taking upon himself an inactive role. It begins to look more and more as if the jalousies of the powers were at the bottom of the complete inaction which prevails. The correspondent of The Times is exposing in on half hearted way the plan of the Empress Dowager to massacre the Legations had they taken advantage of the offered escort to Tien Tsin. It seems that the Dowager intended to repeat the Cawnpore massacre had not the aututeness of Sir Claude Macdonald and his fellow Ministers foreseen the bloodthirsty design. And yet the civilized powers of Europe are treating a would-be murderess with a consideration that is exas-erating.

WALDERSEE AT HONG KONG.

Hong Kong, Sept. 18.—The German steamer Sachsen, having on board Field Marshal Count Von Walderaee, commander-in-chief of the International forces in China, and his staff, has arrived here.

A RISING IS FEARED.

Hong Kong, Sept. 18.—It is reported in the West River district that Chinese troops are visible in every town, and that they are actively drilling. A Chinese gunboat is again patrolling the river, and it is evident that some action is contemplated. The Sandpiper, which has been patrolling the Delta, has proceeded to Canton.

AGREEMENT AT FUCHOW.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The State Department has received a despatch from the Consul at Fuchow, China, transmitting a copy of an agreement entered into between the Viceroy and the Tartar General of Fuhkien province and the Foreign Consuls at Fuchow, which provides that in his absence the Chinese authorities will do everything in their power to protect the lives and property of foreign officers, merchants merchants and missionaries resident in Fuhkien and at Amoy; that central and southern China shall not be attacked by the foreign powers as long as the local authorities maintain order, and that the admirals of the several nations will be informed that it is not advisable that a number of naval vessels should visit Fuchow lest the people be alarmed. The agreement signed by the Russian, United States, Japanese, British and French Consuls and by Viceroy Hsu Ying Kuei and Gen Shenlieh.

RAILWAY TO PEKIN.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The War Department has received the following cablegrams from Gen. Chaffee.

"Taku 'no date".—Adjutant-General Washington.

"Pekin, Sept. 13.—Russian commander assures me he has ordered repair material from Port Arthur, Vladivostock and United States, and that he feels assured railway will be repaired in two months. Need fifty strom flags and 5,000 more small flags; latter required for Chinese houses to show our protection. Goodnow telegrpphs 7th at request of Li Hung Chang, latter leaves Shanghai in a week or so. (Signed) Chaffee."

POWERS ACCEPT LI HUNG CHANG.

London, Sept. 17.—The Daily Graphic asserts that all the powers have accepted Li Hung Chang, and will probably accept Prince Ching as negotiaters. It says also that the powers have agreed to insist that a central Government, satisfactory to the powers, shall be stablished in China, and that full retribution shall be exacted for the attacks upon the legations.

No communications, however, have yet passed between the powers concern in indemnities, and a Berlin despatch says it is believed there that Dr. Von Schwarzenstein, the German Minister, will purposely delay negotiations until Marshal Von Waldersee has arrived.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

LACROSSE.

The Toronto Telegram says—A young lacrosse man who deserves a whole lot of credit is Rolly Glover of Peterborough, who played so well for Bracebridge against Campbellford on Friday last at Beaverton. for the eastern junior championship. Glover whose home is in Peterborough. is an all-round sport, and puts up a great game at point for Peterborough's hockey team.

The Telegram might have gone on to say that out of the twelve goals scored by Bracebridge, Glover gets the credit of tallying nine, and he only shot ten times on the flags at that.

BASEBALL.

The Port Hope Guide says—We would like to see one more good game before the season closes, say with Peterborough. . . . When will Bowmanville play off with Peterborough for the League championship. The game should be played in Port Hope.

RUGBY.

The game is going to boom in Lakefield this fall, and the probabilities are that the Peterborough second team will have an occasional match. The Lakefield club intends organizing at once, and will have on the team such men as A. O. Langley, Mr. McKenzie and Mr. Walker.

LACROSSE.

The executive committee of the lacrosse club meets to-morrow evening.

FOR BIG STAKES.

Mr. J. W. Smith Offers to Put up $2,500 on a Boat Race.

The Toronto Telegram says that Mr. J. W. Smith, of Orillia, the well-known backer of Jake Gaudier, accompanied by Ned Hanlan, called at the Telegram office this morning and stated that he would match Eddie Durnan against George Towns, champion of England, for four hundred pounds, and allow Towns twenty-five pounds expenses. The race is to be be three miles with a turn, and to be rowed on Toronto bay this fall. Mr. Smith furthermore says he will match Gaudaur against Towns for £500 a side, the race to be rowed at Rat Portage.

Towns should certainly be in good shape, for he recently defeated Wray on the Thames.

The above challenge has been cabled to the Telegram's London correspondent with instructions to try and arrange either race.

Mr. Smith was seen by the Times yesterday, and stated that he had received a cable despatch stating that his proposal was accepted, provided fifty pounds was allowed for expenses. Mr. Smith says when he went to England with Gaudaur, he was allowed only twenty-five pounds.

TWENTY MILLIONS LOSS.

This is Considered a Conservative Estimate of the Damage at Galveston.

Galveston, Tex., Sept. 18.—There have been already hauled on the Galveston Island and along the bay shores of the mainland opposite the Island about 4,000 corpses. The long stretch of debris along the beac hand the western portion of the Island has not yet been heard from. The prairies of the mainland over which the waters rushed have also their tales to tell. It may be said after investigation that a conservative estimate of the loss of life in Galveston is 6,500.

As to the property loss, it is hard to make an estimate. Col. Lowe's estimate of $15,000,000 to $20,000,00 is conservative.

The War Department will undertake as soon as possible the restoration of its property at this point, and the various railroads have decided to combine their forces. In six days a bridge will have been built and trains will be running over it.

O'ER CHANNEL IN BALLOON.

M Faure Crosses From London to France and will Try it Again.

Paris, Sept. 18.—M. Jacques Faure announces his intention of again crossing the Channel in a balloon. On the next occasion Cherbourg will be his starting point, and he will make use of special floats t okeep the balloon out of the water in case of emergency.

After starting home the Crystal Palace M. Faure's balloon rose to a height of 600 feet, and followed the course of the Thames. The coast was reached four hours and fifty minutes after the start, the balloon being then at an altitude over 2,000 feet, at which height it remained during the crossing. There was a clear sky and the temperature was mild.

The crossing occupied four hours, and the balloon landed safely at Aistle, between Boulogne and Etaples.

FIFTY LOCOMOTIVES CAPTURED BY BRITISH

Stevenson Probably Occupies Helspruit, on the Railway.

FIGHTING ON PORTUGUESE BORDER REPORTED.

Roberts Sends Details of General Macdonald's Defeat of the Enemy's Forces in the Orange River Colony.

Pretoria, Sept. 18.

Gen Pole-Carew has occupied Kaapmuiden, about twenty miles east of Nelspruit where he captured a number of locomotives and a considerable quantity of rolling stock.

London, Sept. 18.—The advance of Lord Roberts and his main column upon Komatipoort goes on with a tardiness which emphasizes most strongly the difficult nature of the country in which the British are operating. With the occupation of Nelspruit on the Pretoria-Delagoa Bay Railway, which was in all likelihood accomplished by Gen. Stevenson yesterday afternoon an advance on the part of French and Buller would probably take place, and the result of this will soon be reported. The Boers are evidently continuing the fight, for they show no sign of laying down their arms. They are making preparations to resist the march of the British along the railway towards the border, as the blowing up of Kaap Mulden clearly indicates. This step will make it difficult for General French to transfer the nine-three locomotives which he has captured at Barberton from the branch to the main line, so that he engines will be comparatively useless for some time.

The despatch which reports fighting at Komatipoort is probably premature, as it is scarcely likely that any portion of the British force has penetrated to the Portuguese border, unless, perchance the cavalry of Generals Buller or French may have made a raid seventy or eighty miles in advance of the main British column.

As Lord Roberts says nothing in his most recent despatch of the surrender of Botha, it may be concluded that he Boer general is still at the head of his commandos.

LATEST DESPATCH FROM ROBERTS.

London, Sept. 18.—Lord Roberts reports from Machadodorp, under date of Monday, Sept. 17, that a few skirmishes have taken place between the British troops and the Boers. He adds that Gen. French has captured fifty locomotives in addition to the forty-three locomotives and other rolling stock which he took when he occupied Barberton, September 13, and that Gen. Stephenson was expected to occupy Nelspruit during the afternoon of September 17.

FIGHTING AT KOMATIPOORT.

Lorenzo Marquez, Sept. 18.—Fighting is proceeding at Komatipoort. All the available men have been sent to the frontier. It is expected that the Komati bridge will be destroyed. There is great uneasiness here.

Komatipoort is a town on the frontier of the Transvaal, and on the railway leading from Pretoria to Portuguese territory. It is situated about fifty miles from Lorenzo Marquez. With the occupation of Komatipoort the British would be able to cut off all supplies reaching the Boers by railway from Portuguese territory.

BOERS RETREATED OVER THE VET.

London, Sept. 18.—The War Office has received the following from Lord Roberts, dated Machadodorp, Sept. 15—

"French reports all quiet at Barberton. Among the prisoners are the Landdrost of that place and Commandant Van Dan Post, the late Chairman of the Orange Free State Raad.

"General Shoeman was found in jail at Barberton. He fought against us at Colesburg, and surrendered to French when we occupied Pretoria. He was tried by court-martial and put in prison by the Boers for high treason, his crime being his refusal to break his parole.

"A part of Boers, belonging, it is believed, to the commandos which surrounded Ladybrand, appeared near Brandfort with a view to destroying the railway. Kelly-Kanny at once strengthened the several posts between Smaaldeel and Bloemfontein and communicated with MacDonald, the commander of the Highland brigade of Hunter's division. Hunter was about to carry on a campaign against these bands of roaming Free Staters.

"On Sept. 13 MacDonald crossed the south bank of the Vet River, near Tafelkop, on the Winburg-Bloemfontein road, and came up with the enemy eight miles west of that place. He drove them northward across the Vet River, and pursued them in that direction along the Winburg-Smaaldeel Railway. The enemy retired in great confusion, and the road was strewn with things thrown away by them in their hurried flight. Seven Boers were captured. MacDonald also captured 21 wagons, 370 trek oxen, 6 cases of dynamite, and a quantity of gun and rifle ammunition, groceries, blankets and clothing. We had no casualties.

"Paget arrived at Hebron, northwest of Pretoria, yesterday afternoon, having driven off the Boers. During his march from Pienaars River Station he captured 10 prisoners and 1,000 cattle."

HAS BOTHA SURRENDERED?

New York, Sept. 18.—A large part of the Rustenburg commando has surrendered, and there are reports that Commandant Botha has given himself up, the London correspondent of the Tribune cables relative to the South African war.

THE JUNCTION BLOWN UP.

Lorenzo Marquez, Sept. 17.—The Boers have blown up Kaap Munden on the Pretoria and Lorenzo Marquez Railways.

WOUNDED CANADIANS.

London, Sept. 17.—It has been reported to the War Office that Pte. W. Hintoff, Fort Saskatchewan, was severely wounded in the knee while in action with the Strathcona Horse at Devil's Knuckles on Sept. 10th. C. J. Nicholson is also reported to have been wounded severely in the neck and jaw.

Private Smith of the first contingent, is dangerously ill at Cape Town.

Corp. Hintoff is from Fort Saskatchewan; C. J. Nicholson is from Winnipeg; 7336 is Pte. Smith, St. John Fusiliers.

IS ROBERTS RETURNING?

London, Sept. 18.—The Pietermaritzburg correspondent of the Daily Mail announces that Lord Roberts will start for England about Oct. [illegible]

THE EXHIBITION OPENED

A SCENE OF ACTIVITY AND HUSTLE AT THE GROUNDS.

A Large Number of Entries Made—Formal Opening This Afternoon.

The first day of the Fair opened yesterday morning, with indications of being a success in every way. The Exhibition grounds, which have been put in good shape, was a scene of bustle and activity. The main building is now filled with an attractive display of exhibits and the judges succeeded in finishing their work before night. The live stock was coming in all day, though the bulk will come this morning.

EXIT PRIZE FIGHTERS.

The Horton law in New York State, by which prize fighting was permitted, ended its infamous career a few days ago, and was, marked in its closing hours by battles of great profit to those who punched and satisfaction to those who cheered at the last exhibitions.

Some years ago, when the State of Nevada enacted a law permitting these ring contests the State was held in contempt for its act, which was otherwise approved of for the reason that it furnished by its own invitation a refuge for the bruisers, and it was hoped that they would go there and stay. But unfortunately for the success of this happy expectation, Nevada has no population to support prize fighters, who, with their hangers on, form the most unproductive class in the world. One big fight came off there, and was so far a financial failure that no other has taken place in Nevada, an illustration entirely conceded, tending to prove that these contests are inspired neither by a desire for pugilistic honors nor love of battle, but for gate money.

Naturally New York offered them an inviting field as being the most easily "worked" and standing for what is called in the location of the ring a "fine mark." They have worked the town well, and it is estimated that in two years the gate money has reached nearly $2,000,000, equaling the takings of all the respectable theatres in the city and exceeding by $500,000 what was expended either in charity or in the support of churches.

But the prize fighter's star has culminated, and will now rapidly decline while he himself will pass from the eminence of public view to the seedy duties of "chuckers out" in gambling rooms and drinking bars, an office he is well equipped to fill. So that he disappears the respectable people will be satisfied. He may even go to Nevada where there is a limited population to be tainted. The main thing wished for is his disappearance. It is not likely that even New York will repeat her folly and readmit him and his throng of sports, and it is certain that no other State in the Union is hastening to give him shelter. So far as this country is concerned, she never had any use for sluggers.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Plainly China is the under dog in this trouble, and what makes the prospect even less encouraging, it is a kind of yellow dog.

Foot-ball is a favorite game because it is a source of exercise, fun and something to boot.

Several of the powers say they won't leave China. This is chiefly because the latter can't help itself, and the former can and doubtless will help themselves.

WILD FOWL ATTACK A LIGHT

Keepers of Hog Island Light Kill Geese and Brant by the Hundred.

One of the keepers of the Hog Island light on the Virginia coast relates a remarkable experience with wild fowls at that light on a recent night.

Between 7 and 8:30 P. M. the watch on duty was aroused by the "honking" of wild geese and brant, accompanied by the crash of breaking glass. He hastily summoned the other keepers, who responded with shotguns. They opened fire on the bewildered birds with every gun. The battle lasted for an hour and a half. The guns got so hot that it was dangerous to use them and the shoulders of the men became sore from the recoil.

The supply of ammunition gave out and the fight ended. In the morning there were sixty-eight dead brant, geese and ducks at the foot of the tower. On the following morning the tower was again attacked by the birds. There being no stock of cartridges on the island, the guns were useless, but the keepers fought with sticks and captured 150 fowls, when a flock, apparently containing thousands, rushed upon them. They were compelled to seek shelter within the tower. So powerful was the flight of the frightened geese that the wire screens were penetrated, the light in the watchroom extinguished and the panes in three windows destroyed. These fowl had taken wing because of the severe weather prevailing upon their feeding grounds and were blinded by the intense glare of the powerful light in the top of the tower.

Hog island light marks one of the most dangerous shoals on the Virginia coast. It is an iron tower and stands 180 feet above mean high water. It is a first-class light and can be seen from the bridge of a steamer a distance of about twenty-five miles.

The Irish-American German.

"I came across a colored man who spoke with a German accent the other day," said a prominent stock broker "I dropped into a restaurant not far from the city hall for lunch, and the waiter who took my order, although unmistakably a colored man, spoke as though he had just come from some Pennsylvania Dutch settlement up the State. The thing was so pronounced that I spoke to the proprietor about it, and found that my suspicions were correct. The man was a full-blooded negro, but he had been born and raised in a small town near Reading, and had always associated with the whites, who spoke Pennsylvania Dutch. Queer, isn't it?" "Oh, I don't know," said one of the party, whose business takes him through the West. "A short time ago I came across a German who spoke English with a decided Irish brogue. He was an educated young fellow, a graduate of a German university, and he was very anxious to learn English. He drifted out to Chicago, and from there to a lumber camp up in Wisconsin. Here, he thought, would be an excellent chance to learn the language. But all the men in the camp were Irishmen. Of course, the young German didn't know this, and he fell readily into their mode of speech. At the end of a year he returned to Chicago, very proud of having mastered our tongue, and was greatly surprised to discover that he had a brogue. That was several years ago, but he has never lost it. It clings to him as closely as though he had been born in County Antrim."—Philadelphia Record.

Grip Microbes at Home.

Dr. L. Caze contributes an article on influenza to one of the current French reviews.

The modus operandi of the influenza microbe is peculiar. It is not the microbe itself that does the harm, but a poisonous liquid it excretes. A measure of consolation is afforded by the fact that this poison is even more deleterious to the microbe than to the human being in whom it is deposited, for the microbes end by being destroyed by their own exhalations, whereas their victim has many chances of recovery.

The microbe is an egg-shaped thing, but gifted, in spite of its roundness and smoothness, with an extraordinary capacity both of adhering to any conceivable surface and for passing from one resting place to another. Its goal is a human nose or mouth, and once in the vicinity of these organs its future is assured, for the mere act of breathing is sufficient to draw it into the system.

Arrived there it propagates itself with amazing rapidity. It lengthens out, and after twenty minutes of this process, it breaks in twain, and there are two fully fledged microbes in the place of one. In twenty-four hours the original invader will, in this way, be surrounded by a progeny of over 16,000,000 of his poison-producing kindred.

In short, the doctors know almost everything about the influenza microbe except an effective method of exterminating it.

A Wonderful Cave.

Some persons who have just returned from the neighborhood of Huasteca Potosina, where they were in search of coal, report the discovery of a very wonderful cave in the mountainous regions of that country. It is decorated inside in a very elaborate manner and is evidently the temple of an aboriginal god. In fact, there is now in the cave a huge stone image of an Indian idol. From indications it is evident that the idol is still receiving the worship of the natives. It is thought that this worship may have been going on for many years in the same place, and that the natives, when they found that they could not carry on their heathen worship openly, took the idol to the cave and there fitted up for it the best and most elaborate temple their facilities afforded.—Mexican Herald.

Viper hunters are wanted at Bozen, Tyrol. The snakes are so abundant as to be a source of danger, and the government offers 15 cents for each head.

School Teacher's Headache.

It's not a new variety of headache. It's the old pain consequent on conditions which result from study, confinement, and careless eating. It is only one symptom of a derangement of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures headaches by curing the diseases which cause them.

"I was troubled with very frequent headaches, often accompanied by severe vomiting," writes Miss Mary Belle Summerton, of San Diego, Duval Co., Texas. "Bowels were irregular, and my stomach and liver seemed continually out of order. Often I could eat almost nothing, and sometimes absolutely nothing, for twenty-four hours at a time. I was entirely unfit for work, and my whole system seemed so run-down that I feared a severe sick spell and was very much discouraged. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and did so with such satisfactory results that before finishing the third bottle I felt perfectly able to undertake the duties attending public school life, and contracted to do so. I most heartily advise those suffering with indigestion, and its attendant evils, to give this great medicine a fair trial."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets keep the bowels healthy.

That women think nothing of going shopping without a penny in their purse?

That women walk boldly up to a dog and show each object fear on the appearance of a mouse?

That women are much more thought full of the feelings of their mothers than are men?

That women can be so easily imposed upon by men who deal in kitchen supplies?

That women find so little trouble in shedding tears at a wedding or at a funeral?

That women think every one believes them when they tell their age according to their own ideas?

MARRIAGES OF MEN

CURIOUS COURTSHIPS AND PROPOSALS.

Some Entertaining Scraps of Family History—A Romantic Element is Mixed Up With Most Love Affairs Interest Never Flags in the Subject.

Marriage has always been one of the world's greatest themes. Interest never flags in the subject. Men have tired of their own matrimonial experiences sometimes, but of other people's never.

The great thing, as a wise philosopher said, is to get the right girl. There is no stereotyped way of getting her. Just as men have found different ways of proposing so there have been endless ways in which men have met their fates. A romantic element is mixed up with most love affairs.

Horace Greeley and Mary Young Cheney were married the first day they met. They had corresponded for some time, a mutual friend, who was something of a matchmaker, having brought this about. She was young and beautiful and all his fancy painted her, but she was much disappointed in his appearance, so much so that when he appeared before her, having proposed and been accepted by letter and the marriage day fixed, she frankly told him that although she married him, she was not in love with him. Their married life was long and happy and the loss of his wife was a blow which he did not long survive.

The second time that Bismarck met Fraulein Johanna Puttkammer he kissed her soundly in the presence of a number of guests. The immediate effect of this embarrassing and shocking behavior was the prompt announcement of the betrothal, which was soon followed by the marriage.

The first time Mary Todd met Lincoln she said to her sister: "That man will be President one of these days. He will make a husband to be proud of." About that time Lincoln's chances of becoming President seemed as remote as possible, and Mary's sister laughed the idea to scorn. A few months afterward Mary Todd was married to "Ugly Abe," and in fourteen years the prediction was fulfilled. As a child the future Mrs. Lincoln had prophesied that she would become the wife of a President of the United States.

The first August Belmont's marriage to Commodore Perry's daughter grew out of a duel. At his first meeting with the lady, a blooming Baltimore belle, at the theatre, he challenged a man who made some remark reflecting on the virtue of women generally. When the smoke of the simultaneous fire of the two pistols cleared away it was found that the bully had a bullet through his heart and Belmont a ball in the leg. He became a hero of the hour; proposed to the beautiful Miss Perry and was accepted. He said it was her noble face that nerved him to resent the imputation on her sex.

With Henry Stanley the explorer, it was "love my daughter, love me." Mrs. Tennant persistently refused to consent to her daughter marrying. "Dolly is all that I have left, and I can not, shall not, part with her. But to entreaties she finally yielded. "I want your daughter for my wife," Stanley said, "give her to me, and do you at the same time become my mother, father, brother and sister." "She is yours," replied mamma, "and so am I." That, in brief, is the story of Stanley's wooing, and Mrs. Tennant is his as irreparably and indissolubly as her daughter is, and Mr. Stanley is said to be a model husband and a tractable and obedient son.

It was through his novel, "The Scalp Hunters," that Capt. Mayne Reid won a bride. He was thirty years old when he met a damsel of thirteen, with whom he at once fell in love. The child, of course, took no notice of him, but he gave her the story to read, as effective a manner of courting in this nineteenth century as ever was Othello's in an earlier one. Two years later the young lady was at a public meeting where Capt. Reid spoke on behalf of the Polish refugees. "An electric thrill seemed to pass through me as he entered the room," she afterward said, and when the meeting was over she went up to speak to him. "I leave for London on the next train," he said, hurriedly. "Please send me your address."

"I do not know where," she replied with some embarrassment. He instantly handed out his card and was gone. A formal little note followed: "Dear Capt. Reid—A you asked me to send you my address, I do so." By return of post came the answer: Only say that you love me and I will be with you at once," and then the reply, "I think I do love you." Needless to say that there is nothing as good as this in the lovers' novels.

That Admiral Porter was not afraid to brave the fire of an unpropitious parent doubtless raised him in the esteem of his lady love. When a midshipman on board the flagship of Commodore Porter, who was accompanied by his family, which included a young and lovely daughter, young Porter allowed no parental commands to frighten him. The orderly was told not to allow the midshipman to enter the cabin without special permission. Young Porter, however, managed to continue his visits to his fair one. One bright moonlight night the Commodore, rousing up from an after-dinner nap, discovered young Porter and his sweetheart behind one of the windows of the stern ports.

"Young man," thundered the Commodore, "how did you enter this cabin?" The midshipman replied. "The orderly is not to blame. I came over the mizzen chains and through the quarter galley window." Midshipman Porter, through the balance of the cruise was regularly admitted to visit the cabin and on the ship's arrival home the marriage took place.

Off the Track

This means disaster and death when applied to a fast express train. It is equally serious when it refers to people whose blood is disordered and who consequently have pimples and sores, bad stomachs, deranged kidneys, weak nerves and that tired feeling. Hood's Sarsaparilla puts the wheels back on the track by making pure, rich blood and curing these troubles.

Constipation is cured by Hood's Pills. 25 cents.

Many of the streams in France have been stocked with American black bass, and the fish have flourished to such an extent that they are common articles of diet in the hotels and restaurants.

Engagements are rarely broken off in Germany. A bride in Germany must provide the furniture, plate and linen for the future home, and during the time of her engagement Gretchen is busy making these extensive purchases, in addition to her trousseau.

In point of magnitude and cost the Trans-Siberian railroad is certainly the greatest engineering work of the age. According to figures furnished by the Russian imperial ministry of ways of communication, the total cost of the railway will be $500,000,000, of which about $295,000,000 has already been expended.

The laborers of Sweden, who are employed by the government, have given to the public a few figures showing how difficult it is for them to exist on the small pay they receive. The pay of section men on the railway, common laborers and others, who do work that requires no special skill amounts to $202 a year. This is for ten hour's work a day.

Seven Presidents of the United States were members of the Masonic fraternity—Washington, Jackson, Polk, Buchanan, Johnson, Garfield and McKinley. Washington was master of his lodge at Alexandria, Va. Jackson was at one time grand master of the Grand Lodge of Tennessee, and Buchanan was deputy grand master of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania.

At Fortress Monroe and various other forts and arsenals throughout the United States are an enormous quantity of antique and obsolete cannon, Columbiads, howitzers, mortars shells and other projectiles, gun carriages and equipment which the secretary of war is authorized to loan or give to soldiers' monument associations, municipal corporations and posts of the Grand Army of the Republic under an act passed in 1896 by Congress. Some of these guns are very old and all are more or less ornamental but they are otherwise worthless except for old iron.

The Indian Pow-Wow.

Johnston Paudash, Indian Chief, Hiawatha, passed through town yesterday on his way from Christian Island, near Midland, where a big Indian pow-wow, which lasted all last week, took place. He was accompanied to Christian Island by Moses Anderson, also of Hiawatha, and four or five other representatives of the Rosebeath and Mud Lake Reserves. There were about 1,200 Indians in attendance at the camp. Johnston says he met a number of Indians who are anxious to obtain medals or lands from the government in recognition of the services their grandfathers rendered the country during the war of 1812. Coming from Christian Island Johnston spent a week visiting the Indians of the Rama Reserve, near Orillia, where he spent a delightful time. He brings with him a number of interesting mementos, including some excellent photographs of several charming Indian princesses.

Did His "Young Master" a Favor.

A little incident at the police station recently attracted comment from various sources on account of the realistic romance it embodied. An old negro walked into the office and asked in a mild and respectful manner if his "young master," M. C. Goin, was there. He was told that Goin had been fined $2 for being drunk and was on the rock pile. He applied to Mr. Dye, keeper of the rock pile, and had a talk with Goin. The latter was very drunk when arrested and the Recorder fined him $2. He hails from Corinth.

"How much?" asked the old negro, "will you let him out for?"

Mr. Dye replied that $1.75 would purchase his liberty. The old man pulled out a tobacco sack and unloosening the strings got out $2. The young man was released. Being asked why he was interested in the young man the old man said:

"I belonged to his father endurin' the war, and no better man ever lived. When I hear 'em say young marster was in de rock pile I jes' cum up heah ter see him. I'd give my last cent 'foh he shud stay in de prison."

The young man and the old ex-slave walked away together.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Peterborough Work Abroad.

Mr. W. H. Anthony, the well known boot and shoe manufacturer, yesterday received an order from British Columbia for seven pairs of boots, from a well known lumbering concern. Mr. Anthony does a large foreign business, shipping boots of his own make to all parts of the Dominion.

The Only Paper.

The Times is the only newspaper in Peterborough that gets special telegraph despatches. It is therefore the most up-to-date newspaper, and one that should be preferred every time. We give a beautiful premium with every subscription received. Only 25 cents per month to local subscribers.

THE BIGGEST ADVERTISERS.

The heaviest advertisers in the whole United States are the two leading political parties. Manager Hanna has been collecting enormous sums which he says are to be expended in campaign advertising. Most of the newspapers of the land contain columns of editorial articles daily that are intended to advertise the merits of one party or the other. There could be no better proof of the value of "ads" than the large dependence of shrewd politicians on their influence.

Women's Auxiliary Meeting.

The Woman's Auxiliary of St. John's church held their first meeting Monday afternoon. A most interesting letter was read from Mrs. Davidson, of Toronto, outlining the work accomplished lately by the society and the objects before it now. These include much needed help to many progressive missions in the Northwest and British Columbia, which were lately visited and favorably reported on by the secretary, Mrs. Willoughby Cummings. At this meeting Rev. J. C. Davidson gave a short account of his missionary visit to the district of Tamiscamning. It was resolved to hold a social reception next Tuesday evening, to which all women of the congregation are invited, and committees were struck to carry out the necessary arrangements. In the absence of the President, Mrs. R. M. Dennistoun, Mrs. (Rev.) J. C. Davidson occupied the chair.

WEDDING BELLS.

WADE REDPATH.

And now a young man from Lindsay has chosen his bride from Peterborough, for this afternoon at three o'clock there were united in marriage Miss Violet Wade, daughter of Mr. Edward Wade, and Mr. Thomas C. Redpath, of Lindsay. The wedding took place at the residence of the bride's parents, 87 Lendon-st., and Rev. J. G. Potter, of St. Andrew's church, officiated. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Etta Wade, and Mr. James Redpath assisted his brother. The bride is very popular here, and the best wishes of many friends accompany Mr. and Mrs. Wade to their home in Lindsay.

RYAN LYNCH.

St. Peters Cathedral was the scene of a pleasant evening yesterday at 8 a.m. when Miss Margret Ryan, youngest daughter of Mr. Michael Ryan, Dalhousie-st., was united in marriage to Mr. Edward Lynch, of Westwood, by the Rev. Father Sullivan. Miss Aggie Miles assisted the bride, and her brother, Mr. James Ryan, was best man. An enjoyable wedding breakfast was afterwards served at the bride's home; which was attended by a large number of guests, many of whom were present at the ceremony in the Cathedral. The happy young couple left on the 11.45 train for a wedding trip to points east, and upon their return will reside in Westwood. The bride, who, for some time, was stenographer for Messrs. Hall & Hayes, barristers, received many beautiful wedding presents, and many friends in Peterborough and vicinity extend best wishes on this happy occasion.

The Chemong Lake Service.

The damage to the machinery of the T. V. N. Co's. steamer, Ogemah, turns out to be a matter of longer delay in getting the boat ready for service than was anticipated. The head of the cylinder was blown out, and on examination of the cylinder it was found to be fractured, necessitating its being replaced by a new one. This is being done, but it will be some time yet before the boat will be ready for service, and it has been withdrawn from the Chemong-Burleigh-Bobcaygeon route for the season. The steamer Manita has been placed on the route from Bobcaygeon to Bridgenorth and makes her trip, leaving Bridgenorth at 6 p.m. If a party of five or over desire to make the trip to Burleigh they will be taken there and return to Chemong for the aggregate of five fares at $1 each.

Three Aged Men Dead.

Three of Cobourg's oldest citizens died last week. One was Mr. Thomas Harper, in the 90th year of his age. His son, Hugh, is a resident of Peterborough. The second was Mr. W. Sykes, who was postmaster at Cobourg for 30 years. He was 80 years old, and left five children, one of whom is Mrs. Hayward of Peterborough. The third was Mr. M. Cunningham, 81 years old, a clever old gentleman and a hot politician.

NOT TOBACCO

But Coffee Was the Cause of the Trouble.

An old veteran from Springfield, Mass., made a curious experiment in the use of tobacco and coffee. He says—"I have been an incessant smoker for forty years, using at times twenty cigars a day, besides several pipes. I was also very fond of coffee.

"In 1893 I noticed my stomach was becoming weak and that I could not retain my breakfast. Within six months afterwards I had arrived at that stage where I vomited up at least five breakfasts each week. The doctor claimed that the sickness was caused by smoking, so I went under the care of Dr. Hartmult of Spencer, Mass., who cured me of the tobacco habit. For eight months I refrained from its use, but the vomiting still continued.

"My physician then attributed it to catarrh, so I carefully dosed myself with the catarrh cures, but the vomiting became more severe, though not more frequent. I therefore concluded to resume my smoking and get as much comfort as possible in that direction. I noticed that the smoking did not increase the vomiting.

"Quite a time after that I met a friend who in one minute put me on the right track, by telling me that he was satisfied that it was coffee that caused my trouble. I stopped drinking coffee, and within a week the vomiting ceased entirely.

"Shortly after that I took to using Postum Food Coffee and found it filled all the requirements of coffee. My family are using it regularly, and like it as well as the best Java coffee, after becoming accustomed to its use. We know from practical experience, of the beneficial effects of Postum Food Coffee. Please omit my name." Name and address can be given by Postum Cereal Co., Lim., Battle Creek, Mich.

FROM THE BEST THINKERS

Who am I; what is this me? A voice, a motion, an appearance; some embodied visualized idea in the Eternal Mind? "Cogito ergo sum." Alas! poor cogitator, this takes us but a little way. Sure enough, I am; and lately was not. But how? whence? whereto? The answer lies all around, written in all colors and motions, uttered in all tones of jubilee and wail, in thousand fingered, thousand voiced, harmonious nature; but where is the cunning eye and ear to whom that God-written apocalypse will yield articulate meaning. We sit as in a boundless phantasmagoria and dream grotto; boundless, for the faintest star, the remotest century, lies not even nearer the verge thereof. Sounds and many visions flit round our sense; but Him, the Unslumbering, whose work both dream and dreamer are, we seek not; except in rare, half-waking moments, suspect not.—Thomas Carlyle.

A man may be as brilliant, as clever, as strong and as broad as you please and with all this, if he is not good, he may be a paltry fellow; even the sublime which he seems to reach, in his most splendid achievements, is only a brilliant sort of badness.—John Stuart Blackie.

I wish to suggest that a man may be very industrious, and yet not spend his time well. There is no more fatal blunderer than he who consumes the greater part of his life getting his living. All great enterprises are self-supporting.—Henry David Thoreau.

Man dwells apart, though not alone;
He walks among his peers unread;
The best of thoughts which he hath known,
For lack of listeners, are not said.
—Jean Ingelow.

A friend is worth all hazards we can run.
Poor is the friendless master of a world;
A world in purchase for a friend is gain.—Young.

How we all attitudinize to ourselves! The whole of life often seems one long dramatic performance, in which one-half of us is forever posing to the other half.—Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

HAY FEVER AND DYSENTERY

The Manner in which a Famous Physician Treats These Diseases With Ozone.

VALUABLE INFORMATION

He Prescribes Ozone for Many Complaints Thus Demonstrating Its Marvellous Efficacy.

The microscopic examinations of the unhealthy mucous secretions and excretions from the nostrils of hay fever sufferers demonstrates the presence of small ovid micro-organisms which are instantly annihilated when brought into contract with Ozone.

It is worthy of notice that the degree of susceptibility to the infectious action of these germs differs with each individual. The spores of germs which cause this disease do not always find a proper soil for development in the mucous secretions. Therefore they cannot enter into the organic chemical combination which causes disease. This explains why all human beings are not troubled with hay fever. The peculiarity of this disease is that anyone afflicted with hay fever can tell every year almost to a day when the disease will begin and when it will end. The explanation of this is that the conditions of life of sufferers of hay fever are alike from year to year. Thus the germ cause of the trouble develops under the same influence every year at about the same time and consequently the disease begins as soon as the atmospheric conditions become favorable for the spores I have mentioned. These spores grow under proper conditions of temperature and dampness in the secretions of the mucous membranes of the nostrils and the microbian infection takes place, to the detriment of the animal cells which are involved, producing inflammation and ulceration.

These micro organisms continue their growth as long as these favorable atmospheric conditions exist, and they disappear as soon as the temperature falls and remains at a lower degree.

To treat this disease, I think it is easy to understand that any remedy having the property to restore the diseased tissue to their normal condition will interfere with the mentioned chemical reaction and cure, or at least prevent, the disease.

I use Ozone in all cases of hay fever; apply it locally to the nostrils as a spray, and also by inhalations of ozonized vapor in order to subdue the asthmatic attacks which often accompany this horrible condition. I prescribe Ozone because it prevents the germs from entering into organic chemical combination with the animal cells, and so produce disease.

In the same way do I treat dysentery. Dysentery is caused by a germ which produces inflammations and fermentations in the intestines. Irrigation with warm water and Ozone, and Ozone taken internally, give prompt relief from this very weakening disorder.

Montreal, July 15, 1900.

The ethics of the medical profession prevent our giving the name of this brilliant practitioner, Powley's Liquified Ozone is the treatment that the great Pasteur recommended in all cases of infections and germ diseases with such success.

Ozone is not patent medicine, nor a "cure all." Ozone is a chemical compound of a health-giving element, and it cures disease. $1.00 large size bottle, 50 cents small size, all druggists, or from laboratories of the Ozone Company of Toronto, Limited, 48 Colborne street.

China Hall in its present form is a model of convenience and beauty, and it has now every facility for the carrying on of an up-to-date trade. A prompt and courteous service may be relied upon, while a cordial welcome is assured to all visitors whether purchasers or not.

For the convenience of customers a cosy waiting room is provided, which we trust may be appreciated to the extent of being used and of becoming a rendezvous for ladies who wish to meet down town.

The accomplishment of all this has been no small task, and it is hoped that the public will take pride in this new store which, without exception, is the handsomest of its kind in Canada.

A few words as to our future policy. The business will be conducted upon a cash basis, with one price to all and positively no reduction from the marked figures, which will be as low as is compatible with the character of the goods, our aim being that customers should remember the quality after the price has been forgotten. No article will be represented as being better than it really is. Special attention given to matching and mending.

Thanking our numerous customers for their many expressions of goodwill, and for their adherence to us while in cramped quarters, we shall now take pleasure in welcoming them to our commodious and artistic premises at 360 George-st.

STRIKERS RECEIVE BIG REINFORCEMENTS

A Thousand Men Join Them in Shamokin and More in Hazleton.

A FIGHT TO A FINISH IS FORESHADOWED.

Railroad Men Involved—Coal Train Crews in Scranton District Forced to Quit and Others Laid Off for Lack of Work.

Shamokin, Pa., Sept. 19.—One thousand more miners employed at the collieries owned by the Union and Philadelphia and the Reading Coal and Iron Companies, and individual operators, ceased work to-day in the vicinity of Mount Carmel, compelling the stoppage of the operations. This makes the tieup complete in the Shamokin region, excepting the Locust Gap and North Franklin collieries, operated by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company. A number of breakers are being run to put some coal through the screens.

With the exception of a few miners being mobbed by Hungarians near the Pennsylvania colliery last night everything was quiet and continues so. Detectives are maintaining a sharp lookout at the various collieries.

FIGHT TO A FINISH.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 19.—Calvin Pardee, owner of the Lattimer and Harwood collieries in the Hazleton district, in an interview to-day said—

"Under no consideration will the operators yield to the United Mine Workers. It will be a fight to the finish, and the operators will win. So far as I am personally concerned, I have ordered the mules to be taken out of the Harwood mine, and put to pasture. I am preparing for a long strike."

"My superintendent reports this morning that the pressure brought to bear upon my men at Harwood was so great that only a few came to work to-day, and that the Harwood mine is practically at a standstill. At Lattimer the men living at a distance from the mine did not apear for work this morning. The mine is working with a reduced force.

"I am informed that this morning a marching body went to Coleraine to intercept the mine workers there."

THEIR RANKS REINFORCED.

Hazleton, Pa., Sept. 19.—The ranks of the strikers in the Hazleton district were considerably increased to-day by recruits from nearly every colliery in the region that had worked yesterday, and Monday. The most important movement occurred south of here this morning when 110 striking mine workers of McAdoo made a march through the south side. They succeeded in tying up several operations and in further crippling the Coleraine colliery. They were orderly, and confined their energies principally to persuading the men no. to start work. The women, both English-speaking and foreigners, were badly frightened, and advised the Coleraine men to remain away from their mines. When the whistle blew at Coleraine colliery, it was found that only about 150 men had reported for work at No. 2 shaft, which usually employs about 250 men. Buck Mountain slope, and No. 1 slope of the same company were completely shut down. The breaker which handles the coal of three mines had only 25 boys working out of about 150. Operators in this district to-day complain that mine workers are being intimidated.

RAILROAD MEN INTERESTED.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 19.—The strike of the anthracite coal miners entered upon its third day with everything shut down in this district. Headquarters here this morning received word that the Mocanaqua breaker in the far western end of the region had been closed through the efforts of District President Nicholls, who organized nearly every workman there last night. This makes the tie-up of the Lackawanna and Wyoming valleys thorough, for not even a washery about is doing business to-day.

The tie-up of the miners has caused the laying off of every coal train crew in this region, and whatever coal is being moved is going out in the freight trains. Only three Delaware and Hudson coal trains went north yesterday. Three crews are marked out for to-day, but one is to be employed in dumping ashes for the roadbed.

The Erie railroad is almost at a standstill. No coal is taken over the Honesdale branch, and to-day the switching crew at that point were laid off. The Erie and Wyoming valley, the Delaware and Hudson, the Ontario and Western, and the Lackawanna system are not moving a single coal train to-day in any direction, the strike being wholly responsible for this condition. The number of railroaders idle in consequence reaches into the hundreds. This makes the interest of the railroad men in the strike keen, and they are willing to do everything required to bring about its quick ending.

BITUMINOUS MEN WON'T GO OUT.

Altoona, Pa., Sept. 19.—A definite sentiment is abroad in the bituminous coal fields condemning a sympathy strike with the anthracite miners of Eastern Pennsylvania. The opinion, latent until to-day, was manifested at meetings of miners held at Puritan, Dunio and Spangler where there was agitation to get the men out. Representatives of the anthracite men were present at the meetings, and made impassioned pleas for a general strike, but their eloquence was lost on unsympathetic audiences.

The bituminous coal miners, while always ready to aid fellow workmen with righteous grievances, are suspicious of the strike movement in the anthracite field. They see in a great deal of the agitation the cloven hoof of Democratic politics, and though largely Democrats themselves, refuse to let politics enter into their struggle for bread.

PREACHERS ON THE STRIKE.

Pittston, Pa., Sept. 19.—The clergy, as a rule, regard the strike as ill-advised, seeing no hope of success for the men. The most significant pulpit deliverance on the strike, perhaps, was that from the Very Rev. Eugene A. Garvey, Vicar-General of the Catholic diocese of Scranton, and pastor of St. John's church, this city. Father Garvey is a man of much influence. His congregation, numbering several thousand, is composed mainly of miners' families. The parish property is valued at $200,000.

Father Garvey at Sunday morning's service, bade the mine workers to be very careful what they did. He dwelt on the misery that would result from a cessation of work, especially for the women and children, and warned them that when it became absolutely necessary to fight for principle the men who did so must be content with mush and molasses. Father Garvey was particular earnest in denouncing the professional labor agitators and warned his people against them and their false promises. His conclusion was that the men should frequent the sanctuary, rather than the saloon and the agitators' meetings, and pray God to change the hearts of men.

CUBA AND THE STATES.

Disaffection Growing Against American Occupation.

Washington, Sept. 18.—General Fitzhugh Lee, military commander of the Department of the East in Cuba, who arrived in New York from Havana on the United States transport, the Rawlins, yesterday afternoon says the feeling against Americans in Cuba is more bitter than he ever saw it before, and that it is getting worse. When asked regarding the Constitutional Convention to be held there he said—

"It is well known that the United States government promised in the declaration of war with Spain that its only purpose was to establish the pacification of the island, and that when assured of control the government would be left to the Cuban people

"In pursuance of that pledge the municipalities have held elections, selecting mayors and councils. In Cuba a municipality is not a town only, but includes the adjoining territory.

"This having been accomplished, the next move was to call a Constitutional Convention to organize a Cuban government and provide for the election of a president and legislature. This Convention will consist of only thirty-one members, and will meet early in November.

"I understand that whatever constitution is agreed on will be submitted to the Congress of the United States, which in turn will see that the constitution will provide for the security of the life and property not only of Americans, but also of the citizens of other countries.

"If for any reason the United States had withdrawn its troops and released its guarantee of the pacification of the island, and any English, French, German or other foreign citizens had been denied their rights, there is no question that the country to which they belonged would, in the absence of the United States, have taken charge themselves, and no one could fortell the result.

"There is considerable dissatisfaction over the proposed constitutional convention. Some of the Cubans object to the clause which compels them to submit their constitution to the Congress of the United States. They say they should have the right to make their own government without the consent of any foreign nation.

"The feeling that exists among a certain class of the Cubans and the Americans is more bitter than I have ever known before. The disaffected class is composed mostly of former Cuban soldiers, who look on the Americans as intruders, and who want to have absolute control of their own affairs."

GERMANY'S NOTE IS A FIRM ONE

China Must Make Reparation Before Negotiations Begin.

THE POWERS WILL CONCUR

British Fear an Attempt of Russians to Seize a Railway.

Berlin, Sept. 19.

A special despatch to the Lokal Anzerger describing the capture and burning September 11 of Liang in Jang Hsien, southwest of Pekin by a German naval battalion, accompanied by 40 Bengal Lancers, says the foreign force faced six thousand Boxers and a number of Chinese regulars. The enemy lost 280 killed.

London, Sept. 20, 4 a.m.

The only news of importance from China this morning is contained in a despatch to the Times from Shanghai, dated yesterday, asserting that Sir Claude Maxwell MacDonald will become British minister at Taku, and will be succeeded at Pekin by Sir Ernest Mason Satow, the present British Minister at the Japanese capital. "This," says the Times correspondent, "is disappointing to Britishers in the Far East, as they had hoped that a stronger diplomatist would be sent to Pekin."

It is probable that Vice Admiral Seymore will meet Sir Claude Macdonald at Tien Tsin. Reports from Nankin, point to the increasing activity and influence of the Anti-foreign party. The manner in which the Yang Tse Viceroys have been ignored by the throne, in reference to the peace negotiations while Imperial edicts ordered the Manchuria leaders to resume the control of affairs, is capable of only oneinterpretation. Shanghai Specials seem to show quite a shower of edicts regarding negotiations to which little importance is attached. According to the Daily Mail's, St Petersburg correspondent, Russia will claim an indemnity of 1,000,000 pounds.

London, Sept. 19.—The German note laying down the principals of full reparation for outrages by the Chinese as the necessary preliminary to negotiations with Li Hung Chang and his friends is by far most important development of the Eastern crisis which has taken place since the relief of the Legations. This note, it may be taken for granted, will be endorsed by the European powers, so that in a few days the demand of civilization upon heathendom will take definite shape, and the Chinese will be asked to make an example of those high officials who countenenced atrocities. Wriggle as he may, Li Hung Chang cannot avoid this direct home thrust. The representatives of the powers in Pekin have ample evidence against Chinamen high in authority who, if justice is done, should lose their heads. The question is, will the Chinese Government have sufficient power to deliver these men up to justice. If it has not, and every indication is to this effect, the allies will still be in their old position after having wasted still more time in the negotiations with Li Hung Chang, which will doubtless be greatly prolonged. There is also the strong probability that members of the Chinese Government may be among the culprits, in which case affairs would become more complicated than ever, and scarcely any method except the conquest and the partition of China would be left.

THE GERMAN NOTE.

Berlin, Sept. 18.—The following is the text of the circular note sent by the Foreign Office to all the powers, announcing that the German Government considers that an indispensable perliminary to the beginning of peace negotiations with China is the delivering up of those who were responsible for the outrages. "The Government of the Emperor holds as preliminary to entiring upon diplomatic relations with the Chinese Government that these persons must be delivered up who have been proved to be the original and real instigators o fthe attacks against the foreigners which have occurred at Pekin. The number of those who were merely instrumental in carrying out the outrages is too great. Wholesale executions would be contrary to the civilized conscience, and the circumstances of such a group of leaders cannot be completely ascertained, but a few whose guilt is notorious should be delivered up and punished. The representatives of the powers at Pekin are in position to give or bring forward convincing evidence. Less importance attaches to the number punished than to their character as chief leaders. The Government believes it can count on the unanimity of all the Cabinets in regard to this point, inasmuch as indifference to the idea of just atonement would be equivalent to indifference to a repetition of the crime. The Government proposes, therefore, that the Cabinets concerned shall instruct their representatives at Pekin to indicate these leading Chinese personages from whose guilt in instigating or prepetrating outrages all doubt is excluded. (Signed) Von Buelow."

WHAT WILL RUSSIA DO?

London, Sept. 19.—As might have been expected, coincident with the arrival of Count Von Walderese in China, comes the most important declaration of policy yet issued by any of the allies. As The Daily News remarks. "Germany's circular note has turned tables on Russia, whose evaculation proposal had put Germany into an awkward corner. Now, if Russia assent to the German note, she will be unable to continue," says The Daily News, "to pose as China's lenient and forgiving friend, while if she dissents Russia will lay herself open to the charge of reducing the punitive expedition to a face."

BAD ROADS TO PAOTINGFU.

London, Sept. 19.—A German telegram from Pekin states that General Hoepfner has been compelled to stop the advance of his expeditionary force toward Paotingfu, owing to the impracticability of the roads for artillery.

BRITAIN TO OPPOSE RUSSIA.

Tien Tsin, Sept. 17.—It is understood that the British authorities here have been instructed to oppose vigorously the proposed Russian occupation of the Shan Hai Kwan and Tien Tsin Railway which is owned by the British syndicate and leased to the Chinese. The recent Russian movemetns northward are believed here to include an expedition to Shan Hai Kwan, which is now held by the Imperial troops.

Both the British and the Americans have an eye on Shan Hai Kwan as an open winter port. Only a few miles of the railway has been destroyed, and the bridges are intact. A British expedition to Shan Hai Kwan is probable at an early date.

FIFTY TAELS PER HEAD.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 18.—According to advices received from China by the steamer Breckonshire, the Chinese Government encouraged the slaughter of prisoners by the payment of 100 taels blood money for the head of every foreigner brought in. The daybook of Viceroy Yu Lu, which has fallen into the hands of the allies, has a number of entries telling of money paid to Boxer leaders. The following entries are made.

"Taels, 100, paid for the heads of two American marines killed in advancing to the relief of Tien Tsin on or about June 14. Taels, 50, for two guns captured on the same occasion."

This explains the incidents which have been recounted of the beheading of wounded. When Capt. Betts and his three marines fell during the engagement of Admiral Seymour's forces at Hsi-ku arsenal attempts wer emade to decapitate all. The next night some Chinese were found hiding in the millet, and, trying to escape, were bayoneted. One clung to a bag, and when this was opened the Americans found in it the head of the dead gunner, Watkins.

ANOTHER CHINESE EDICT.

Berlin, Sept. 19.—The Boersen Zeitung to-day prints a special despatch from Shanghai, dated Monday, September 17, saying that an Imperial edict, dated September 7, commands all the Chinese generals to return to Pekin and assist in restoring order and peace, and orders the suppression of the Boxers whose leaders must be captured. A second edict, the despatch adds, orders comprehensive reform in thee entire adminstration of the Empire.

The allies at Pekin, it is also declared in the despatch, must insist upon the Emperor's return, and the punishment of Kang Yi and all the Boxer leaders.

KRUGER WILL SAIL ON DUTCH WARSHIP

He Will Leave Lorenzo Marquez in a Few Days on the Gelderland.

LORD ROBERTS HAS MOVED HIS HEADQUARTERS.

He Now Occupies Nelspruit, About Sixty Miles from Komatipoort—Movements of Pole-Carew, French and Hildyard—South-east Transvaal Conquered.

London, Sept. 18.—News has been received from Cradock, Cape Town, that the British garrison at Schweizerrenneke, which is situated in the south-western corner of the Transvaal, about 35 miles from Vryburg, the capital of Bechuanaland, has been surrounded by Boers for two weeks. The garrison is strongly entrenched, and a force of Cape Mounted Rifles has started to its relief.

Lorenzo Marquez, Sept. 17.—Mr Kruger, the frerom President of the south African Republic, will not sail for Europe on the German steamer Herzog, Monday, Sept. 24, as he originally intended.

A WAR UPON SNIPERS.

Pretoria, Sept. 18.—A detachment of Australians, who were part of General Clements' force and were left at Wasboschfontein, at the head of Nivst valley, arrived here to-day. They brought 35 prisoners with them. During the ride of forty miles here they were sniped at continually from both sides of the valley. The Boers who lives in the hills have mattresses placed on the rocks for their convenience and comfort while sniping at the troops moving through the valley. On Sept. 9 an ambulance train of three wagons, in charge of Dr. Perkins, left here to join Clements' command. The men and wagons never arrived at their destination. Kaffirs say they were captured and five of the men were killed. Clements is doing good work in clearing the country of these sniping bands. He is now on the way to burn twelve farms which are known to be night resorts of snipers.

London, Sept. 19.—The opposition of the Boers to the British advance upon Komatipoort is availing the burghers little. By force of numbers Lord Roberts' brigades are pressing them back slowly but surely. The field marshal has now removed his headquarters from Machadodorp to Nelsprit, a little over sixty miles from Komatipoort, while the advance guard of his army, under Pole-Carew and Hamilton, are by this time at Kaapmuiden, forty miles from the Portuguese border, and the point where the branch line from Barberton joins the main railway. General French with his cavalry was on Monday at Avoca, a station on the branch line above-mentioned and only ten miles from Kaapmuiden, so that he is certain by this time to have joined Pole-Carew and Hamilton, and to have transferred the locomotives and rolling stock which he captured from the Boers to the main line, where they will prove a great service to Lord Roberts in continuing his advance and transporting the necessary supplies from Pretoria. Though Lord Roberts makes no mention of the fact, it may be concluded with certainty that General Buller is continuing his movement from Komatipoort from the district of Lydenberg, and will doubtless soon appear on the railway in front of Kaapmuiden, when his weight will be added to that of Pole-Carew, Hamilton and French. The reported fighting near Komatipoort still lach definite explanation. It is scarcely likely that the British have yet reached the locality, though they may be expected to do so within the next two or three days. A possible theory as to the report is that the foreign mercenaries in the pay of the Boers are now retreating over the border, intending to take ship for their homes, and that like true buccaneers are pillaging indiscriminately with result that Portugal has been obliged to resort to force to protect the property of her subjects in the territory through which the mercenaries are passing. While affairs are progressing satisfactorily along the Delagoa Bay Railway, General Hildyard is accomplishing the conquest of that part of the Transvaal which immediately adjoins Natal, being separated from it by the Buffalo River. He has occupied Wakkerstroom and Utrecht, two important border towns, and is about the march upon Vryheid in co-operation with a column which has crossed the Buffalo from Dundee. This town having been taken, the south-eastern corner of the Transvaal will be practically in British hands. Holland is paying the last tribute of respect to the fallen Boer President by offering the warship Gelderland, sailing in about six days, to convey him and his millions from Lorenzo Marquez to a place of refuge in Europe. This offer has been accepted, and it is almost assured that Oom Paul will go into exile among his Dutch kinsmen, who own the sway of Queen Wilhelmina.

ACCEPTS A DUTCH WARSHIP.

The Hague, Sept. 19.—The Government of the Netherlands has been notified of Mr. Kruger's acceptance of its offer to place a war ship at his disposal to convey him from Lorenzo Marquez to Holland.

HAVE OCCUPIED NELSPRUIT.

London, Sept. 19.—Lord Roberts telegraphs from Nelspruit, Vaal River Colony, under date of Tuesday, September 18, that the town was occupied on the previous day without opposition. He adds that he is in communication with Genera lBuller, and is able to send him supplies. Lord Roberts further announces that General Buller reports that the bulk of his opponents now are mercenaries and Cape Colony rebels.

FRENCH REACHES AVOCA.

London, Sept. 18.—The War Office has received th efollowing from Lord Roberts, dated Machadodorp, Sept. 17.

"Pole-Carew's and Hamilton's columns will be in the vicinity of Kaapmuiden station to-morrow. A brigade is near Nelspruit, and firing was heard in that direction this afternoon.

"Hildyard has established a post at Utrecht, and is moving to-day toward Vryheid in co-operation with the mounted corps from Dundee.

"Barton is entrenched at a point where a small bridge was recently destroyed between Krugersdorp and Randfontein. He has captured a number of sheep, oxen, and horses.

"Clements had a skirmish yesterday at Hexpoort. His casualties were one killed, one wounded and one missing.

"French's cavalry division has advanced from Barberton to the Avoca railway station. French found 50 more locomotives that had not been damaged, six of which were at Elsprult. The Boers have blown up several bridges and culverts to the east of Godwaan. There are plenty of sleepers and railway marterial, and the damage will be quickly repaired."

KAAPMUIDEN CAPTURED

Pretoria, Sept. 18.—Gen. Pole-Carew has occupied Kaapmuiden, about 20 miles east of Nelspruit, wher ehe captured a number of locomotives and a considerable quantity of rolling stock.

FEAR OF A CIVIL WAR IN CAPE COLONY

English and Dutch Settlers There at Daggers Drawn.

Late Despatches State That More Trouble is Expected—Lord Roberts Accused of Hiding Truth in his Official Despatches.

London, Sept. 20.—From South Africa all news is stopped except what furthers the desires of the government in creating the impression that the end is near at hand, and that peace is about to ensue. We are not yet told a syllable about one-quarter of the incidents happening there to our troops. Absolute silence is still maintained as to the numbers lying sick, of the condition of the food and transport, and there is partial silence even as to our losses in the field or in the hospital.

These last trickle through in a grudging way, often weeks, sometimes months, behind time.

Deadlier silence is still observed with regard to events in Cape Colony. No press telegram from Cape Town gives the least hint of the fiery passions raging between the English and Dutch in that important settlement, and it is only from private letters that one gathers how rapidly the breach is widening, how daily more imminent becomes the danger of an outbreak of civil strife there.

Perhaps it is because the government knows this that every soldier available continues to be shipped to South Africa. Not a week passes but what one or more transports sail with men and warlike materials.

REAL FACTS SUPPRESSED.

This fact is in clear opposition to the smooth tales transmitted by the Commander-in-Chief, of the flowery bulletins of this General's remarkable success and the next one's brilliant feat in marching, and of assertions that all organized opposition may now be considered over.

It is cruel to remind such optimists that, save a pompon or two, Lord Roberts has not captured a single Boer gun since Paardeberg.

It is with keen regret that I confess that I by no means regard the strife, even in the two states, as at an end, for I cannot forget the remark a Boer clergyman made when the war began. "When it ends," he said, "there will be no Boers left in the Transvaal." That sums up the position. To wholly stop fighting, be it guerilla or other, Lord Roberts must capture and deport the entire burger population of both states. Numerous as his forces are it will take him some months yet to accomplish that feat.

BRITISH INTERESTS IN CHINA.

Reverting to Chinese affairs it is curious to note the glee with which the French journals discourse upon the sorry figure cut by England at Pekin. The Times correspondent, an eminent Australian doctor named Morrison, well known for his deep acquaintance with the surface of Chinese life and the outside of Chinese institutions, has broken out in violent diatribes against Russian arrogance and domineering, infested in Pekin. We have got to take a back seat not only in China but in Asia altogether, in his opinion, unless Lord Salisbury can do this or that. The frontier element amongst the French publicists is delighted.

Perhaps manifestations of their pleasure will excite us to counter demonstrations and angry defiance, to utterance of threats, and it is not improbable that among the cries raised upon the hustings will be one demanding the assertion of England's dominant position in the far East.

Some newspapers are working that way already, but I am bound to tell you that so far the public has been perfectly unmoved. It does not want war with France or Russia, or even with China, and will be glad to get out of it at any price.

GENERAL.

The Horton law, which permitted prize-fighting in New York State, has been repealed, and now the great exponents of the noble art of self-defence will have to seek fresh fields to show their powers. The law limited contests to 25 rounds, and it was in effect four years, during which time it is estimated that 3,800 fights were held and the gate receipts were $2,885,000.

Every farmer who owns his land and is out of debt is independent. Banks may break, syndicates go to the wall, markets may all be in the hands of the bears and yet the farmer may sit on the fence and whistle a merry tune for he has the assurance that seed time and harvest will not fail, that men must eat and he must help to feed them and when panics come he is out of range and under shelter.

MUNICIPAL LIGHTING.

The Times has received a letter suggesting that the town purchase the lighting plant as well as the water works.

Many persons have a vague idea that the ownership of an electric-light plant is a good thing for a city. Some who disapprove of public ownership in general are yet disposed to make exceptions in favor of municipal waterworks and electric lights. As a matter of fact, municipalized electric-light plants—and, for that matter, waterworks also—are run at practically the same proportion of loss to the community and the public as street railways, telephones, butcher-shops, or dry-goods establishments probably would be.

The chief reasons for the common illusions on this subject we will endeavor to point out. The first reason is the circulation of incorrect figures as to the real cost of operating existing municipal plants. It is easy to see why the reports of such cost are almost invariably too low. Towns owning municipal electric-light plants seldom or never know the real cost of light to them. The officials of each administration are anxious to make as good a showing as possible, and hence put their reports of cost extremely low, often by design and frequently through ignorance or wrong precedent. Interest on the money originally invested is seldom called into account, since it is paid by general taxation. Sinking funds for the retirement of bonds issued to build the plants are almost never thought of. Depreciation of plant is not considered, and when large sums of money are spent for repairs or renewals they are charged to some other item of city expense than the operating of the electric-light station.

The result of all this is that the cost, ordinarily reported, of producing electric lights in a municipal plant is far below the actual expenditures, and compares favourably with the prices charged by private companies, although an accurate statement of the matter would almost invariably show the private companies could supply the lights more cheaply to the city.

Another cause of public misinformation is the commonly repeated statement that the electric companies are making enormous profits. This is incorrect. The painful fact is that probably few of the smaller companies are really earning dividends, and even in the larger companies the amount of actual profit returned to the owners is barely above the legitimate interest on their investments. There is a great array of statistics to prove this fact.

It is proposed to remedy this misinformation of the public on the subject of municipal electric lighting by establishing a uniform system of accounts and by a public supervision of the accounts of all electric-lighting plants in the country. It is worthy of note that the most ardent supporters of this plan are the owners and operators of private plants, who are now agitating in favor of legislation which will compel public supervision of the accounts of electric stations. If this is secured, the existing misinformation will be no longer sent out, and the popular belief in favor of municipal electric-lighting plants is likely to die a natural death.

OLD FORT HAYS

Famous Frontier Post and Its Exciting History.

The most famous military post in the Kansas frontier has, by the passage of the Fort Hays bill by Congress, been wiped out of existence. This fort, which was for many years the central point of the army operations against the redskins, has for years been deserted. Its 7,000 acres have been leased to cattlemen and the splendid timber that is unequaled in Western Kansas has been furnishing the settlers with fuel. Nineteen big frame cottages, the officers' homes, the barracks and training quarters, have been unoccupied, and it will be a great delight to the people of this section to see them filled with students of the State normal school and the State agricultural school, both of which are under the bill to have branches there.

This fort was the barrier against the Indian raids that marked the last attempts of the redskins to frighten the people of the State. When the Cheyennes came down from the Northwest the soldiers of Hays, with the assistance of those from Wallace and Harker, met them and drove them back, saving the lives of thousands of settlers. Gen. George Forsythe followed Roman Nose into the Upper Republican country, and there, with his band of 100 soldiers, was surrounded by fully 1,000 of the redskins. For three days they were held there, and then were rescued by succor brought by two scouts who escaped and went back to the fort. It was found that the imprisoned soldiers had been more than victors, for they had killed more than a dozen for every one of their own number that fell. Roman Nose himself was among the killed.

There was another scare in the latter 70's, when the people as far east as Topeka felt uneasy, but the Indians did not come so far as on the earlier occasion. It then became apparent that there was no further need of the maintenance of the post, and it was abandoned a few years after. All this time the buildings have stood empty, and the caretaker has had the lonesome task of looking after them.

Fort Hays has had an eventful history. It was originally called Fort Fletcher, and was located fourteen miles south of here on the Big Muddy. One day the creek was swelled by a storm and the waters drove the soldiers out of the fort. Several colored soldiers who were too slow were drowned, and Gen. Pope ordered the location changed to the present site. The buildings were then erected and improvements made.

The town of Hays City, which was then founded a short distance to the north, was a rough place, being filled with cowboys and frontiersmen who followed the building of the railroad. The City Council granted thirty-seven saloon licenses the first day that it met. There were "killers" without number, and on the slopes of a little hill were laid the victims of their prowess. It was called Boot Hill, and there lie forty-five of the distinguished gentry who died with their boots on, some being known by their real names and some not. It will never be known who really were laid to rest in the unceremonious fashion of the frontier days, for now it is too late to find out.

"Wild Bill" was Marshal of the town for a while, until one day he shot three soldiers on the street, and then it was healthier for him to go hence. He went, and was next heard of at Abilene, where he was again Marshal, with a predilection for killing.

The most famous event in the history of the fort was the raiding of the army stores in 1869. The government then had a great many stores there and the surplus that could not be cared for at the fort was piled up along the railroad track with two watchmen to guard it. One of them, John Hays, went across the street one night and entered a saloon to get a drink. As he went in he was met by two soldiers from the fort, who, without provocation, killed him. The soldiers were colored and were drunk. They went into a barber shop and broke mirrors and scared the proprietor to the roof of his shop. He went to the fort and when the men were ranged in dress parade by order of the Colonel he picked out the desperadoes. They were taken to Hays and shut up in a cellar that served as a jail. That night they were taken out by the citizens and strung up to the railroad bridge. In 1874 the Ninth Infantry (colored) tried to get even with the town, but in the battle that ensued six of their number were left dead in the street. There were many other fatalities in the conflicts between the town and fort, and the soldiers found that they had a town of fighters to deal with.

The old-timers, like the late Henry Inman and Gen. Forsythe, tried their mettle here and found honor. Now it will be devoted to peace, for the terms of the grant are that the agricultural college and State normal school shall have it for branches of those institutions. It is expected that at least 500 students will be in attendance.—Globe-Democrat.

Women Not Cowardly.

When cowardice is described as a leading feminine attribute somebody makes a huge mistake. Women do the most daring things on record—take chances which would appal a man. They may jump at the sight or mere mention of a harmless mouse, but they court death several times a year. It is one of the traits which makes feminine nature so puzzling. I have known women who were timid to a degree, under ordinary circumstances, come forth as heroines under the pressure of occasion. A woman who shudders at the sight of a small cut from which blood oozes will often exhibit a marvelous courage in a shocking accident. It is beautiful to think that dependence can be placed upon the sex in times of need.

PROTECTION FOR EVERY WOMAN IS FOUND IN Dr. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION

"I am the mother of four children," writes Mrs. Euphemia Falconer, of Trent, Muskegon Co., Mich. "My first two babies were still-born, and I suffered every thing but death. My friends all thought I could never recover. I was reduced to 109 pounds. When I was three months along for my third child I was taken with hemorrhage or flooding and came near having a miscarriage from female weakness. For two months I was under the care of our doctor, but was getting weaker all the time until one day I happened to come across one of your little books and I read it through, and the next day I sent and got three bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one bottle of 'Pellets.' I improved so fast I continued to take your medicine until baby was born, and he is healthy and all right. My health has been good ever since. I now weigh 165 pounds."

TRAINING A HUSBAND.

How the Boy Grows Into the Man. Selecting a Dress for Mother.

It was a large store in New York where a sale of a special fashionable article of dress was taking place. The father and son, a boy of perhaps thirteen or fourteen, were customers. The boy was the purchaser, and was left free to select the garment, evidently intended as a gift for his mother. Hundreds of these articles were piled in confusion on the counter. At last a choice was made, when the father said, in a slow, contemplative tone,—

"I never saw mamma wear plaid."

The boy looked up.

"Don't you think she ought to?" he asked.

"Well, I do not know about 'ought;' she never seems to choose it," was the response.

The boy said in a determined tone,—

"I like plaid."

"Oh, yes," interrupted the father, "but you want her to enjoy wearing it, not wear it just to please you."

"Why, of course," and the boy put down the garment of his choice and selected a dainty pink, saying, in a soft loving voice. "That looks like mamma more than the other, even if the other is pretty."

The father nodded, and the perfect love that surrounded one woman in this work-a-day world was evident to the chance observer, as was the fact that one boy was being trained to appreciate the clothes worn in his home and by those he loved. The ideal husband is not the man who provides, but the one who provides money with a warm, intelligent interest in the way it is expended, and notices and comments on the results obtained by the money expended.

Something of a Hint.

"Stolen kisses are the sweetest," he said.

"How I dislike a man who doesn't practise what he preaches," she returned.

Occasionally a man has to be jarred before he realizes what is going on.

Sahara is Not a Barren Waste.

The Sahara is not a barren waste, as is popularly supposed. Not long ago 2,000,000 goats and 260,000 camels in the Algerian Sahara alone, and the oases furnished 1,500,000 date palms.

BOOTS CHANGED HIS CAREER

A Southerner Whose Success in Life Hinged on His Substantial Footgear.

"Talk about your two good suits of clothes," said the son of a well-known Confederate army officer. "In my young days shoes, one pair, was the badge of the plutocrat. I came of a large family, eight sons, and when things were going particularly well one of us had a pair of shoes. I was the youngest, so that it never was I. Now, you would be surprised to know the effect, mental, moral and physical, that shoes have on a man. I consider that my career, aye, and my character, hinge upon the possession of a pair. When I went to school in Virginia thirty years ago, of course I was barefooted. I was a quiet youth, strong for my age, but phlegmatic and would put up with a lot rather than get into a fight.

"My particular enemy in the school was an impudent and conceited boy, somewhat older than myself. He was the son of our family doctor, an only son, and the proud possessor of a pair of shoes, shoes of the old country type, with thick soles adorned with plenty of steel. You see we were not utterly poverty stricken. We had a family doctor. You couldn't expect a Southern gentleman to be able to stand for a family doctor and shoes for his family at one and the same time. My enemy was forever tormenting me, but I endured it silently for a long time. At last one day my patience would endure it no longer. I fell upon him and a sanguinary conflict ensued. We fought for an hour or more. We fought like windmills in a hurricane. It is true we did not often hit one another. We were usually too close or too far off, but we smote everything in sight, trees, walls and particularly the air. Tweedledum and Tweedledee were not a marker to us. We managed to blacken each other's eyes and bleed each other's noses, chiefly through the contact of our heads.

"Finally, however, my enemy bethought him of his superior armament. He drew back and delivered upon my unfortunate bare shanks a kick of cruel force and precision. I can feel to-day the impact of that mass of leather and steel. It was agony. I surrendered unconditionally. Now began a period of the most heartrending humiliation and misery. Wherever I went that wretched shod youth followed. I was his slave. I ran his errands. He thwarted me in all my undertakings. He stood on his steel and leather between me and the smallest taste of enjoyment.

"There was a girl, a sweet little blue-eyed thing of twelve summers, my first love who was to me as all the world, including the village candy store. With her I would commune under the trees near the village school. With her I would wax gallant and eloquent. Yankees I would slay by the score, rather than that a hair of her head should be disturbed. I wished her to believe me a Paul Jones and a Stonewall Jackson in embryo, only with a spice of wickedness.

"I believe I should have succeeded but for that horrid boy with his shoes. One day when I was holding forth to my lady love in an especially lofty strain, the wretch came sauntering past. As he took in the situation, his eyes lighted up with malicious joy. He made straight for me.

"'Get out,' he said in tones of peremptory conteptm. 'I want to talk to Delia.'

"For a moment, as the spirit of Jackson and Jones burnt bright in my breast, I was for giving battle. But he merely raised his foot and I saw the flash of steel beneath the leather. The fire of my valor was quenched. I turned one last despairing glance on Delia, who was laughing and slunk away. The horror of those shoes was upon me and my knees knocked together.

"But I swore vengeance, and all things come to the man who knows how to wait. That winter my father carried through successfully a piece of business. Result, the whole family was shod. My own footgear was especially magnificent. No shoes, mind you, but boots, with stout leather reaching even unto the knee. Homer was all right when he made the well-grieved Achaeans the victors. Mine enemy and I met. He was vanquished from the start. I think he turned pale when his eye fell upon my leather-clad shanks. He would have declined combat. But burning with the wrongs I had suffered I fell upon him without giving him time to retreat. The battle was short and fierce. I scorned to use my feet, but I was now proof against his mulish onslaught. I took his kicks without feeling them and smote him with my fists. Finally I got him down and choked him until I was weary. But as he arose, humble, bruised and trembling, I deliberately landed my armed feet on each of his shins, and with a howl of agony he turned to flee. I delivered one more kick, the most satisfactory of all, on Nature's appointed kicking place.

"My fame reached Delia's ears, and she was all smiles when she received me. She had understood, she said, all along and her heart had bled for me. I had my doubts, but the heart of youth is as wax in a maiden's hands. Shortly after my enemy approached I called to him sweetly and he came tremblingly.

"'Why don't you tell me to get out?' I asked pleasantly, swinging my foot the while, and the titter of Delia sent the hot blood of pride and joy coursing through my veins. What became of Delia I don't remember. But upon these boots turned my career. My shyness and phlegm left me. I became energetic and confident. I succeeded in study and sport; I afterward became captain of my college football team. My subsequent career has been one of effort crowned with success."

The Language of Finance.

"Do you think there will be much interest in this political enterprise.

"Interest," repeated Senator Sorghum. "It'll be more than interest. It'll be dividends."—Washington Star.

THE GOLF WIDOW.

Up to Date No Silver Tongued Orator Has Pleaded Her Cause.

For several years now the golf widow's situation has been most pathetic, but she gets very little sympathy from any one save the other golf widows, and they are too busy sympathizing with themselves to feel another's woes. The attitude of the general public toward the stricken one is: "Serves her right. Any one who is fool enough to play the game deserves any hard luck she gets." Your true zealot is proverbially hard-hearted.

A married woman to-day must play golf or give up her husband. Even when she plays she probably has only the melancholy satisfaction of occasionally seeing the fluttering of his golf coat across a far bunker; but that is something. It's a devoted and self-sacrificing man who plays golf with his own wife, save at rare intervals, when no man friend is in sight or when he feels inclined to show his proud superiority by a little valuable instruction. Flattery, judiciously administered, will also bring the family together on the links occasionally. If a wife can only seduce herself to a condition of awe-struck appreciation, and knows just enough about the game to wonder and adore in technical sporting terms, she may be allowed to trail around the links with her husband, but it takes tact to achieve this proud distinction. The most she can hope for under ordinary circumstances is to lunch or dine with her golf-smitten husband, and hear him fight his battles over again; but that is better than dining and lunching alone, and she may prevent complete and final estrangement.

The wife of a cummuter has an especially hard time. He is so hurried and he really doesn't have time to go home at all save for purposes of sleep. Yet, after all, the city man does the same thing, and it is harder for his wife to follow him to the links than it is for the wife of the commuter to follow him, so perhaps honors are easy. The business man doesn't go home from the office to change his clothes. Not he. He keeps golf tog in his locker at the club. As early as he can possibly cut business he leaves the office, races for a train, goes straight to the links, plays until dark and dines at the club house, where he and the other men tell what would have happened if what did happen hadn't happened. Later he goes home so tired and sleepy that he doesn't stand upon the order of his going to bed, but goes at once, unless he stays awake long enough to tell his wife about his phenomenal drive from the sixth tee and the spectacular long put by which he halved the seventh hole. If she doesn't know the tee from lemonade so much the worse for her.

The golfer goes to the office early, so that he can get away early, and in the gray dawn he talk across the breakfast table about the virtues of his new brassey and the approach he has learned from Vardon. Then he goes off, wondering whether the weather will be too heavy for good work across the green, and calling back over his shoulder that he will not be at home for dinner unless it rains hard.

Countless golf widows are praying for rain as ardently as a Texas farmer in time of drought. A wet season is their only hope, and the wetness must be of the wettest variety. No ordinary drizzle will stop a golf game. No thunder shower will daunt a golf fiend.

"Over at home," says Willie, (every well regulated and warranted golf professional is a Willie, though there is some slight variety in our names), "no one wad think o' stopping for a Scotch mist, and any Scotch mist is a deal worse than this bit of drizzle."

And the American devotees of the ancient royal game turn up their coat collars, take a grip upon their clubs and their stoicism and paddle around the links, warmed by the thought that they are living up to Scotch tradition and that the quality of the clubhouse "Scotch" is beyond reproach.

So only a summer of continuous and pouring rain can restore the golfing husband to the arms of a non-golfing wife, and, if there is anything in prayer, it's a lucky thing for the general public that the golfers are praying for fair weather as earnestly as the golf widows are praying for foul, and that the former class outnumber the latter.

Saturday and Sunday used to be the days for domestic joys, with the tired business man. They are field days now, and the insidious thing about the game is that there's no age limit immunity from attacks of the disease. Anything from the infant to the octogenarian is fair prey for the golf germ, and only paralysis or blindness can make masculinity immune. Local attacks of morality have stopped Sunday playing in certain clubs and there has been a good deal of eloquent arguing for and against it. There's no denying that a day on the links is a tremendous physical invigorator for a man confined to an office during the week, and when one gets into the morals of the problem the issues are sadly complicated, but there's the golf widow. Some concession ought to be made to her; but, up to date, no silver-tongued orator has pleaded her cause.

On the whole, the best thing the deserted wives can do is to get into the game, whether they like it or not. They may hate violent exercise, and the sun may give them headaches and ruin their complexions, and they may find golfing so fatiguing and time-consuming that it leaves no time or energy for social duties or care of home and children; but, if they are going to leave all things and cleave to their husbands, they will have to do their cleaving on the golf links. If health or home cares absolutely prevent their playing the game, they will have to summon their feminine fortitude and resign themselves to the role of golf widow.

"Mrs. Strongmind is a warm advocate of women's rights, is she not?"

"Oh, yes. If she had her way, man would not be eligible for anything more important than the vice-presidency."—Brooklyn Life.

The Health Problem

is much simpler than is sometimes supposed. Health depends chiefly upon perfect digestion and pure blood, and the problem is solved very readily by Hood's Sarsaparilla. You may keep well by taking it promptly for any stomach or blood disorder. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, catarrh, dyspepsia, rheumatism and other diseases are numbered by the thousands.

The favorite family cathartic is Hood's Pills.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap. The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different; we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can [illegible]

"I believe we mothers cannot be too careful. Whenever there is any difficulty between my husband and me, I send the children outdoors immediately."

"Very prudent; but, on the other hand, is it good for the children to be obliged to be on the streets from morning to night?"

When Women Voted for President.

Women voted in New Jersey in the Presidential election of 1804, when Thomas Jefferson was re-elected for a second term. In 1892 the women of the new State of Wyoming participated in a Presidential election which resulted in the choice of Grover Cleveland, who was the first President since Jefferson to be elected by the aid of women's vote.—The Forum.

Lions Not "Domestic Animals."

Justices Cave and Wright, London, recently dismissed an appeal against the magisterial decision in the case of the Aquarian lions. The keeper of these lions was prosecuted for cruelly beating them, but the Westminster magistrate dismissed the case on the ground that the lions were not domestic animals. The court upheld this view and dismissed the appeal.

New Use for Women.

Yet another occupation has been found for women—that of acting as barometers. Weather Prophet Dunn is quoted as saying that one of the ways of telling whether the temperature was rising was to watch a girl's front hair. When it began to lose its curl and grow straight, it would be a sure sign of a change of temperature.

This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the Sunshine, located two miles east of Salida at Cleora Station, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, also on the Arkansas river, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

Death of Mrs. Peter Clancy.

We regret to chronicle the death of Mrs. Peter Clancy, of Ashburnham, which occurred yesterday morning. The deceased was the daughter of the late Patrick Sullivan, Esq., of Douro, and was married 35 years ago, since when she has been a resident of the village. Mrs. Clancy has been a sufferer for the past four or five years, and has been confined to her room for about twelve months. She leaves, besides her husband, four children to mourn her loss.

Hints For Farmer Readers.

Lindsay Post.—Mr. Jas. Smith, of Simcoe county turned 28 hogs into an acre of peas just as they were getting ripe. They ate every pea in about 15 days and did well on them. He figured that the pigs would eat three pounds per day; that for 15 days would be 45 pounds for each pig. For the 28 it would be 1,260 pounds or 21 bushels. It all shows that the peas were a good yield and that Mr. Smith was saved the work of feeding, in a busy season, and the pigs chewed the grain more thoroughly than if eating hurriedly from a trough.

Poultry Raising.

The Toronto News suggests the appointment of a poultry commissioner, whose business would be to instruct the farmers of the country in the best methods of poultry raising teaching them the best breeds to select, the proper manner of feeding, housing, preparing for market. The News says. "Any intelligent farmer, by giving his birds average attention and care, will find no difficulty in getting a profit of from a dollar to a dollar and a half per head. There are 650,000 farmers in Canada, each of whom could easily raise 100 heads a year. Individually the profit would not be great, but estimating it at a dollar a head we see that the value to the country would be $65,000,000."

A Wise Move.

At a meeting of the Collegiate Institute Board, Cobourg, a few days ago, it was resolved to inaugurate a commerical course in the Institute, which will give a business education of the same nature as may be had at any of the business colleges of Ontario. The first step has been taken by the Board in appointing a commerical specialist who has had considerable experience in this line of education. The next step will be taken in January, 1901, when classes in stenography and book-keeping will be opened to all students whether they have passed the entrance examination or not, and with the opening of new Collegiate next September a regular business department will be instituted. As the revenue of the Board will be increased by the Government grant which a new building will ensure, and also by the fees from pupils who take the business course already referred to, the trustees have determined to reduce the Institute fees to 75 cents per month for all first year pupils entering on and after September, 1901. Peterborough might wisely follow this example.

The Central Fair is a Financial Success

About Two Thousand Dollars Taken in at the Gates Yesterday--Everything Booming

The Formal Opening Ceremonies—Addresses by Hon. J. R. Stratton, James Kendry, M.P., John Lang, M.P., T. Blezard, M.P.P., and Warden Forster

At an early hour the gates were opened for the second day of the exhibition. The day was fine and warm and the people came out in crowds.

Owing to the procession of the Oklahama Congress of Rough Riders, which took place up town, the majority of the people did not appear on the grounds until afternoon, consequetnly the lunch counters did not do as large a business as was expected.

Some of the exhibits this year are exceptionally fine. The poultry shows a marked improvement to that of previous years. The fruit exhibits were also very fine, while the vegetables were quite up to the average.

The Secretary this year has his office in a large tent, which is far more convenient and pleasant than the little office which has formerly been used. A cosy little corner was alloted to the newspaper representatives.

The 57th Regimental Band arrived about two o'clock, and for a short time played in front of the museum.

By the time the speakers appeared, the central building was so crowded that it was almost impossible to get through, and the stands which were serving hot tea free, had all the business they could attend to.

The Fair was formally opened about 2.15. Among those on the platform were President F. H. Dobbin, Senator Kerr, Cobourg; Hon. J. R. Stratton, Jas. Kendry, M.P., Thos. Blezard, M.P.P., J. Lang, M.P., Jas. Foster, Esq., Warden of the County, and Mr. Geo. Elliott and others.

The first speaker was Mr. Kerr. He congratulated the directors on the fine turnout, and the fine day they had for their fair. He touched on the close connection of Canada to the mother country and the sending of Canadians to fight for their country. He told several amusing anecdotes, which brought forth peals of laughter.

Hon. J. R. Stratton gave a brief and interesting address, mentioning the rapid increase in the amount of trade with Great Britain during the last few years.

Mr. Jas. Kendry, M.P., spoke of the prosperity of the country, and the good crops in this vicinity.

Mr. T. Blezard, M.P.P., said that the farmers were the people, the rest being dependent upon them.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin declared the Fair formally opened, but requested those who were interested in the most important natural product to remain a little while longer, as the baby show would take place at once on the same stand.

Five babies were entered and were fine specimens. Although the babies were required to be under seven months, Mr. Geo. Elliott, Esq., and Mr. T. Blezard, M.P.P., were conspicuous among those on the platform. The prize was awarded to Mrs. Geo. Stevens, of Ashburnham, for the best baby.

The Wild West was the chief attraction during the afternoon and evening.

THE INSIDE EXHIBIT.

The main building contained a fair exhibit, though there is room for considerable improvement.

In the fine arts department the principal exhibitors were Miss Annie Simmons, Mrs. G. A. Sceney, Miss S. A. Lockwood, Mrs. W. G. Russell, Mrs. W. J. Cox, Miss Ella Fraser, Mrs. R. T. Hounsel and Mr. John Porter. The most of these were exhibitors in all three classes.

Mr. R. M. Roy had a fine exhibition of photographs, which elicited much admiration.

In fine penmanship, the first prize was awarded to Mr. Pringle, of the Peterborough Business College, for a very artistic specimen.

The grain exhibit was very poor.

Amongst other exhibits in the building was Gough Bros., Singer Sewing Machine Co., the Blue Ribbon and Monsoon Teas, Dominion Trading Stamp Co., and others.

Mr. James Head, gardner of the Nicholls Hospital, had a very exhibition of flowers. Exhibits were also made by Mrs. R. T. Hounsell and Mrs. J. R. Goodfellow.

A further description of the inside exhibits will appear to-morrow.

CHARM TEA.

Without doubt the finest and most appreciated exhibit at the Fair, was that of George Robertson & Son, Kingston, of the famous CHARM TEA. They served out 1,800 cups, which were highly commented upon by all who drank it.

TO-DAY'S PROGRAMME.

The following is the programme for to-day—

7.00 a.m.—Grounds open to the public.

1.00 to 2.30 p.m.—Judging of carriage horses in the ring and competition for the Bank of Commerce silver medal.

2.30 p.m.—Performance by the Oklahoma Wild West and Congress of Rough Riders, introducing new specialties and full programme as previous day. The 57th Regiment Band will furnish a choice programme of music. The Indian museum will be open for inspection.

4.00 p.m.—Continuation of the speeding in the ring and final heats of the 2.40 trotting and the running contests.

Admission to grounds 25 cents. No extra charge to Wild West Show.

ACCIDENT AT THE FAIR.

One of the Wild West Showmen Seriously Injured.

During the performance of the Wild West Show at the Central Exhibition last night, George Deer, an Indian, was thrown from his horse and severely injured.

The accident was witnessed by hundreds of people, and naturally caused considerable excitement. It was due to the breaking of the girth, holding the saddle.

Deer was unconscious for a couple of hours, and was for a time thought to have received internal injuries. He is the son of an Indian chief, who resides on the Indian Reserve in Oklahama Territory.

Rain has fallen again over Manitoba; elsewhere fine weather has prevailed. The outlook is for rain to-night over the lake region, and the winds are likely to increase locally to strong breezes from the eastward. Fine weather is indicated for Manitoba.

An Obnoxious By Law.

The action of authorities in trying to enforce the provisions of a by-law regulating liveries, by demanding $10 license on each 'bus that ran to the fair grounds, has created some feeling amongst those interested. Should the town proceed to enforce payment, there will be another corporation law suit, for the liverymen will fight. The Council should at once repeal the objectionable clause in the by-law.

The Cheese Board met yesterday as usual, when a large quantity of Cheese was boarded. The bidding was spirited throughout, commencing at 10 1-2 and running so quickly to 11 9-16c. ANNOUNCEMENT

To the People of Peterborough and vicinity:

Saturday, September 15th, China Hall was re-opened with a stock which for quality, completeness and variety is unsurpassed in Canada.

During the last six months we have been collecting these goods from every quarter of the globe, and the result will make of China Hall a veritable art gallery

Added to a full line of staple and domestic wares, we show direct importatians from Egypt, Japan, Austria, France, Germany, Spain, Bohemia, England, America, and last, but not least, from Canada.

This collection comprises the newest styles in Dinner and Tea, Toilet and Salad Sets, Lamps, Cutlery, Silverware, Flower Pots, Cut Glass and Bric-a-bac, including specimens of such reliable wares as Habiland, Doulton, Ridgeway, Wedgewood and Farnival, Royal Bonn, Carisbad, Satsenna, Awata, Lenara, Yokohama, Terra Cotta, Handengraven Egyptian and Cloisonnee.

Several of these lines are now placed on sale for the first time in Peterborough, and a few of them for the first time in Canada. Amongst these unique pieces may be seen (with a printed guarantee enclosed) a facsimile of the celebrated Portland vase which made Josiah Wedgewood famous.

China Hall in its present form is a model of convenience and beauty, and it has now every facility for the carrying on of an up-to-date trade. A prompt and courteous service may be relied upon, while a cordial welcome is assured to all visitors whether purchasers or not.

For the convenience of customers a cosy waiting room is provided, which we trust may be appreciated to the extent of being used and of becoming a rendezvous for ladies who wish to meet down town.

The accomplishment of all this has been no small task, and it is hoped that the public will take pride in this new store which, without exception, is the handsomest of its kind in Canada.

A few words as to our future policy. The business will be conducted upon a cash basis, with one price to all and positively no reduction from the marked figures, which will be as low as is compatible with the character of the goods, our aim being that customers should remember the quality after the price has been forgotten. No article will be represented as being better than it really is. Special attention given to matching and mending.

Thanking our numerous customers for their many expressions of goodwill, and for their adherence to us while in cramped quarters, we shall now take pleasure in welcoming them to our commodious and artistic premises at 36[illegible] George-st.

ALLIED WARSHIPS AGAIN SHELL CHINESE FORTS

It Is Not Certain What Act of Chinese Aggression Caused the Hostilities.

TEN THOUSAND TROOPS TO WINTER IN PEKIN

Massacre of Forty-four Missionaries Confirmed—Fifty Thousand Converts Killed by the Boxers in Various Parts of China.

London, Sept. 20.—The reported bombardment of the forts at Pei Tang by the allies is causing considerable speculation. Pei Tang is close to the sea and is the site of several Chinese forts which defend the mouth of the Pei Ho River, just as Taku defends it in another and more southerly direction. Whether the Chinese in their stupidity have again attempted to interfere with the free passage of allied vessels up the river, or whether they have opened fire upon the warships, as on June 17th last, and thus again brought retribution upon their heads, is not known, but it is certain that some such cause is responsible. This once more emphasizes the absurdity of the negotiations which are going on, showing conclusively the division of China and the absolute lack of security that anything arranged upon will be carried out. The prospect of a deadlock already appears on the horizon, so far as these negotiations are concerned. The punishment of those responsible for the outrages have been laid down by Germany as a condition precedent to the opening of negotiations. The Dowager Empress is more responsible for those outrages than anybody, but the negotiators will not admit any right of the powers to inflict punishment of such a heaven-born person. As a matter of fact, it is the Dowager who should be punished, even if the rest escaped, for she is responsible for the acts of them all. How this stumbling block will be surmounted remains to be seen.

44 MURDERED MISSIONARIES.

Washington, Sept. 03.—The War Department has received the following despatch—

"Taku (no date) Adjutant-General, Washington.—

"Pekin, Sept. 17.—Further reply to your number 28, following accepted here as reliable—

"Two daughters of Atwater, and 26 others murdered at Tayuan, July 9. Clapp and wife, four others murdered Taiku July 31. Atwater, wife, two children, six others murdered by their escort near Pen Chow Fu August 15. All in Shan Si Province. Same message reports six persons—Dixon and wife, Ocuren and wife, single gentleman and single lady as having escaped into the mountains from a mission thirty miles to north of Taikuan. They escaped on horseback and possibly may have evaded their pursuers. (Signed) Chaffee."

BOMBARDING THE FORTS AGAIN.

Taku, Sept. 20.—The allies attacked the Petang forts at daybreak. Heavy cannonading is going on.

BOXERS READY TO RETURN.

London, Sept. 20.—It was explained today at the British Foreign Office that "it was found inexpedient for the powers to accept the Russian withdrawal proposals," as they had reliable information that "the Boxers were ready to reoccupy Pekin as soon as the allies retired."

LI HUNG AT TAKU.

Washington, Sept. 20.—Admiral Crowninshield, chief of the Navigation Bureau and Acting Secretary of the Navy, has received the following cablegram from Admiral Remey—

"Taku, Sept. 19.

"I have called upon Li Hung Chang officially. Arrived September 18 in a merchant vessel. He will proceed at once to Pekin. He desires that I tender his sincere thanks for the consideration he has received from the United States Government.

(Signed) "REMEY."

WILL WINTER AT PEKIN.

Pekin, Sept. 14, via Shanghai, Sept. 19—The indications are that ten thousand of the allies will winter at Pekin. The German force will be the largest. Some of the troops will probably be distributed in the surrounding cities to relieve the strain. The Japanese will withdraw the most of their forces to Nagasaki. The Russians will retain at least two thousand here.

A joint expedition to Paoting has been planned by the British, the German and the French forces. The Dowager Empress has expressed her willingness to return to Pekin if guaranteed protection. The generals in command and the Ministers of the powers are unwilling to assume such responsibility.

A number of small bands of Boxers have been reported in the neighborhood recently.

50,000 CONVERTS MURDERED.

Shanghai, Sept. 18.—Mr. Goodnow, the American Consul, estimated that between forty and fifty thousand native Christians have been murdered for refusing to recant.

Where Were the Cops?

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—Old Satan and his imps were evidently let loose on Tuesday night for about eleven o'clock Tuesday night they went roaring up and down George street. They have no regard for the sick, the dying, the living or dead. Where were the cops? If they don't wake up they will find themselves in trouble.

CITIZEN.

LIVE LIKE PRINCES.

The Chinese Missionaries Lead a Royal Life.

Mr. Alfred Hand, of Stewart street, received a letter from his cousin, who is a lieutenant in the American forces in China. Lieut. Hand confirms the previous reports as to the conduct of the troops in Tien Tsin.

He says—"Talk about looting the place. You could get wagon loads of goods. Some of our boys got money, silks, watches, jewelry and other valuable articles. We have our knapsacks with us, and, of course, had to leave a great deal of stuff, as we could not take it with us. There are many soldiers and citizens looting the city."

In another part of his letter he says—"Several of the boys in my regiment caught a Chinaman with the head of a white man in a bag. They made him a prisoner and compelled him to stand out all night in the cold in a nude condition. At daylight they shot him."

He writes—"This is certainly a paradise for missionaries, for they live like kings. They have large, handsome homes, with many Chinese servants and fine summer residences."

Here is another sentence from his letter—"The Chinese are a brutal lot and when they catch our soldiers they don't keep them prisoners, but hack them up."

Referring to the Presidential election in the United States, the writes—"The boys are all good for Bryan, even Republican soldiers. The officers are for McKinley.

He says further—"The good feeling between the Queen's soldiers and our boys is one of affection. We feel it an honor to fight side by side with the brave British boys."

THREE LIVES WERE LOST.

And Two More Are Despaired of—Van Kleek Hill Disaster.

Vankleek Hill, Ont., Sept. 0.2—County Crown Attorney Maxwell and Coroner Lawlor have ordered a thorough investigation into the cause of the falling of the gable end of the new Presbyterian church here, which resulted in the death of Rev. John McLeod, Auguste De Lorme and Henry Golden, the last mentioned having succumbed to his injuries.

Little hope is entertained for the recovery of Wm. Horne and Arthur Doig, of Montreal, the other two workmen who were seriously injured.

All the dead were married men. Rev. Mr. McLeod leaves a family of three children, while Henry Golden is survived by a large family of small children. De Lorme had no children.

When the accident happened the men were standing at a distance of about 75 feet above the ground, and were engaged in putting on the cap of the gable wall. Mr. McLeod had gone up with the men to watch the operations, and was in full view of his family when the disaster occured.

The dead minister had been pastor of the local Presbyterian church for the last eight years and had a large circle of friends throughout the province. He had just returned from a trip to Charlottetown, P.E.I., where he visited his parents whom he had not seen in twenty years.

A coroner's jury viewed the bodies last night, and the inquest was resumed at 10 o'clock this morning, evidence being given by the architects and contractors who had planned and built the church.

STRIKERS GAINING GROUND IN PLACES

So Say Advices, but the Operators Say Not.

A MINE BOSS ATTACKED

Owners Propose to Open Mines Under Police Protection and Break up the tie in Lakawanna.

Philadelphia, Sept. 20.—According to advices from Hazleton the strikers are gaining some ground in that region, although the operators dispute this, and insist that more men are at work today than there were yesterday.

Important information comes from the Lackawanna region to the effect that the superintendents of some of the large mines are contemplating making an effort to start one or more mines under police protection if necessary, and thus break the tie-up which is complete in that district.

A few more men are reported idle in the Shamokin district, and the story sent here last night that the strikers at the Morea colliery, of the Reading Company, in the Schuylkill district, had voted to return to work was proven to be untrue.

The strikers at last succeeded in inducing some of the workers in the only mine operating in the upper region, that of the West End Company, at Mocanaqua, to quit work, and that colliery is crippled to-day.

ATTACKED A MINE BOSS.

Shamokin, Pa., Sept. 20.—One hundred more men at the Locust Gap colliery, of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, joined the ranks of the strikers this morning. The company claims that enough men will stay at work to enable the big operation to continue. The North Franklin, at Treverton, owned by the same company, continues working full-handed, and it is likely that the United Mine Workers will not be able to induce any of the men to strike. Treverton is seven miles west of here, and is on the border of the anthracite coal fields. Most of the men own their own homes there, and are said to fear the company will abandon the operation if they strike. The company is the only industry in the place.

While Hugh Davis, a fire boss at Pennsylvania colliery was on his way to work this morning Hungarian strikers assaulted him with sticks. He was seriously injured. nAadditional number of detectives went to the colliery shortly after the assault to afford better protection to men desiring to work.

TWO CONFERENCES HELD

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 20.—Two important conferences connected with the strike of the anthratic miners of the Lackawanna and Wyoming valleys were features marking the fourth day of the struggle in this regon. One of these brought together the heads of the three big companies—the Lackawanna, the Delaware & Hudson and the Pennsylvania Coal Company—and many individual operations for the final consideration of plans to force the working of some of the miners at least. It is announced that the various superintendents are about ready to centralize men at certain collieries and operate them under the protection of the law; For this latter emergency they have had some hundreds of men made deputy sheriffs and watchmen.

The other meetiong of the day was that of the district executive board at strikers' headquarters to deal with the effort of the big companies to make a working stand, all the features of which they are informed of, and they say they will be prepared to offset it.

GOOD NEWS TO STRIKERS.

Hazelton, Pa., Sept. 20.—Reports received at strike headquarters and elsewhere from various parts of the Hazelton region this morning brought nothing but good news to the idle anthracite coal miners. The first information brought here told of a break among the employes in the Lattimer mines, the first that has taken place there during the strike. The colliery was considered an invulnerable spot, and the break there put the strikers in a good humor. The number of men who quit was quite small, but the union men are satisfied that they will make further inroads on the force there.

The next good news received by the strikers came from Coleraine, and was to the effect that the colliery there was shut down tight. The McAdoo strikers have been trying for four days to close this place. The Evans colliery at Beaver Meadow, also failed to start work this morning because of lack of men.

A few more men went to work in the Markle mines at Jeddo, and Oakdale to-day than worked yesterday.

The mines at Eckley and Sandy Run are in full operation this morning as usual.

Gough Bros' Display.

Conspicuous among the ground floor exhibits was that of Messrs. Gough Bros in their display of clothing and gents furnishings. They sustain their reputation of being the "Wonderful Cheap Men." The exhibit was carefully arranged with clothing of all styles and qualities, with prices to suit everybody.

BOER GIRLS AS SPIES.

The Misses Cronje Visit ed the British Camp—What They had in View.

Ottawa, Sept 20.— Lieut. E. W. Morrison, of the Royal Canadian Artillery in South Africa, in a letter to a friend in this city, says.

"We had visits in camp several times from the Misses Cronje, nieces of the general. They are very nice, well-educated girls and quite fashionably dressed. As we marched into camp last Sunday we passed them on the veldt driving home from church in a stylish Victoria with a fine pair of carriage horses and a little Zulu boy on the box. It looked curiously out of place on the veldt and reminded one of the southern outfits 'before de wah.' When the Misses Cronje visited our camp they were attended by three strapping Zulu waiting maids, their freshly oiled faces shining out of enormous sonw-white sunbonnets. Cronje pere and the girls' two brothers are away fighting against us. I may be a Foxy Quiller, but I am inclined to think that the social attentions of the young ladies are not prompted so much by a desire for the pleasure of our society as a patriote impulse to assist the Boer cause by obtaining a knowledge of oour position.

GAME AT RICE LAKE.

New Regulations Proposed for the Protection of Game.

The following notice has been posted up at Jubilee Point, and is the work of some practical joker—

NOTICE.

No person shall kill or shoot any bird or wild fowl protected by this "act" between half an hour after sunset, and half an hour before sunrise, and no blinds or hides shall be built in Rice beds or open waters."

(By Order) DEPUTY GAME WARDEN.

Also that froggers shall not be allowed to frog in Rice Lake after the first day of October, as the ducks come in the rice beds at night and are not allowed to feed on account of the froggers chasing them out of their feed beds at night. This law will be the means of making duck shooting better on Rice Lake, as before the birds used to come in by thousands at night but were chased away by the froggers, thus destroying the shooter's sport. If the Game warden will see that this clause is strictly enforced, they will have no trouble with the above "Act," as shooters will not need to shoot after sunset, as the ducks will stay in the Lake and feed, and they will get good shooting in the day time.

SIR RICHARDCOMING.

The Minister of Trade and Commerce to Speak in Peterborough.

Sir Richard Cartwright, Minister of Trade and Commerce, will address the electors of Peterborough, in the interests of Mr. J. H. McClennan, the Liberal candidate, in the Opera House, on Wednesday evening next, Sept. 26.

Sir Richard is one of the star speakers in the Liberal camp, and no doubt will attract a large crowd.

The Times is informed that Sir Richard will be followed at an early date by Sir Charles Tupper and others, who will address a meeting in the Drill Shed, and an overflow meeting in the Opera House.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

—Hon. Senator Cox was in town yesterday.

—The Times was favored with a call yesterday from Mr. J. T. Robinson, Bobcaygeon's leading merchant.

—Mrs. W. J. BBrown, Hobert street, Toronto, has returned home after visiting her sister, Mrs. W. S. Turner, Weller street.

—Mrs. A. B. Longmore, Cobourg, who has been in town since Monday visiting her son, Mr. A. D. Longmore, returned home yesterday.

County Police Court.

County Magistrate Edmison conducted court at Lakefield Wednesday. H. Nicholls, a lad about fourteen years of age, was found guilty of setting fire to an ice house, but the Magistrate suspending sentence owing to his having been fully persuaded by the evidence of Dr. Fraser that the youth was not in possession of all his mental facturies. Nicholls and another lad named Trainer were also summoned to explain the theft of a canoe, but the charge was withdrawn, and Wm McIlmoyle did not appear to answer to a charge of being drunk and disorderly, nor did John Connors show up to tell what he knew about the gross and insulting language he used to an offended native recently. Both defendants, it is expected, will be landed shortly.

Turner's Exhibit

The exhibit of tents, flags, hammocks &c., by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Son, added much to the brightness and cheerfulness of the grounds. A number of different styles of tents, snugly fitted up with lounging chairs, camp-beds, camp-stools, camp-stoves and hammocks, all of which they are the manufacturers, served to show how comfortable campers can be made when they go to the right place for their outfit. They also showed some of their waterproof garments, horse-covers, &c. These are both cheap and light and will turn the water as well as the most expensive. Besides those on exhibition most of the tents on the grounds also belonged to them, as did also the merry-go-round.

ESSENTIAL TO SUCCESS

When the merchant, a manufacturer, an agent, a professional man or other person who depends on the patronage of the people shall have prepared to do business, it will still be necessary to the fullest success to have the people know the fact. According to the experience of the most successful men whose dealing have been with the general public, the best and surest way to effect this is by newspaper advertising.

THE LAST BOER ARMY DISPERSES IN A PANIC

They Destroy Their Artillery and Many Cross the Portuguese Border.

THE REMAINDER DIVIDE INTO SMALL BANDS.

Departure of Kruger and Resignation of Botha Have Had the Effect Expected—Offer of Dutch Warship Simply an Act of Courtesy.

London, Sept. 20.—The last Boer army has melted away in a state of utter demoralization before the irresistible advance of the British. The departure of Kruger and the resignation of Botha have done the work they were expected to do. With the last fifty miles of the last Boer railway— and that the one which ran to the fountain of supplies at Delagoa Bay—about to fall into British hands, the only considerable force which the Boers had in misbanded in confusion. A few maraud disbanded in confusion. A few marauding bands are all that is left, and these bands aree no doubt responsible for the story of fighting at Komatipoort, as it is quite probable they came into contact with Portuguese troops striving to preserve order. Only a small band out of the 3,000 who opposed Lord Roberts' advance from Machadodrop along the railway are now to be dealt with, the rest either having crossed into Portuguese territory or having dispersed to their homes. This band is encamped among the hills very near Komatipoort, south of the railway, in Transvaal territory, and will be easily disposed of when the British advance reaches their locality, if in the meantime they do not follow their comrades over the border. It is subject for sarcastic comment upon the patriotism of the Boers that the last stand in their behalf should have been made by mercenaries from America and Europe with rebels from Cape Colony who have held on to the last. It is unfortunate that the Boer artillery have been destroyed, thus disappointing those who anticipated that the BBritish artillery would be strengthened considerably by the addition of captured Boer guns. There is now no considerable body of Boers in the field, and future military operations will be of a police character.

The utterances of The Standard, which terms Holland insolent and provocative because of the offer of a warship to convey ex-President Kruger to Holland do not meet with the endorsement of all thinking people. The act of Queen Wilhelmina is simply looked upon as graceful act of courtesy to one of her own blood who is in misfortune, and Britain will not as a whole think worse of Holland on account of it. It must be borne in mind that Kruger is not a pirate and that, though defeated and deposed, he is yet entitled to the respect of those who appreciate the good fighting qualities of the man. though displayed in a bad cause.

BOER ARMY IS DEMORALIZED.

London, Sept. 20.—Lord Roberts cables from Nelspruit, on the Pretoria-Delagoa Bay Railway 60 miles from Komati Poort, the frontier station, under date of Wednesday, September 19, as follows.

"Of the three thousand Boers who retreated upon Komati Poort before the British advance from Machadodrop seven hundred have entered Portugues territory, others have deserted in various directions, and the balance are reported to have crossed the Komati River, and to be occupying spurs of the Lebombo mountain south of the railway.

"A tumult appears to have occurred when they recognized the hopelessness of their cause. Their Long Toms and field guns have been destroyed, and nothing is left of the Boer army but a few marauding bands. Kelly-Kenny is dealing with one of these which occupies a position at Doornberg."

TRACHERY BY BOER WOMEN.

London, Sept. 20.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts, dated Nelspruit, September 16.

"Stephenson occupied this place yesterday. Before retreating the Boers burned several ammunition waggons, two of which were ours. Pole-Carew is four miles east of Avora. He hopes to reach Kaapmulden to-morrow.

"We are now in telegraphic communication with Buller, and can send supplies to him easier from here than from Marhadodorp. Thirty Boers surrendered to Buller at Spitzkop. He reports that the bulk of those opposing him are mercenaries and Cape Colony rebels.

"Methuen reports that Douglass captured on September 12 near Lichtenburg 39 prisoners, 10 waggons and some sheep and oxen. He lost a lieutenant and six men wounded and prisoners.

"Hildyard telegraphs from Utrecht that some women invited Hussars who were patrolling to the westward to enter a farm house from which a white flag was flying and partake of refreshments. The Hussars were fired upon when leaving the farm, which has since been destroyed. It belonged to the field cornet of Utrecht, who has been the leader of the raids of the railway. There was similar treachery near Commandos' nek recently."

AN ACT OF INTERVENTION.

London, Thursday, Sept. 20.— The Standard, which is a Ministerial organ, declares that the action of Holland in offering passage on one of her warships to President Kruger is an act of intervention which might very properly be resented by those against whom it is directed. It says that if Jefferson Davis had escaped to Mexico after the war of the rebellion, and England or Frnce had offered to bring him to Europe in a warship the Federal Government would surely have regarded such action as an insult. It adds that except on the incredible supposition that the consent of Great Britain was first botained, the action of Holland is both provocative and insolent. It has not even the merit of courage, since there is little probability that any official resentment of a kind likely to lead to hostilities will be shown. The paper contends that there is nothing in the relations of the English and Dutch to justify this manifestation of ill-will. It concludes by saying that if the Dutch ranks themselves among the enemies of Great Britain they must take the consequences. They are no longer friends of England, and have no further claim upon British regard.

WILL RETURN TO CANADA.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 20.—Five hundred of the Royal Canadian Regiment of Infantry now in South Africa are coming home. They have had enough of campaigning, and have elected to take their discharge at the expiration of the year of service.

The Militia Department to-day received a cablegram from Lieut.Col. Biggar, formerly of Belleville, who is now deputy assistant adjutant-general in South Africa.

His message was dated Cape Town, September 18th, and states tha tfive hundred of the first contingent will return to Canada immediately, the remainder having elected to stay in South Africa till the end of the war.

This means that about 350 of the Canadian infantry will be left behind. It is likely that they will be drafted into some English regiment for the remainder of their period of service.

The mounted troopers from Canada will continue in South Africa until their year is up, which will be in January or February, by which time it is expected that the country will have been pacified.

FATHER O'LEARY's BRAVERY.

Quebec, Sept. 20.—A large number of public citizens met in the City hall last night and decided to recognize by public testimonial the service of Rev. Father O'Leary, the Roman Catholic chaplain to the first contingent, for the heroism he has displayed on the field of battle.

VILJOEN, "THE FIREBRAND."

Spitzkop, Sept. 18.—Gen. Viljoen, who succeeded Louis Botha in the supreme command of the Transvaal forces, is reported to be moving northward in the direction of Hectorspruit with 3,000 men and thirty guns. He is known as "the firebrand," and will endeavor to protract the war.

A LADY'S LIFE SAVED.

Remarkable Escape from Death of a Popular Lady.

To the Editor of the Times—

Sir,—I have been requested to publish my experience, which I cheerfully do, in the hope that it may benefit others.

Four years ago I began to suffer from indigestion, which became so acute that I was unable to attend to my household duties. Rheumatism also set in, and I was a cripple. After trying several doctors and patent medicines, I was induced to send for a box of Dr. Clark's Wonderful Little Red Pills. These did me so much good that I sent for more, and after taking the boxes I am now as well as I ever was in my life. They undoubtedly saved my life. Mrs Mary E. Parker, Hastings, Ont.

Dr. Clark's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh coughs, lame back, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the lives of the patient have been standing for many years. The most stubborn cases will yield. For sale by Ormond & Walsh, sole agents in Peterborough. Price 50 cents per box. Dr. Clark's Sure Cure for Catarrh, same price. $100 will be paid for any case that it will not [illegible]

PETERBOROUGH, SEPTEMBER 21 1900.

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS.

The fourteenth Parliament of Queen Victoria has been dissolved and the Liberal leaders are seeking reconciliation and framing a plan of campaign to resist the Conservative forces. The Government has decided to take advantage of the first favourable situation in South Africa since the Boer war began.

The South African question is, in fact, the only one before the English people, and upon it the prominent men of the Opposition are divided. The leaven of John Bright, who opposed all war with such earnestness that in 1882 he withdrew from Gladstone's Cabinet rather than appear to indorse the Egyptian expedition, still works in the Liberal party, and affects John Morley and in some measure Sir Vernon Harcourt. But these two men are not one upon the Irish question, which, although not active, still smoulders ready to be poked into flame at the first opportunity. Morley was Irish Secretary when the home rule bill passed the lower house, and he engineered it, the only thing he has ever done, while Harcourt hesitated about following Chamberlain and the Duke of Devonshire into the Tory ranks—the only thing he is sorry he did not do.

Lord Rosebery, although a Liberal in many things, is of the Classes by birth and association and the rankest jingo in Great Britain. No one roars 'the British lion so fiercely as he nor waves the cross of St. George more defiantly. Not even Beaconsfield himself excelled him in this respect. Although he gathered up the fragments of the Liberal and Home Rule parties when Gladstone shattered them, and for a little time held them together, Rosebery has always been known as a party by himself, the heritor of Randolph Churchill's eccentricities in party harness, and, of course, hopelessly distant from Morley. He and Harcourt are more likely to join hands, although when Rosebery was called to form a government, in 1895, it was felt that Sir Vernon had been passed over and ignored in a duty which his services, eminence and influence better fitted him to fulfill, and in a way which left him no good will for the young Prime Minister, of the house of Peerose.

The name of Campbell-Bannerman is also mentioned as one of the leaders who requires placation, but, as a matter of fact, the three named are the only important ones in the Liberal party, and it will be a long time before his blunders on the small supplies army bill when Secretary of State for War, through which the last Liberal Parliament passed, will be forgiven. He may be counted out of the fight, which, if successful for the Liberal game is not likely to lead him to important office.

The issue that will be raised in the election is not diverted by any other questions than the righteousness of the Boer war, its conduct and results. For its consideration—in a favourable light for the Conservative party—by the country no time has been or is likely to recur so auspicious as the present. The departure of Kruger, the end of all great movements in the Transvaal, the installation of military rule, which by annexation has calmly disposed of questions that statecraft could not settle, and the return of the troops, all will contribute to influence or to blind the people and secure their endorsement of the government in a matter wherein it has behaved most ignobly. It is entirely likely that the indorsement asked for will not be withheld, and that Mr. Chamberlain, Lord Salisbury, Mr. Balfour and the Duke of Devonshire shall continue to conduct the affairs of the British nation for an indefinite time to come.

CANNIBALISM IN VOGUE

An American Indian in Jail for Eating a Woman.

An Indian cannibal has been sent to jail in Vancouver. His crime was part of an ancient rite. He was an initiate of the Ha-mattsa, an Indian secret fraternity which demands of its members that they acquire a taste for human flesh.

The Canadian government is greatly exercised over this outbreak of a barbaric custom that had been thought well nigh stamped out.

One of the prisoners was a well-known half-breed named George Hunt. He had charge of a band of Indians exhibited at the World's Fair, and he acted as interpreter for Dr. Franz Boas, of the Museum of Natural History, New York, when the latter was in Vancouver collecting data for his important work on Indian customs, now filed at the Smithsonian Institution.

There was insufficient evidence for the conviction of Hunt, and the same is true of all the defendants save one. He was convicted of having devoured a portion of the body of a squaw.

It is only among a few of the far northern and inland tribes, remote from civilization and stubborn in their resistance to missionary effort, that the horrible rites of the Ha-mattsa, or flesh-eaters, survive.

Every spring the Ha-mattsa holds its initiation ceremonies for new candidates, accompanied by feasting and dancing and other wild orgies. The chief purpose of the initiation is to create in the aspirant the taste for human flesh.

In the case in question the body of a young squaw who had mysteriously died but a few days before was removed from the burying ground and taken to the initiation room, where it was lashed naked to one of the posts. A band of the Ha-mattsas, marched round it, inflamed by wild music and frenzied yells of the old Ha-mattsas, and proceeded to bite off mouthfuls of flesh from the arms, sides and legs of the squaw's body.

The Northwest Mounted Police were informed of the hideous rite and succeeded in capturing the ringleader.

Many curious facts about the cannibal fraternity came to light during the trial. It was developed that for initiation into the Ha-mattsas the novice must go and live four or five weeks in the forest seeing no one and eating no food.

At the end of his banishment his "spirit" appears in the shape of some animal, which he at once kills and devours raw, whereby he is supposed to imbibe its courage and strength, which thereafter dwell in him. He returns from the forest adorned with a headdress of cedar bark, dyed red which is one of the emblems of the flesh-eating fraternity, and is worn by him during the progress of the initiation. He is met by a band of the secret brotherhood, who escort him to the village with much ceremony.

They are joined by an attendant bearing in his arms a dead body, which must be that of a young squaw. In ancient times she was sacrificed for the occasion.

Walking behind this body, the candidate is led into the dancing-house, which has been cleared for the ceremony.

The body is tied to a post and the unspeakable rite begins.

There were witnesses at the trial who swore that Hunt, the half-breed, had cut the body to pieces for distribution among the old members and the novice, and that all joined in devouring the flesh. Certain it is that the man from the woods, naked and half-starved after his vigil, played his part in the rite, while his associates spurred him on with dance and song.

And if they did not actually join him in the gruesome feast, they stimulated his zeal by making concerted, wolf-like rushes at the mangled body and pretending to fight over the flesh.

Nor did the candidate for Ha-mattsa honors escape with one night of horrors. Four times, as darkness fell, he was led into the dance-house and compelled to undergo the trial prescribed by Indian tradition. On the fourth night the corpse had been all devoured.

Then came another stage of the ceremony—the eating of living flesh. In this the uninitiated spectators were allowed to play a passive part. The Ha-mattsa ran hither and thither among them, biting with the ferocity of a wildcat and eating their flesh.

It was a point of pride with the victims to endure the onslaught with stoicism. Besides, the customs of the order prescribe gifts for those who allow themselves to be bitten. The first prize on this occasion was awarded to a boy who allowed a large mouthful to be detached from his forearm.

Having gaithfully performed all that was required of him, the candidate was pronounced by the elders a full-fledged Ha-mattsa.

It then devolved upon his proud family to give a great feast in his honor. Human flesh was not included in the repast, but the new Ha-mattsa exhibited his zeal by occasionally taking a bite out of his nearest neighbor's arm or shoulder, and these attentions were submitted to with great good humor.

Most important of all was the distribution by the young Ha-mattsa of blankets and other gifts to all the persons whom he had honored by biting.

Hard on Him.

Pater (reading)—The Indian nation is dying off at a rate that is amazingly rapid.

Bobbie (bursting into tears)—An' I'll not be big enough to go out West for a good many years yet—boo-hoo!

Springtime

Is the sweetest season in human life, as it is in Nature generally. It is the time of promise. As the young girl draws near to that mysterious line "Where womanhood and girlhood meet," her whole destiny is in a measure being determined. How often the sweet young girl, under the influence of the change, withers and droops like some blighted bud. Nature generally needs some little help at this critical period, and this help in its best form is contained in Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, and gives the vigor of perfect health to the womanly organs. It contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine, nor other narcotic.

Miss Emma Lee, of Williford, Sharp Co., Ark., writes: "I was suffering severely and tried several doctors' remedies, but received only very little relief; therefore, I feel it my duty to write and let other sufferers know what your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' have done for me. I took eight bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' six vials of the 'Pellets,' also one bottle of your 'Compound Extract of Smart-Weed.' As soon as I had taken the first bottle I could see that the medicine was helping me. I had disease of internal organs with bronchitis and catarrh. I also used the local treatment you suggested."

The sluggish liver can be cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

What a Whale Weighs.

Have you any idea of the size of the common Greeland Whale? Nilson, the zoologist, estimates the full-grown animal to average 100 tons, or 224,000 pounds. That is to say, a whale weighs as much as about eighty elephants or 400 bears. Of course some run larger than this. There are tales among old whalers of whales 110 feet long, and weighing at least 150 tons, but they are not seen in these days. A seventy-foot whale is a big one now. Still, it may give some idea of what monsters are occasionally killed when we mention that a ton of oil has been extracted from the tongue alone of a single whale.

A Well Trained Boy

Mr. Goodfather had brought up his son according to the good old model which teaches that children shall be seen and not heard, say "Yes, sir," and 'No, sir,' and respect their elders.

When Johnnie went to college he arranged with his father that on his arrival there, if he found everything satisfactory, he would telegraph "Yes." When the telegram arrived the busy father had forgotten what "Yes" referred to, so he wired back, "Yes, what?" and Johnnie answered, "Yes, sir."

The Athletic Girl.

The athletic girl is apt to be influential, to have power—and most of us like this—and when she expresses an opinion she is generally listened to with respect. A sound mind in a sound body is the superlative of attraction, and this a girl may and should possess. For most girls, as for many older women too, it is well to strive for the rounded life, the life of symmetry, the life which is not unduly developed in one direction at the expense of another.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Phonograph Will

A wealthy engineer recently talked his last will and testament into a phonograph. Then with a hot copper wire he signed his name on the wax roll of the phonograph, the witnesses doing likewise, and the "document" was thereupon completed.

THE RICHEST NATION

IF DIVIDED EQUALLY WHAT EACH ONE'S SHARE WOULD BE.

An American Family Would Own 155 Acres of Land and 13 1-2 Feet of Railroad—It Would Pay But $6.68 a Year in Taxation—Only 60 Cents for Our Navy.

If the Government of the United States be considered merely as a business firm, its stockholders just now are pretty well to do. Their wealth is very large, considering the number there are of them. The expenses of carrying on trade under the Stars and Stripes seems small when devided, and their debts are trifling indeed.

Not many years ago it was said that Uncle Sam had land enough to give every one a farm. In theory this is true to-day. If all Territories in the United States, not even including Alaska and our so-called new possessions, were to be divided, there would be a farm of thirty one acres for each one. Every man, woman and child in the country would own this much real estate.

Now, since the average American family consists of five people, there would be 155 acres to the family. In making these calculations the population is estimated at 70,000,000. The area of the United States is 3,000,000 square miles.

Not all of this land is good enough to "farm it" on, but most of it can be made good enough by Yankee ingenuity.

The value of all the real estate in America is $39,544,333,000. These figures fail to give any definite idea. They are too big. Let us suppose, however, that pure socialism prevailed and that this enormous wealth was equally divided. The share of every individual would be $564.50. The share of every average family would be $2,824.50. And this does not include personal property, which would greatly increase the sum. These figures are by far the highest to be found in any country in the world. In Great Britain, for instance, each man is a land owner owning to the extent of about $190. British house property would give a share of but about $300 to every man.

Practically, in Great Britain there are few small land-owners, or none. A laboring man who owns his cottage is a rarity; one who owns the land on which it stands almost an impossibility.

The taxes which the individual pays seem trifling. All the taxes last year were $471,365,140. The share of each individual was but $6.73. Britain's taxes during the same period amounted to £2 10s. each, or nearly twice that of America. It must also be considered that our rate was unusually high owing to the expenses of the war. A good deal of complaint is heard of the extravagance of the Government, but the share of the individual is small. The total expenses of the Government last year if divided would have placed a burden of $6.68 on the individual. This is a share of the sum of $487,383,000.

The individual contributions to the various departments also sound curious in view of the great things which have been accomplished. We are all proud of our navy, which during the past year has been larger and more expensive than ever before. But each individual was only required to contribute just sixty cents to maintain this department and our great fleets of warships. The total expense, to be sure, was $48,099,000. The maintenance of the army last year was one of the most expensive items the Government has ever called upon to meet. It cost us just $80,000,000. The war with the Philippines and the maintenance of an army in Cuba and Porto Rico, besides the regular expense of the department, could be met, however, if each individual contributed $1.14. The expense of running the entire Government cost each of us exactly $1.92.

The United States, as every one knows, is the richest nation in the world. Our bonded debt is $1,032,000,000. Each of us is in debt on this score just $14.74. Looked at in this way our national debt, large as it seems, is a trifling thing. The real estate holdings of the individual, according to this distribution, are alone worth more than forty times his indebtedness. It is no wonder that the world considers loaning money to America a good risk.

Our country is the land of railroads. As every one knows we have more railroads by far than any other country in the world. The mileage of the United States is 190,000. The share of the individual is 13½ feet of rail. Still another way to state our great wealth is to calculate the amount of gold and silver which would come to us if all were equally divided. Each of us would have $70 in silver bullion as his share and $18.50 in solid gold.

A Story From Gibraltar.

During the war stories in plenty have been current of the strategems and treachery which have imposed upon British officers charged with very serious responsibilities. Changing the venue, we have the following story from Gibraltar. Some time ago a consumptive German gentleman arrived there with introductions from influential people in England. The governor and other officials received him hospitably and every consideration possible was shown him on account of his health, but, of course, he could not be granted permission, as he requested, to go to the top of the rock for the sake of the purer air, as there is a regulation that "foreigners" are on no account to be permitted to walk about the top of the rock." Further acquaintance, however, with the German gentleman, through the medium of dinners and other social functions, resulted in a relaxation of the strict rule, and he was granted a pass. The result of the visit is now to be seen at the German war office, which is in possession of the most perfect plans from photos of all the works and defenses of Gibraltar.—Saturday Review.

AMERICAN NERVE

TWO AMERICANS BLUFF THEIR WAY INTO THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

Dr. Frederick L. Forker and Ralph D. Smith Witness the Workings of the Most Dignified and August Body in the World.

It is believed that the first Americans who ever succeeded in bluffing their way into the House of Lords are Dr. Frederick L. Forker and Ralph D. Smith of Binghamton, who has just returned from a European trip. The tourists visited the vacant chambers in Parliament Building when they first went to Europe two months ago, but at that time neither House was in session. When they returned to London week before last and learned that both Houses were in session they determined to try to witness the working of the most dignified and august body in the world, the House of Lords.

Inquiring at their hotel they learned that no tickets are issued for admittance to that House, in fact that there are no admittances, except to friends, who are taken in by members. They learned that the American Embassy has two tickets each day for admission to the House of Commons, and that it is also much easier to get admitted to that body through some member.

They visited the Embassy, but learned that all tickets were spoken for weeks in advance. The attaches of the Embassy could suggest no way in which they could secure admittance unless they knew some member. After a day's unsuccessful effort to place a Member of Parliament on their acquaintance list, they visited the Cunard agent who had shown them courtesies when they first landed. He could suggest nothing, until he remembered that he knew a member of the lower house. He promised to see what he could do for the tourists.

That night he came to their hotel bringing them two tickets from his Member acquaintance which would admit them to the House of Commons When they suggested their desire to visit the House of Lords to several Englishmen, the Britishers simply gaped in wonder at the men whose nerve would prompt them to think of such a thing.

On July 19 the tourists were admitted to the gallery of the House of Commons, where they listened for some time to the weighty discussion on the advisability of permitting the Irish language to be taught in the schools of Ireland. This debate soon became too tame for the Americans, and they left the House in quest of larger game.

They started down the long hall leading to the assembly chamber of the upper house. Soon they were stopped by the uplifted hand of a guard. "S-s-t. You mustn't come here. The House of Lords is in session."

The Americans were not to be stopped by such trifles. They engaged the guard in conversation, and soon they had secured his graces. Then they explained the situation and asked him to help them get into the House.

"Don't you know some Lord?" inquired the good-natured fellow.

The Americans admitted that they had no lords on their calling list. The guard scratched his head in perplexity. Finally he suggested:

"Well, I'll tell you. Just hide a bit, han' per'aps some lord will come out."

The tourists "bided several bits," but none came. More scratching of his head brought another idea to the guard, who suggested:

"Now, don't tell no one that I told you, but go down to the door there and inquire for Lord Aberdeen, and see if you can make it."

The Americans believed that this was good advice, as it put them one guard nearer the goal. They presented themselves to the stiff officials, who stood at the outer door of the House, and Mr. Smith said:

"We would like to see Lord Aberdeen."

"The guards were inclined to argue the question, but the Americans stood their ground, emphasized their demands, and convinced the guards that they were important dignitaries. Their cards were carried in to the former Governer-General of Canada.

"Does His Lordship expect you?" inquired one of the guards.

"I don't know as he expects us today," replied Mr. Smith.

But the waiting time, my brothers, was the hardest time of all," explains Dr. Forker, in describing the incident. While we stood debating what we should do next, the guard loudly announced: 'Lord Aberdeen.' Turning, we saw behind us a pleasant looking, but very dignified, well-dressed man of middle age, and then we knew we had got to see the game to the end.

Putting on his best brand of bluff Mr. Smith stepped up to his Lordship and began;

"Mr. Aberdeen, we owe you an apology, but we wish to get into the House of Lords, and we were referred to you to take us in."

"Mr" Aberdeen was too much surprised to speak at first, so the young attorney explained:

"We have just come from the House of Commons."

"How did you get into the House of Commons?" inquired Lord Aberdeen.

"On tickets from a member."

"What member?"

"Why it was—ah—it was—what member was it, Doc?"

"I never thought to look at the ticket," said the physician,

"Well really, Mr. Aberdeen, we've forgottn the member's name," explained Mr. Smith.

A very wise adventure, gentlemen," suggested his Lordship with a trace of sarcasm. But his twinkling eyes showed that he appreciated the humor of the situation. "Come with me," and he led the way through the anterooms, opening into the assembly chamber.

Paid His "Young Marster's" Fine.

A little incident at the police station recently attracted comment from various sources on account of the realistic romance it embodied. An old negro walked into the office and asked in a mild and respectful manner if his "young master," M. C. Goin, was there. He was told that Goin had been fined $2 for being drunk and was on the rock pile. He applied to Mr. Dye, keeper of the rock pile, and had a talk with Goin. The latter was very drunk when arrested and the Recorder fined him $2. He hails from Corinth.

"How much?" asked the old negro, "will you let him out for?"

Mr. Dye replied that $1.75 would purchase his liberty. The old man pulled out a tobacco sack and unloosening the strings got out $2. The young man was released. Being asked why he was interested in the young man the old man said:

"I belonged to his father endurin' the war, and no better man ever lived. When I hear 'em say young marster was in de rock pile I jes' cum up heah ter see him. I'd give my last cent 'foh he shud stay in de prison."

The young man and the old ex-slave walked away together.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

The Health Problem

Is much simpler than is sometimes supposed. Health depends chiefly upon perfect digestion and pure blood, and the problem is solved very readily by Hood's Sarsaparilla. You may keep well by taking it promptly for any stomach or blood disorder. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, catarrh, dyspepsia, rheumatism and other diseases are numbered by the thousands.

The favorite family cathartic is Hood's Pills.

The Reason.

People wonder why it is that the Times Bookstore sells school supplies so cheap The reason is it manufactures its own supplies, and has no middle-man's profits to pay. Nor is this all. Other places where school supplies are sold, have to live out of their profits. With the Times it is different: we have a large printing and book-manufacturing business, and can therefore afford to take a narrow profit on school books as well as on all other lines.

This claim occupies an imposing position on a mountain just north of the city; and last, but by no means least, the [illegible], located two miles east of Salida at Cleora station, on the main trunk line of the great Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, also on the Arkansas river, which in length is one of America's greatest streams.

Wedding Bells.

A very interesting event took place at the residence of Mr. Thos. Edgar, Smith, on Thursday afternoon, when his eldest daughter, Miss Lillie, was united in marriage to Mr. W. J. Stubbs, of the Bell Telephone Company, Brantford, formerly of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed under a beautiful arch of evergreens on the lawn, by Rev. Mr. Wilson of George Street Methodist Church, in the presence of a large party of relatives and invited guests. The bride was handsomely attired in white organdy trimmed with lace insertion and ribbons and carried a boquet of carnations. She was assisted by her sister, Miss May, who wore a similar costume and carried a boquet of pink carnations. There were two maids of honor, Miss Maud Lindsay and Miss Lloyd Sunderson, cousin of the bride, who were attired respectively in pink and pale green silk and carried a basket of flowers each. Mr. J. M. McLeod acted in the capacity of best man. After the ceremony the wedding party and their friends sat down to a sumptuous de juner, and later in the afternoon the newly-married couple left for Toronto, Hamilton and other points, after which they will take up their residence in Brantford. The numerous, costly and useful presents received by the bride and groom testify to the high esteem in which they are held by a host of friends. The Times extends hearty congratulations.

Special Meetings.

The Peterboro branch of the Salvation army are to have special meetings all day Sunday, Sept. 23rd. Brigadier J. S. Pugmire, of Montreal is visiting on that date, and will give his famous lecture "Sixty Thousand Miles by Land and Sea," at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. This lecture touches on the pathetic as well as the humorous incidents met with during travel, and is a treat seldom equalled. Everyone is invited. The Brigadier will also conduct meetings at 11 a.m., and 7 p.m. Come.

THE CENTRAL FAIR IS NOW CLOSED.

The Largest Crowd in the Society's History.

THE WILD WEST ATTRACTS

But the Exhibition is on the Decline —Entries Under Former Years.

The Peterborough Central Exhibition has been a success so far as attendance is concerned, but in other respects it cannot be regarded otherwise than a flat failure. The exhibits were not nearly so numerous as on former years, in any one department. The crowd would also have been scarce but for the happy hit made in securing the "circus" feature of the fair. Other "attractions" failed to attract while the circus was under swing.

Yesterday the rain interfered with the attendance, although the enormous crowd on Wednesday assured the financial success of the exhibition.

THE BABY SHOW.

The baby show on Wednesday was a feature that caused some interest. As mentioned in our issue of yesterday, the baby belonging to Mr. and Mrs. George Stevens, Ashburnham, carried of the prize against 12 competitors. The prize was $25, a ten dollar suit for the father, a ten dollar cashmere dress for the mother and a five dollar gold piece for the baby.

—On Tuesday night burglars entered the office of George Ingles' factory at Lindsay and made an unsuccessful attempt to bore the safe.

—The farmers of Ontario are rejoicing over an abundant crop of wheat, oats, peas and barley this year. Forty-five bushels of wheat to the acre is a common report.

—Lepante vs. Clanty was a police court case this morning in which defendant was charged with destruction of property, in that he marked a window in plaintiff's building. The case was dismissed.

—Members of the Y. M. C. A. are requested to notify the secretary at once as to their contribution of refreshments for the "At Home" on Tuesday evening next, Sept. 25th. They are also asked to make the "At Home" as widely known as possible among the young men of the town, to whom a cordial invitation is extended.

—Florence Colby, alias Alice Brown, of Peterborough, appeared in Toronto Police Court, charged with child desertion, and was dismissed. The evidence adduced by the Crown was that of a woman, McGahn, who testified that she and the Colby woman left the latter's child in Stanley park in June last. The magistrate refused to convict upon the evidence.

—Lindsay Post.—A proposed radial system of electric railway from Toronto to, Rice Lake, Beaverton, Beeton, Shelburne, Fergus, Guelph, Brantford, Hamilton and Brantford is being talked by Toronto city Council, and it is proposed to have the scheme discussed in the 72 townships interested. There's no reason by the system shouldn't be built—if the department store men will foot the bill. They certainly would derive the greatest benefit.

48 per Cent. Dividend.

Is it right or wrong for any person or any number of persons, to exact 50 per cent interest on money lent or invested? asks the Bobcaygeon Independent. There are a few who say it is wrong. The Standard Oil Company have just declared a quarterly dividend of $8,000,000 making $32,000,000 for the year. This is at the rate of 48 per cent on the company's capitalized stock. Those persons who say it is wrong to take 50 per cent interest, say also that it is wrong for any person to exact money from others until that money is earned. The Company that makes 48 per cent interest out of oil that belongs to the whole body of the people might very properly have its holdings confiscated to the State.

Something of a Hint.

"Stolen kisses are the sweetest," he said.

"How I dislike a man who doesn't practise what he preaches," she returned.

Occasionally a man has to be jarred before he realizes what is going on.

When Women Voted for President.

Women voted in New Jersey in the Presidential election of 1804, when Thomas Jefferson was re-elected for a second term. In 1892 the women of the new State of Wyoming participated in a Presidential election which resulted in the choice of Grover Cleveland, who was the first President since Jefferson to be elected by the aid of women's vote.—The Forum.

Lions Not "Domestic Animals."

Justices Cave and Wright, London, recently dismissed an appeal against the magisterial decision in the case of the Aquarian lions. The keeper of these lions was prosecuted for cruelly beating them, but the Westminster magistrate dismissed the case on the ground that the lions were not domestic animals. The court upheld this view and dismissed the appeal.

New Use for Women.

Yet another occupation has been found for women—that of acting as barometers. Weather Prophet Dunn is quoted as saying that one of the ways of telling whether the temperature was rising was to watch a girl's front hair. When it began to lose its curl and grow straight, it would be a sure sign of a change of temperature.

ANNOUNCEMENT

To the People of Peterborough and vicinity:

Saturday, September 15th, China Hall was re-opened with a stock which for quality, completeness and variety is unsurpassed in Canada.

During the last six months we have been collecting these goods from every quarter of the globe, and the result will make of China Hall a veritable art gallery.

Added to a full line of staple and domestic wares, we show direct importatians from Egypt, Japan, Austria, France, Germany, Spain, Bohemia, England, America, and last, but not least, from Canada.

This collection comprises the newest styles in Dinner and Tea, Toilet and Salad Sets, Lamps, Cutlery, Silverware, Flower Pots, Cut Glass and Bric-a-bac, including specimens of such reliable wares as Habiland, Doulton, Ridgeway, Wedgewood and Farnival, Royal Bonn, Carlsbad, Satsenna, Awata, Lenura, Yokohama, Terra Cotta, Hand-engraven Egyptian and Cloisonnee.

Several of these lines are now placed on sale for the first time in Peterborough, and a few of them for the first time in Canada. Amongst these unique pieces may be seen (with a printed guarantee enclosed) a facsimile of the celebrated Portland vase which made Josiah Wedgewood famous.

China Hall in its present form is a model of convenience and beauty, and it has now every facility for the carrying on of an up-to-date trade. A prompt and courteous service may be relied upon, while a cordial welcome is assured to all visitors whether purchasers or not.

For the convenience of customers a cosy waiting room is provided, which we trust may be appreciated to the extent of being used and of becoming a rendezvous for ladies who wish to meet down town.

The accomplishment of all this has been no small task, and it is hoped that the public will take pride in this new store which, without exception, is the handsomest of its kind in Canada.

A few words as to our future policy. The business will be conducted upon a cash basis, with one price to all and positively no reduction from the marked figures, which will be as low as is compatible with the character of the goods, our aim being that customers should remember the quality after the price has been forgotten. No article will be represented as being better than it really is. Special attention given to matching and mending.

Thanking our numerous customers for their many expressions of goodwill, and for their adherence to us while in cramped quarters, we shall now take pleasure in welcoming them to our commodious and artistic premises at 360 George-st.
